BENGAL

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.

Extract from a Despatch from Captain Sir H. Le Fleming, Senhouse, K. C. H. &c. to Commodore Sir J. J. Gordon Bremer, C. B. and K. C. H., Commander in Chief, &c. &c. Dated: Heights above Canton, May 20th 1841, continued on board H. M. Ship Blenheim, French River, June 2d, 1841.

I closed my former letter with the details, of our proceedings up to the moment the Expedition was about to leave Hongkong for Canton. I have now the gratification to enter upon the details of a succession of operations, highly honorable I trust to Her Majesty's Arms, and by which the large and populous City of Canton has been laid in complete submission at the feet of the Queen's Forces.

No overt act of hostility had taken place up to the 21st May, except remounting the guns in the Shamien battery, but the Chinese appear to have been perfectly ready for attack. All remained quiet in the river until about 11 o'clock P. M., when an attempt was made with fire rafts to burn the advanced vessels. This attack not only totally failed but was followed up by a gallant attack on the Shamien battery, and the silencing of it by the vessels of the squadron, under the immediate superintendence of Captain Herbert of the "Calloppe," and the destruction of a large flotilla of fire vessels, which the Chinese had been preparing and had brought out of the branches of the river which leads north of the town. About the same time, though later in the night, the "Alligator" was attacked off Howqua's Fort; and to show how necessary it was to have been always on our guard, the fire junks came up with the flood tide in a direction with the merchant vessels at Whampoa, where all seemed to sleep in security. Captain Kuper's account of his prompt and decisive conduct in repelling the attack, I have also the honor to forward.

Opinions were uncertain as to the feasibility of entering the northward branch of the river, and of floating at low water. To determine this I availed myself once more of the zeal and great ability of Commander Belcher, who most handsomely volunteered to explore it with his own boats, assisted with 3 others from the "Pylade," and "Moderate," and "Algerine," all placed under the command of that gallant and judicious Officer Lieutenant Goldsmith of the "Druid," who was attached to the "Blenheim," in that Ship's launch, and who had orders to protect Commander Belcher in his surveying operations.

The Major General and myself went to Canton to make a reconnaissance and a personal inspection on the same day, the 23d. In our progress we observed a firing and explosions in the direction of Captain Belcher's party; and Commander Belcher's letter a copy of No. 2, which I enclose, gives the detail of a gallant and spirited affair which took place in the creek. At 11 at night, Commander Belcher returned with the gratifying intelligence that he had discovered an excellent landing place on a pier, with water enough for the "Sulphur" close to that low water. The ground directly around it rose in low hills, and a line of hills appeared to continue to the height near the city, although there might be swampy ground in the small valleys dividing them.

Our united force consisted of the Ships and Vessels named in the margin, comprising in their Crews, Officers, Seamen and Marines inclusive about 3200 men, out of which about 1,000 Officers, Seamen and Marines were landed to serve with the Army. The Military force under that gallant, distinguished, and experienced Officer Major General Sir Hugh Gough, comprised Her Majesty's 49th Regiment, 311 in number, — 37th Madras Natives Infantry 240, Bengal Volunteers 79, Royal Artillery 38, Madras Artillery 232, Sappers and Miners 171, Her Majesty's 18th Royal Irish 333, and Her Majesty's 26th Cameronians 317, making about 2223.

Captain Herbert was stationed at Whampoa with the Calloppe, Conway, Herald and Alligator, and was directed on the 24th to take the command of the force, afforded by the four vessels, under his orders, and pushing up with the flood-tide with such vessels as could proceed, or with the boats of the ships endeavour to take possession of and secure the Arsenal. I informed him that the ships near the Factory would drop down and secure the Dutch Fort, and to keep up an enfilading fire on the face of the works thrown up in front of the city where I understood many guns were mounted. I left it to his own judgment to act according to circumstances, in endeavouring to drive the enemy from the French Fort and to endeavour to open the communications with the Ships of War to the Westward and with the Commanding Officer of the left column stationed at the Factories.

No. 3. I beg to enclose a letter I have received from Captain Herbert, detailing the part he took in the affair that followed, where the usual gallantry and zeal were displayed by Her Majesty's Seamen and Royal Marines. Commander Warren, with his Gig's crew, placing his colours first on the walls of the French Fort, and to endeavour to open the communications with the Ships of War to the Westward and with the Commanding Officer of the left column stationed at the Factories.

No. 4. In copy of his letter, where I regret to observe the loss of men was more than had been ordinary. A return of the killed and wounded is here added, No. 5. and although it may appear strange to see the wounded of the Army in the Naval report, yet the two Corps had been so entirely mingled together, their services so blended, and such intimate harmony had existed, that it would be difficult to make any separation between the acts of either or the circumstances that concerned them. The two officers who had fallen, Major Becher of the Indian Army, Deputy Quarter Master General, a very old Officer who had served ably in the Burmese War, and Lieutenant Fox, first of the Nimrod, have united the regret of all by their characters and services. The same shot took off the legs of Lieutenant Fox and of Mr. Kendal his shipmate, the Gunner Mate of the Nimrod, the former fell a victim to his wound, the latter has survived amputation. I thought it would gratify Mr. Kendal to give him an acting Commission as Lieut. of the Nimrod in Lt. Fox's vacancy, on the field of battle until your pleasure is known—though his wound will disable him from doing his duty perhaps for some time, and may oblige him to go home.

The landing of the left column was placed under his particular charge, and it was not to land until he had made the signal.

So effectually and vigorously did commander Warren execute these instructions, that when the right column passed his station, every thing had been completed and all was still, the detail of this gallant affair is annexed.

No. 4. In copy of his letter, where I regret to observe the loss of men was more than had been ordinary.

A return of the killed and wounded is here added, No. 5. and although it may appear strange to see the wounded of the Army in the Naval report, yet the two Corps had been so entirely mingled together, their services so blended, and such intimate harmony had existed, that it would be difficult to make any separation between the acts of either or the circumstances that concerned them. I have the honor to enclose lists of the Officers who have been engaged in the operations on shore and afloat in boats but it must be remarked that the duties and the fatigues of commander Pritchard of the Blenheim and of those who remained on board their respective ships, were increased in the same ratio as their numbers were diminished, and that the ultimate success in the attainment of the whole body, each working in his particular sphere. The names of many will be seen who have already distinguished themselves at Chuenpee, Amoy, Whampoa, and the many affairs in the Canton River, and no doubt have already, like their brother officers at Arrer, been so fortunate as to secure their country's notice. Never was there a superior set of zealous able Commanders. Commanders Belcher and Warren have only continued in that path of able and judicious service on which they have so long travelled—their own services will always attract attention,—of the Lieutenants, Lt. Joseph Pearce, Lt. Goldsmith, Lt. Watson, Sir Frederick Nicholson, Lt. Morhead, first of their respective vessels; may, perhaps, be named without injury to all others who well played their parts,—to Lt. Kellert, of the "Starling," I am much obliged; and Lt. Mason, of the "Algerine," has won his promotion by a long series of gallant and brave services. I beg to acknowledge the zeal and the assistance I have had from every Captain and Officer of the Squadron whom I have had the happiness to command.

To Captain T. HERBERT,

Commanding the advanced Squadron.

Her Majesty's Ship Alligator, off Howqua's Folly, May 22d, 1841.

SIR,—I have the honor to acquaint you that last night, shortly after 12 o'clock an attack was made by the Chinese upon Her Majesty's Ship Alligator, under my command, by fire rafts.

They were chained in pairs, and brought down in a direct line for the ships on a flood tide: owing to the confined position I was in, and the sunken junks and line of stakes astern, I could not slip, but by steering the ship, and the activity of Lt. Stewart, first of this Ship, and Messrs Woolcombe and Baker, Mates, in command of the boats, they were towed clear, although they passed within ten yards of the bows: as I had reason to believe that a considerable force was assembled in the vicinity, to take advantage of any accident that might occur, I fired several shots on both sides to clear the banks. No damage has been sustained.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

Capt. Sir H. LE FLEMING SENHOUSE, Kt., R. C. H.
Senior Officer, &c., &c., &c.

Off Canton, May 23d, 1841.

SIR,—In pursuance of your directions I proceeded up the creek on the Western side of Canton in order to examine the nature of the country, our force consisting of the Druid's Launch, Lieutenant Goldsmith (1st Lieut. of the ship) Sulphur's pinnace, and two cutters, Modeste, Pylades, and Algerine's cutters, Starling's cutter, and my gig, the two first-named boats carrying guns.

On approaching Neisbang, where the boats of the Squadron were yesterday engaged, I observed the "fast boats" of the enemy collected in great numbers, part retreated by a creek to the left, but shortly after returned and manifested a disposition to impede our progress, by firing guns, and drawing up across the creek. Our advance, and notice of our determination by a round from each of the boats carrying guns, put them to flight, and in a very short period 13 fast boats, 5 War Junks and small craft collected, amounting to 28 in all, were in flames. Fire rafts were in readiness, on the banks of the creek, but too well secured by chains, and therefore beyond our ability to destroy during our short stay.

The whole force behaved with their usual gallantry, and the Commander of the Division under my direction (Lieutenant Goldsmith) afforded me that steady determined support, which so particularly distinguishes him, and which caused me to ask you for his co-operation.

The enemy, being posted in force on a hill above us, prevented me, in obedience to your orders, from exposing my small party by an attempt to dislodge them. But I fully succeeded in effecting my reconnoitre by being hoisted to the mast head of the largest junk from whence I was able to survey the whole surrounding country.

From that examination I am happy to acquaint you that the advance to the batteries situated on the hills North of Canton is apparently easy, and I have every reason to believe that our Artillery will not meet with any extraordinary difficulty.

On my return I landed at the Mandarin temple at Tsingpo, where I found sand bags and 3 small guns which were spiked and thrown into the sea. This temple, with other large commodious buildings, will afford ample quarters for the troops which may first be landed.

No casualties whatever occurred. I brought out with me one large fast boat of 60 oars, the boat from which the Mandarin escaped; and in pursuance of your separate orders collected vessels for the conveyance of 2000 soldiers.

I have the honor to enclose a list of boats and officers engaged, and am Sir.

Your most obedient Servant,
(Signed) ED. BELCHER, Commander.

No. 3.
To Capt. Sir H. LE FLEMING SENHOUSE, Kt., R. C. H.
&c. &c. &c. CANTON RIVER.

SIR,—I received your orders of the 24th instant, a little before noon on that day, and immediately proceeded with the Boats and Marines of Calliope and Conway to the Alligator off Howqua's Port, making the signal to Herald to close and send her boats.

I ordered captain Kuper to move the Alligator up the right bank of the river past Napier's Fort, where he anchored her in her own draught, and the boats were pushed up as far as possible without exposing them to the enemy's fire. A little before sunset I observed the Algerine moving down past the Dutch Fort, and she shortly anchored and engaged a battery on the Canton side which she silenced. Anxious to co-operate with her I went ahead with captain Bethune to reconnoitre, but was stopped by a shot through my boat from the French Fort.

I remained under cover of the Point until dark, when I sent captain Bethune with a division of boats to support her, and a concerted signal having been made, I joined her with the whole force at 2 A. M.

The arsenal being secured, I reconnoitred the line of defence, and perceived that it could not be attacked with advantage without having heavier guns in position than those of the Algerine. I therefore lost no time in ordering the other sloops down, and at the same time put myself in communication with Major Pratt, commanding H. M. 20th in the Factory.

Finding that the Modeste was the only vessel likely to be got across the bar, and there appearing even some doubt of our accomplishing the passage, I fitted shell guns in three of the captured War Junks.

Captain Eyres having succeeded by great exertion in getting his vessel over the bar, this morning moved her, Algerine, and the Gun Junks on the French Fort, the enemy deserted the upper defence, and about 9 A. M. opened the fire from the Fort, which was speedily silenced; I then cleared the Beach by a few well directed broadsides, and made the signal to advance. Captain Bethune immediately landed on shore with the storming party and the Fort was carried in the most gallant style; the whole line of defence extended about 2 miles from the Factory, which with the exception of the French Fort, had been lately constructed in the strongest manner, has been destroyed, and communication is opened with the ships of Napier's Fort. The guns destroyed are 64 in number, including four 10½ inch calibre—the Dutch Fort was not armed.

To that excellent and able officer captain Bethune, I feel particularly indebted, and my best thanks are also due to commanders Warren and Gifford, who assisted in the attack. This is the 6th time I have had occasion to mention the gallant conduct of commanders Eyres; Lieutenant Mason, commanding the Algerine, acquitted himself entirely to my satisfaction, and both captain Eyres and himself speak in the highest terms of the assistance they received from Lieutenant Shute, and Mr. Dolling, Mate, their seconds in command, and all the other officers and men.

Lieutenants Haskell and Hay, Senior of Cruiser and Pylades, directed the guns in the Junk with the greatest ability—captain Bethune speaks in the highest terms of Lieutenants Watson, Beadon, Coryton, Collinson, Morhead, Hayes, Hamilton, and Mr. Brown, Master, as also Lieutenant Hayes of the Bombay Marines, and of all the other officers and men employed more immediately under his orders, a list of whom is annexed. The party of Marines was commanded by Lieutenant Urquhart, assisted by Lieutenant Marriott, Lieutenant Somerville, Agent of Transports, aided with some boats of the Transports, Lieutenant Gabbett, of the Madras Artillery, threw shells with great effect from one of the Junks, and Major Pratt offered in the handsomest manner to co-operate in the attack. If required.

No. 4.

TO CAPTAIN SIR HUMPHRY LE FLEMING SENHOUSE, Kt. R. C. H.
&c. &c. &c.
Senior Officer in the China Sea.
Her Majesty's Sloop Hyacinth, off Canton, May 24th, 1841.

SIR,—I have the honor to acquaint you that immediately on the receipt of your letter of the 24th instant, I weighed with the advanced Squadron and ordered Her Majesty's Sloop "Nimrod" to attack the Samien Fort on the West end of the suburbs, supported by Her Majesty's Sloop "Pylades." Her Majesty's Sloop under my command being placed abreast of the English Factory to silence and dislodge any troops that might be there, and also with a view of covering the landing of Her Majesty's 26th Regiment. Her Majesty's Sloop "Modeste," "Cruiser," and "Columbine" taking up a position to attack the Dutch folly Fort, and to enfilade the line of batteries, lately thrown up in front of the city to the Eastward of that Fort. On the ships taking up their position three fire vessels were sent adrift, and although the tide was running very strong by timely despatch of boats they were enabled to clear the ships and tow them on shore and set fire to the suburbs.

In the performance of this service they opened their fire on the boats and shipping. In half an hour the enemy were completely silenced to the Eastward of the Dutch folly Fort. After reconnoitring the Factory and finding it quite deserted, I immediately ordered the preconcerted signal for Her Majesty's Brig "Algerine" and "Albatross" to approach with Her Majesty's 26th Regiment, when they landed and took possession of the Factory without the slightest casualty. This service being completed, I ordered Lieut. Mison, commanding Her Majesty's Brig Algerine, to proceed to attack a fort to the Eastward, which I feel much pleasure in reporting to you was done in a particularly spirited and gallant style by that officer, but perceiving the firing to be so heavy from the Forts, I ordered the Boats of Her Majesty's Ships to her support. Her Majesty's Sloop "Hyacinth" under Lieutenant Stewart, and Mr. Peter Barclay Mate; "Modeste's," Mr. Fitzgerald Mate; "Cruiser," Lieut. Haskell, and Mr. Thomas J. Darke, Mate; "Pyriade's," Lieutenant Hay, and "Columbine's," Lieutenants Hamilton, Helpman and Mr. Miller, Mate. It is gratifying to me to inform you, by half-past seven the Fort of eleven guns were silenced and the guns spiked, under a heavy fire of Gingalls and Musketry from houses, at the same time I regret to add, it was not done without considerable loss. It would be impossible to particularize upon an occasion where every officer and man engaged against an enemy defending themselves with much vigour at all points, but in addition to my best thanks and acknowledgements to Commanders Barlow, Eyres, Giffard, Anson and Clarke, and Lieut. Mason, I hope you will give me leave to recommend to your particular notice my own 1st Lieutenant W. H. Morshead, who was wounded in the hand in a personal engagement with a Mandarin. Lieut. Mason of the "Algerine" speaks in the highest terms of the conduct of Mr. Dolling, Mate, and Mr. Higgs, second Master of that vessel. I cannot conclude without expressions of my approbation of the steadiness of Commander Rogers, of the India Navy, in conducting the Atalanta to her station.

I beg leave to attach a statement of the killed and wounded, and damage sustained by the ships engaged.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) WM. WARREN, Commander.

From the Hongkong Gazette of 30th Sept.

The annexed reply to a letter of enquiry from Messrs. Dent & Co. is now published for general information.

Gentlemen, Macao, August 16th, 1841.

In reply to your letter of this date I beg to inform you that the nature and extent of the protection to be afforded to British Shipping at this anchorage, is a question that I intend to bring under the special consideration of H. E. the Naval Commander in chief, and that you and all others concerned, will be duly apprized of whatever arrangement may be determined on.

With respect to British Subjects and property on shore at Macao, I must distinctly state, that I can offer you no assurance, though it is more than probable that the same arrangement which shall be made for the shipping will also be to a certain degree available for them.

In answer to your 2d and 3d queries, I can only refer you to my Notification of the 23d instant, in which I have intimated that all points connected with the Island of Hongkong are to depend on Her Majesty's pleasure, and that the terms of the Public Notice issued by H. M.'s late Plenipotentiary on the 10th of June last, will be provided for, until I am honored with instructions from H. M.'s Government, or the course of events shall call for a change.

Your most obedient humble servant,

(Signed) HENRY POTTINGER.

CANTON PRESS.
Macao, 2nd Oct. 1841.

This week has been altogether devoid of occurrences of general interest if we except the reappearance of the Hongkong Gazette, the 7th number of which, after a long interval made its appearance yesterday. That paper continues to be printed and published at Macao, and the number now before us is chiefly filled with official documents that have already appeared in August last in an Extra Hongkong Gazette, and with some others already published by us. The Parkfield from Bombay with the overland July mail still keeps out. Her long passage is probably owing to the strong northerly wind which, without intermission, has been blowing here during the last week. Of the movements of the fleet we have only learnt that on the 11th of last month it was seen by the Harriet in 27. 30 North latitude; about two and a half degrees south of Chusan. The Harriet had southerly winds for two days after she fell in with the fleet, which may therefore probably have arrived in the Chusan archipelago on the 13th or 14th.

By an arrival from the coast yesterday accounts from Amoy to the 23d September have been received. Everything continued quiet there and the inhabitants were returning to the City. Beef, vegetables, and other provisions were plentiful, and under the judicious and able management of Capt. Smith, we doubt not that everything will be done to conciliate the people, and restore order in the place.

The annual meeting of the members of the Morrison Education Society was held on Wednesday last the 29th Sept., at the residence of Mr. Brown. We intend giving next week a detailed account of the proceedings at the meeting, as well as an abstract of the report read at the meeting of the Society's labours during the last three years.

The passage schooner Maria left this bound for Whampoa about a fortnight since, and during a dark night the Tindal from carelessness mistook his way, and the tide being very high at the time, the vessel got on shore, and at daylight was found to be high and dry on or near the Island of Chuenpee, and at such distance from the river that it was found impossible to get her afloat again. Soon after a great number of Chinese were seen to come down to the boat, but for a while were prevented from coming on board by the threats of her crew. The Chinese asked whether there was any Opium on board, accusing them of having come there with intention of smuggling. To disprove the charge an old man was allowed to come on board, and to search the vessel: finding that she had no cargo of any sort, the old man returned to his companions, who however did not appear to be satisfied with his report, and very soon after began at attack on the boat. Their numbers overpowered all the resistance the crew, consisting of 14 lascars and one Parsee passenger, could make; they got possession of the boat, wounding and illtreating those they found on board. The Parsee was wounded in four or five places; a tindal of another boat who happened to be on board was very badly wounded, as were also many of the crew. The parsee passenger prevailed on a Chinese boatman to take him to Whampoa, where he arrived, as did also afterwards seven of the crew, but nothing has been heard of the remaining seven, and it is much feared that they have been murdered. We were in hopes that something would be done to avenge this wanton outrage, with the particulars of which the British authorities at Hongkong have of course been made fully acquainted; but beyond taking the depositions of the sufferers, we are not aware that any measures have yet been taken for the punishment of the Chinese: The valuable boat is by this time of course destroyed by the Chinese, and we much fear that if such crimes are allowed to be perpetrated, without punishing the offenders, shipwrecked people will in future stand but little chance of even their lives. The means for punishment are at hand, and we see no good reason for not inflicting it.

Yesterday morning the body of a Chinese was found suspended to a tree on the hill below the Profesa. A deep wound had been inflicted on the throat and another on the back of the head. The Chinese authorities were waited for in vain all yesterday, to hold an inquest on the body, which consequently still remains undisturbed where first it was discovered. The manner in which this unfortunate man came by his death is differently related, or rather surmised, but from the nature of the wounds on the head and throat, suicide seems improbable, as they would to all appearance not have allowed the man strength enough to hang himself to a tree after their infliction.

We are sorry to hear very bad accounts of the healthiness of the new settlement at Hongkong. Such is the sickness prevailing amongst the troops there that the Commanding Officer has ordered them all on board the Transports, hoping thereby to escape the influence of the malaria.

According to accounts from Canton, the Chinese continue repairing the fortifications near the river. Canton itself is for the present undisturbed, but business continues in a very unsatisfactory state, and the uncertain duration of the present quiet permits neutrals only to carry on their trade without apprehension.

CAUTION.—A few days since one of the many cows which are generally driven to the Franciscan Green of an evening, attacked several people, and knocked down a gentleman, wounding him very severely, on the Praya Grande. Surely, the owners of such cows ought to see to it that they be properly taken care of, so as not to endanger the limbs or even lives of people. A great many children are sent out to enjoy the fresh evening air, and unless the cattle is properly guarded, they may run great risk. Just before and after the accident above related we saw several families of children pass the very spot where the gentleman had been knocked down.

LONDON MARKET, JUNE 30.

From the July Overland Mail.

COTTON.—The transaction in Cotton this month by private Contract have been very moderate, and until within the last week prices have had a tendency to still further decline; but the demand for Export has slightly increased and checked the fall, leaving our quotations about the same as at the date of our last Report. On the 17th inst., 9900 Bales Surat and 100 Madras were offered at Public Sale. The former was chiefly of very inferior quality, some selling as low as 3 1/2d; middling to good realised 4 1/2d; and very good quality 5 1/2d; being a slight reduction from the previous rates, importers appearing desirous to realise, but at this reduction nearly all found buyers. For the Madras (Northern) there was scarcely any demand, and only 100 Bales were purchased at 3 1/2d per lb.—Another Sale of 1570 Bales Surat and 11 Madras took place on the 21st inst, when the whole sold readily at the currency of the 17th to 4d per lb. advance, ordinary to middling Surat selling at 3 1/2d a 4 1/2d, and fair at 4 1/2d. The Madras sold at 7 1/2d a 8 1/2d per lb being very fine from Bourbon seed. To-morrow 2990 Bales Surat are to be offered.

At Liverpool the market continued depressed until towards the middle of the month, from which time the inquiry has been increasing, and the trade have bought to a fair extent: indeed the business done lately has been more considerably than for some time previously. The market has been well supplied, many importers, having availed themselves of the opportunity of the increased demand (chiefly from the trade) to realise. Our quotations, although not altered, have been rather easier; but prices are now, if any thing, rather less favourable for the buyers. The business in Surats has been principally in the better descriptions by consumers, the lower qualities being most plentiful and heavy of sale. The sales have been from the 26th to 4th instant, 12,000 including 1000 at 3 1/2d for ordinary to 5 1/2d for fine. 5th to 11th inst. 26,880 including 2300 at 3 1/2d for ordinary to 5 1/2d for very fine. 12th to 18 inst. 26,100 including 1863 at 5 1/2d for very ordinary 5 1/2d for good. 19th to 25th inst. 28,790 including 3020 at 3 1/2d for good ordinary to 5 1/2d for fine.

The total stock of Cotton at Liverpool on the 25th instant was 599,110 Bales, and 416,750 Bales at the same period last year of the former 36,230 Bales, and of the latter, 25,750 Bales were East India.

TEA.—The speculative market for a short time subsequent to our last report was firm, and the price of Company's Congou advanced to 2s 2 1/2d a 2s 2 1/4d per lb. from which point it receded about the middle of the month to 2s ranging from this price to 2s 1d, until this afternoon, when it suddenly fell to 2s it being understood that an express had been received from Paris, announcing that the arrival at Marseilles of the Overland Mail of 23rd May from Bombay had been telegraphed.

Of Free Trade Tea there have been large parcels brought to public sale, at which most of the merchants have shown firmness; but the town trade and country dealers were very little inclined to come largely into stock, except at lower rates. The demand has been chiefly confined to the lower quantities, as is usually the case when prices are high.

The first of these series of sales commenced on the 10th inst. at 4d a 1d per lb. decline on previous rates, but recovered at the close on the 14th, on the withdrawal and postponement to the 22d inst. of the sales of 16,000 Packages previously declared for the 15th. On the 22d only 9500 of these were offered, 6500 having been taken off the market, notwithstanding which prices gave way 1d a 1 1/2d on the preceding sales, recovering, however, to the same extent yesterday, when 9300 Packages were offered.

Of the total quantity offered, the following proportions have been sold, viz—

	Offered	Sold
At the sales of the 10th	32,600	13,800
" " 22nd	9,300	8,800
" " 26th	9,300	3,700

In Export Tea there have been very few transactions this month, and the only one worth noticing is the sale of about 200 Packages low Hyson at 1s 10d a 1s 11d per lb.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea has again advanced in price, our stock being much reduced; but the arrival of about 1300 Chests within the last week, has tended to check the further rise, and the market is now less firm—Cloves. The market is very dull—Cinnamon. For the sales on the 26th proximo, 800 Bales Malabar and 104 Bales Tellicherry are advertised; in the meantime there is no demand expected—Mace and Nutmegs of fine qualities are of readier sale this month than last but for inferior the market is dull—Ginger is only in limited demand, and prices are rather easier.

POSTSCRIPT—3rd July 1841.

Tea.—The Overland Mail of 23d May arrived yesterday, and in the afternoon the letters were delivered, but, as previously expected, brought no later advices from China than we were in possession of by the 1st May Mail. There has, however, been an increased inquiry for Tea, and Company's Congou was sold at 2s 2d per lb. cash. Free Trade Tea was also in more demand, and generally 1d per lb. dearer, common Congou selling for each 2d per lb. To-day Company's Congou is 2s 1 1/2d per lb.

POSTSCRIPT—24th July, 1841.

Tea.—A large business has been done in free-trade, and 2s 1 1/2d Cash is readily obtainable for ordinary common. Company's Congou is firm at 2s 2 1/4d per lb.

THE CANTERBURY RIOT.—At the Canterbury Sessions the hon capt. Byng, capt. C. L. Doherty, cornet L. J. H. Allgood, of the 13th dragoons; and capt. H. E. Doherty, and lieutenant J. H. Goddard, of the 14th dragoons, were indicted for having, on the 14th of April last, broken the prison in which they were lawfully confined. The second count charged them with having procured others to break the prison; the third with having procured others to rescue them; and the fourth with an escape.

Messrs Horn and Rose conducted the case for the prosecution, and Messrs Deedes and Brett the defence.

The facts of the case have been so frequently and so fully before the public, that it is needless to repeat them.

The trial lasted 8 hours, and the jury pronounced the hon capt. Byng, capt. F. Doherty, and lieutenant Goddard, GUILTY, upon the 4th count; capt. H. Doherty upon the 1st and 4th count; and cornet Allgood upon the 2d, 3d and 4th.

Capt. E. Doherty and cornet Allgood were each fined 50s; and the hon. capt. Byng, capt. H. Doherty, and lieutenant Goddard, severally 20s. The fines were immediately paid.

Major Felix, half-pay unattached, is appointed Deputy Quarter master General to the troops in India, with the rank of Lieut. Colonel in the army, v. Colonel Sewell, 6th now of the 94th.

MINISTERIAL CHANGES.

The displacements and replacements which have just been made in official situation, are thus recorded in the Ministerial paper of last night:—

"The following is a correct list of the several changes which have taken place in the several departments of Government.

"Sir G. Grey to the seals of the Duchy of Lancaster, with a seat in the Cabinet: is succeeded as Judge-Advocate by Mr. Shell, late Vice-President of the Board of Trade.

"Mr. M. O'Ferrall, Secretary of the Admiralty, has been appointed to the post of Financial Secretary of the Treasury, vice Mr. R. Gordon, resigned, Mr. O'Ferrall is succeeded at the Admiralty by Mr. Parker (M. P. for Sheffield), late one of the Lords of the Treasury.

The Hon. E. J. Stanley, the other Joint-Secretary of the Treasury, has been appointed Paymaster-General of the Forces, in the place of Sir Henry Parnell, who retires from office. Mr. Stanley's successor as Under Secretary of the Treasury, is Mr. Le Marchant, of the Board of Trade.

The Hon. Fox Maule has been transferred from the Home Department, of which he was the indefatigable Under-Secretary, to the Vice-Presidency of the Board of Trade. Mr. Maule is succeeded by Lord Seymour, who has been transferred from the Secretaryship of the Board of Control, in which post he is succeeded by Mr. C. Buller.

Capt. Dundas has succeeded Sir W. Parker at the Admiralty. Capt. Plumridge is Store-keeper, and Col. Anson Clerk of the Ordnance.

Lord Plunket has resigned the Lord Chancellorship of Ireland. His Lordship's declining health has long prepared the public for this announcement. Sir John Campbell, the Attorney-General, is his Lordship's successor.

The vacancy in the number of Treasury Lords is filled up by the appointment of Mr. Horsman and the Hon. W. Cowper, Mr. Bannerman, M. P. for Aberdeen, is Mr. Cowper's successor at Greenwich. Mr. J. Leveque, one of the Poor Law Commissioners, is named as Mr. Le Marchant's successor at the Board of Trade.

"The vacant post of Governor of Bombay is not yet filled up."

PARLIAMENTARY.

June 16.—Mr. Wakley requested information of Lord Ingestre as to the result of certain experiments, at which his lordship had been present, to prove the destructive powers of a newly-discovered engine, which, as it had been stated, would alter materially the system of warfare throughout the world, and confer vast military advantages upon whatever state should possess it.—Lord Ingestre replied, that from the time at which his attention had been first directed to the subject he had been more and more convinced that the possession of the secret of this invention was of the utmost possible moment to the country. Several distinguished officers agreed with him in this opinion; and Sir G. Murray, who had witnessed the last experiment, had since recommended the government to inquire further into the matter. The inventor, Mr. Warner, had to struggle with pecuniary difficulties; he had expended a fortune in the prosecution of his invention, he had nobly resisted the tempting offers of foreign powers to purchase his secret, and it was cruel to him, and unjust to the country, that the merits of his discovery had not been long since investigated.—Sir F. Burdett bore testimony to the extraordinary powers of the invention.—Mr. Brotherton expressed his hope that the knowledge of such an engine might put an end to war.

June 17.—The House sat only for a short time, and was occupied almost exclusively with the presentation of petitions.

June 18.—Several private bills were read a third time and passed.

June 21.—Mr. Wakley brought forward a motion for all papers and correspondence between Lord Melbourne and Mr. Warner, respecting the invention of a new and most destructive military projectile, the extraordinary powers of which have on several occasions been described. The hon. member went at some length into the description of the conduct which had been pursued towards Mr. Warner by the parties to whom the decision upon the merits of the invention had been confided, and the number of trifling accidents which by their perpetual recurrence had delayed until this time the settlement of the question. He thought that much blame was due to the Lords of the Admiralty, for their neglect of so vitally important a discovery; but if the government would take the subject into consideration next session he would withdraw his present motion.—Lord J. Russell was only very imperfectly acquainted with the matter; but he had always understood that the negotiations had been broken off in consequence of a difficulty in communicating the means by which the explosion was to be achieved. He thought, however, that some explanation of the apparent neglect with which Mr. Warner, had been treated ought to be given, and that further measures should be adopted for testing the usefulness of the invention.—Lord Ingestre complained of the neglect with which the Board of Admiralty had treated a subject of such vast national importance as this extraordinary invention.—Mr. Wakley briefly replied, expressing himself only in a measure satisfied with Lord J. Russell's promise of inquiry; and after a few words from Lord Ingestre and Colonel Anson, the motion was withdrawn.

AMERICA.

The twenty seventh Congress of the United States assembled at Washington on the 31st May. The House of Representatives having been organized, the election of Speaker was disposed of on the first vote. Mr. John White of Kentucky, the Ministerial candidate, received 121 votes; and Mr. J. W. Jones, late chairman of the Ways and Means, 84.

Next day, the President transmitted his message to both Houses. It is brief compared with the messages generally. He begins by proposing that Congress should reimburse the family of the late President for the expenses to which he must have been put in removing to occupy office for so short a time. He almost immediately enters upon the subject of foreign policy; on which his views are highly pacific.

"I am happy to say that I are nothing to destroy the hope of being able to preserve peace. The ratification of the treaty with Portugal has been duly engaged between the two governments.

"A correspondence has taken place between the Secretary of State and the Minister of her Britannic Majesty accredited to the government, on the subject of Alexander McLeod's indictment and imprisonment, copies of which are herewith communicated to the Congress. In addition to what appears from these papers, it may be proper to state that Alexander McLeod has been heard by the Supreme Court of the State of New York, on his motion to be discharged from imprisonment, and that the decision of the Court has not as yet been pronounced.

"So far as it depends on the course of this government, our relations of good-will and friendship will be continually cultivated with all nations. The true American policy will be found to consist in the exercise of a spirit of justice to be manifested in the discharge of all our international obligations, to the weakest of the family of nations as well as to the most powerful. Occasional conflicts of opinion may arise; but when the discussions incident to them are conducted in the language of truth, and with a strict regard to justice, the scourge of war will for the most part be avoided. The time ought to be regarded as having gone by when a resort to arms is to be esteemed as the only proper arbiter of national differences."

The census, he says, shows that the population amounts to 17,000,000 and that it doubles in twenty-three years. At the same time there is an enormous expanse of territory which invites occupation—comprising 770, 000,000 acres on the hither side of the Rocky Mountains, to say nothing of the regions beyond.

The expenditures of the government, present and accruing, are more than the receipts. The deficit of the present year will be between 11,000,000 and 12,000,000 dollars.

The President contemplates further burdens to be borne by the people in order to meet these demands; but they must be so imposed as not to interfere with the Compromise Act of 2d March, 1833. Only one year remains to complete the series of reductions under that law; and then, says Mr. Tyler, "Under a system of discriminating duties imposed for purposes of revenue, in union with the provisions of existing laws, it is to be hoped that our policy will, in future, be fixed and permanent, so as to avoid those constant fluctuations which defeat the very objects they have in view."

The President speaks of the three financial schemes proposed—the United States Bank, the State banks, and the Sub-Treasury system. The people have condemned the two latter, and before condemning the United States Bank. For what shall be the fiscal agent, the President appeals to Congress. "What is now to be regarded as the judgment of the American people on this whole subject, I have no accurate means of determining but by appealing to their more immediate representatives. The election of General Harrison was settled upon well-known principles, and though the sub-treasury was condemned, no other scheme of finance was concurred in." The entire question is submitted to Congress, with a promise of concurrence in any constitutional measure; but at the same time, he urges the necessity of imposing some check, with the consent of the several States, upon the unlimited creation of State Banks. Affirming that the State debts cannot be assumed by the federal government, he nevertheless favours the distribution of the proceeds of the land sales; the discretion of Congress, he says, will dictate such a measure; as in some States it has become a question of distribution or direct taxation, an alternative which he views with distrust. The Secretary-at-War has instituted an inquiry which promises to develop "gross enormities in connexion with the Indian treaties;" which it will require an appropriation of 20,000 dollars to set to rights. In alluding to the defence of the country, he commends the policy adopted by Mr. Munroe, of maintaining a regularly-organized staff sufficient for the command of a large militia. He promises to propose "a new system of accountability" in the Navy. He mentions that the Post-office is in debt 500,000 dollars; but it is thought that the department could go on without the aid of government. He invites scrutiny into the appointments which he shall make. He recommends more effectual enactment for the suppression of the slave trade. And he concludes by calling attention to the interests of the government district, and the alteration which the repeal of the Sub-Treasury Act may render necessary in providing a place of deposit for the public monies.

The state of the relations between the United States and Great Britain has been brought under the consideration of the Senate by Mr. Buchanan. The other proceedings of Congress are not important.

CALCUTTA.

From the India Gazette, Aug. 18.

We have been furnished with a copy of the Commercial Annual or a tabular statement of the External Commerce of Bengal during the years 1839-40 & 1840-41, prepared by Mr. N. Campbell, of the Custom House, for and on behalf of Mr. E. Wilkinson, of the same establishment, absent in Europe. Often as we have called the attention of our readers to this very useful work, we do not think our recommendation was ever more deserved than on the present occasion; for the only defect our critical eyes could discover in the former publication, is now remedied. We allude to the want of a summary. This want deterred many from the attempt of ascertaining the commercial results of the year by a careful examination of the somewhat voluminous figured statements; and consequently much valuable information was lost to the public generally. Mr. Campbell has very judiciously supplied the deficiency by an abstract, which conveys at a glance the actual and comparative condition of our Exports and Imports; and we arrive without the slightest labour or difficulty at the following conclusions, among many others equally interesting.

The increase in the value of Imports of Merchandise for 1840-41 amounts to Co.'s Rs. 1,77,33,792
 Ditto, ditto, Exports do., Co.'s Rs. 1,36,33,875
 On Treasury, the result is somewhat different.
 Decrease of Imports, 47,14,302
 Increase of Exports, 8,53,304
 In Merchandise, the principal increase in Imports, is derived from Twist; White Cotton Goods, and colored Piece Goods, which from Great Britain alone stand respectively Co.'s Rs. 19,64,631, Co.'s Rs. 26,21,472 and Co.'s Rupees 15,53,828.

In creature comforts, viz; Champaign, Claret Beer, Sherry, &c. the increase we are happy to say seems to approach from 11 to 12,00,000 Rs.

The trade between France and England suffered considerably in the earlier months of the year from the apprehensions of the war; but we hope it will now revive.

The increase on British Import Tonnage shows an excess of 103 vessels and 39,823 tons over the previous year; we must however, reluctantly conclude, our hasty notice of Mr. Campbell's Tables, strongly recommending the pursuit of them to all interested in the prosperity of British India.

BOMBAY.

From the Bombay Times of 21 July.

The following Circular has been forwarded by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce by yesterday's Steamer to the Underwriters at Lloyd's, London; the Association of Underwriters at Liverpool; and the underwriters of Glasgow:—

GENTLEMEN,—I have the honor, under the direction of the Committee of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, to bring to your notice the opinion entertained by the Members of the Association as to the incapacity of many of the masters and officers of the Vessels trading between Great Britain and this Port.

With regard to Commanders, the Committee would observe, that it is not on the score of professional incompetency they have to complain; for without possessing the qualifications necessary in the management and navigation of a ship, few ever obtain a command; but they think that these qualifications are not the only ones required by the master, and that some assurance of his prudence, humanity, and ability to govern, and, above all, of his sobriety, should be obtained from those who could speak as to these points, previous to his assuming so important a position.

The frequency with which riots and disturbances occur on board ship, is no doubt attributable in a great measure to the despotic and tyrannical conduct of some commanders, who, although they may be good seamen and navigators, are altogether unfitted properly to manage and control their inferior officers and crew. An unfortunate addition to habits of intemperance on the part of the Captain, is also not infrequently the cause of insubordination. There are of course exceptions; and the Committee have no wish to pass a sweeping censure; but the instances of incapacity that have come to their knowledge are so numerous that they cannot remain silent on the subject.

When a Merchant ship is at sea, the Captain is necessarily invested with unlimited power; he is without control; and though he is just as much amenable to the law for any acts of cruelty or crime he may commit as though he were resident on shore, yet the nature of his situation offers many facilities for concealment, or for suppression of evidence, and punishment appears remote and uncertain. These considerations do not perhaps prompt the commission of crime, but they doubtless exercise considerable influence over Commanders who have earned for themselves the epithet of "severe." Discipline on board of a Vessel is undoubtedly essential to the preservation of order; and the Captain who, by laxity and carelessness, should tempt his crew to commit disturbances, would be just as culpable as the Commander who by opposite conduct produced the same results. But there are some men who, having got into possession of power, see no bounds to its exercise, and love to display their authority on every petty occasion—who, by acts of insult, oppression, and ill-treatment, outrage the feelings of their officers and crew, and who, weakening by these means the obedience of those beneath them, contribute to the creation of serious riots and mutinies, which often endanger the safety of all concerned.

The Committee have not alluded to the unhappy position of passengers, when placed in a vessel of this description, for fortunately few ships carrying Passengers are ever thus commanded; still, when it does so happen, it will be acknowledged that their situation must be miserable in the extreme.

To point out the remedy for the evils existing, would be supererogatory: the Committee merely desire to represent those evils, which must be felt by you in a far greater degree than by the merchants in this country.

With respect to Officers, they would beg to state that several cases have recently come to their knowledge, where, in consequence of the death of the Commander of the Vessel, the charge of navigating has devolved upon the chief mate, who has been found utterly incapable of undertaking such charge. In few of these, fortunately, was any considerable injury sustained; but it is hardly necessary to point out the serious risk to which life and property are always exposed under such circumstances. And they would hope that some measure will be taken to ensure for the future the shipment on board Vessels, of at least one officer competent to navigate and take charge of the ship in the event of any accident to the Commander.

The Committee have deemed it their duty to bring the subject prominently to your notice, in the strong hope that it will obtain the serious consideration of all interested in the commercial prosperity and honor of our common country, for they cannot but feel that from the increase of the evils adverted to, property is exposed to increased dangers, and the character of our seamen and countrymen to the unfavorable comments of foreigners.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,
(Signed) T. J. A. SCOTT, Acting Secretary.

THE LAIRD OF COW-LOON'S

Negotiations, done into verse, by CHARLEY FROTH, Esq.
&c. &c.

TUNE.

"There was an old chap, in the West Countries."

I am the Governor of Hong Kong,
But I do not think I shall be so long,
And therefore good folks, I'll give you a song,

About my negotiations.

As I understand, that very soon

I shall simply write my name Cow-loon,
Which you all must think but a trifling boon

For my negotiations

If once made a Peer, I shall not care a Pin

For Lord Palmerston, or Commissioner Lin,

In my sleeve at the pair I shall heartily grin,

Hurrah for negotiations.

I had scarcely landed and taken Chusan,

When the Mandarin found I was just the man,

So with pens, ink, and paper, we forthwith began

Milk and water negotiations.

The ships once got as far as the great Peiho,

Where I might have struck most terrible blow,

Prostrating the Tartar pride quite low,

But preferred negotiations.

It was there that I met with the famed Ke-shen,

Who civilly ask'd the old admiral, when

We returned to Canton, to be galled again

With fresh negotiations.

Having had at Chusan very little to do,

And finding the Chinamen fought with Samshoo,

On the wings of the North east Monsoon we all flew

To resume negotiations.

The fleet's left in charge of a Commodore,

Who thinks writing chops is a species of bore,

He requires but my orders, and nothing more,

To finish negotiations.

Ke shen being tardy, I told the rogue,

Sir Gordon would shortly visit the Bogue,

With some of the very best methods in vogue

For shortening negotiations.

The Imperial Envoy, dreaded a row,

And felt disinclined to Bremer to bow,

So he witnessed the fate of Ty-cock-tow.

And then hastened negotiations.

Folks say that the bargain's loosely made,

And differ with me on the law of blockade,

But all these trifles are thrown in the shade,

By my splendid negotiations.

Perhaps you will bear in time for next mail,

The Emperor refuses to pay on the nail,

So I'll get for the opium Ke shen or Lin's Tail,

And conclude my negotiations.

Should the opium merchants want their cash,

And fancy my doings in China rash,

With my taking title home I'll dash,

And cut future negotiations.

Cockpit, H. M. S. Melville, Hong Kong Bay, 24th Jan. 1841.

The following is an outline of the instructions which Sir Henry Pottinger has received from Her Majesty's Government for his guidance in the settlement of the British claims on the Chinese. His Excellency is to demand fifteen millions of dollars, as an indemnity for the opium seized by Lin, the expenses of the war, and the Hong debts. Immediate payment of a portion of the above sum, equal to the estimated value of the opium is to be required; the remainder to be paid by instalments within five years, and to bear interest in the mean time at the rate of five per cent per annum. Sir Henry has further been directed not to negotiate with any Mandarin who does not hold plenary powers from his Sovereign. He is also to insist on a British Envoy being allowed to reside at Peking, and hold direct communication with the Emperor: All the principal ports to be thrown open to foreign trade, and at each of them, ground sufficient in extent for the erection of factories is to be ceded to the English. Hongkong is to be retained by the British as a permanent settlement. The Home Government appear to have resolved on bringing the Celestials to their senses. Energetic measures have been adopted for this purpose by despatching additional troops and vessels of war to China. The policy thus displayed towards that country is not likely to be affected by any change which may take place in the relative situations of the great conflicting political parties in England. We may therefore hope that within a year from the present time, the holders of opium scrip will receive their just dues, and the trade between Great Britain and China will be placed on a firm and honorable basis.—Bombay Courier, Aug. 7.

DANGEROUS TO FAT PEOPLE.

KURNAUL, 13th July 1841.—The native population of Kurnaul have been in a state of great excitement for the last week, owing to there being a most absurd rumour afloat that several fat men and boys have been laid hold of by some invisible Seikhs, who require their blood and grease for tempering swords in Lahore. In consequence of this disturbance, no work people have been procurable for the last two or three days, thro' which the Barrack Master's business has been altogether stopped. You will however be glad to hear that five ferocious looking ruffians were this morning caught in the very act of forcibly carrying off three fat boys from the European bazar. With the able assistance of the Police and European Guard, three of the manlooters have been taken, and are now in confinement in the Sudder Bazar Cut-walee Chubbootra. The popular frenzy has been so great that a large Guard was necessary to prevent the natives from attacking the ruffians. Hundreds have vowed to make offerings to Davie, the God of destruction for their delivery. Two out of the five have escaped, but it is expected they will soon be caught. Our worthy Magistrate and the Military Authorities are investigating the matter. Who would have believed that such destruction was going on, the ruffians say they are employed by the Lahore Government to collect all the human blood and fat they can get, for which article called Nemajee in Hindoostanee, they get a very handsome price.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Hongkong, 4th Oct. 1841.

Sir,—In your paper of the 2nd, I perceive a paragraph relating to the health of the new settlement at Hongkong. I am happy to say that you have been misinformed altogether; as there is no malaria existing whatever, and the health of the troops has been gradually improving, not any having been ordered on board the transports. The crews of vessels are very healthy, and in the Chinese population amounting to nearly 12000 there have been but 10 deaths within the last four months.

I am Sir,

Your obedient servant,

HENRY HOLGATE.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 9th Oct. 1841.

During the week we have had arrivals from Europe, from the three Presidencies of India, from the United States, and from the Straits, and consequently we have received a great number of News-papers from most of these, but their contents have been in a great measure anticipated by the arrival of the Madagascar steamer. We have however found several matters of interest for extracts. The letter from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, concerning Captains of merchant vessels is well worthy of importance, as bringing before the public a matter of great importance not only to property but to the lives and well being of great numbers. The great number of very worthy men who compose the class of commanders and officers in the merchant service, are themselves greatly interested in seeing that none but the deserving be admitted into their ranks, and that more scrupulous care in selection should render it impossible that such wretches as MacPhun should ever be capable of holding and abusing the very responsible station of Captain of a merchant ship. This person was tried at Bombay for manslaughter, and found guilty of having caused the death of one of his crew by a series of cruelties which he amused himself in inflicting on his offending victim during the passage, such as we would think it impossible one human being could be guilty of towards another, had the facts not been deposed to with unanimity by all the witnesses.

We have no further accounts of the movements of the fleet, although the Chinese say that letters have been received dated the 25th of last month from Ningpo stating that City to have been taken and destroyed by the English. There are reports that an Imperial Edict has lately been received in Canton, of a pacific nature, but we have not been able to trace this report to any satisfactory source, nor are we inclined to put much faith in it, the indications of hostile intentions being so much more numerous and better authenticated. The forts near Canton and the river are being repaired and gar- risoned; great quantities of guns and muskets have been of late purchased by the Chinese, and these are even imported into Macao by British vessels. The Chinese state it to be really a fact that Keshen has been tried by a Commission at Peking, found guilty, and was to be strangled after the 'Leihnew' holidays (7th August.) The Comprador was likewise condemned to the ignominious punishment of being cut to pieces, and a mandarin who had recommended him to Keshen's notice was also to suffer death. At the same time it is said that Lin is about to be recalled from banishment and again received into Imperial favor. All this looks not as if the Peking government intended very soon to come to terms. In addition to this we hear that a high mandarin, late Viceroy of the Province of Hookwang, has arrived in Canton to take chief command over the troops at Canton, with whom it is said he intends very shortly to reoccupy the positions at the Bogue. It is said that this new Commander who is about to play a conspicuous part in the war, had for some cause or other incurred the Imperial displeasure, and was about to be sent to the cold country to keep Lin and Tang company, but he appeased his master's wrath by a promise, that if the command were given him, he would soon rid the Empire of the invaders.

By this promise he has for the present avoided punishment, but it seems a very doubtful that he will be able to keep it. Everything seems to portend a long continued struggle, and we sincerely trust that the government at home may be prepared for it, and send out the necessary reinforcements. The force at present in China and on its way out seems to be inadequate to the purposes it has been sent for.

Are we at war with the Chinese or not? is asked by many, and we know not that it has been satisfactorily answered. It is true in one part of the Empire the Brit. attack and subdue Chinese Cities, but at the other, where a truce exists, the conditions of the truce are continually infringed by the Chinese, yet nothing is done to compel them to keep the terms of their engagement. Sir Henry Pottinger in his first notification informed British subjects, that although he would for the present respect the existing truce, the slightest infraction of its terms would lead to an immediate resumption of active hostilities in this province, and that he therefore thought it highly inexpedient that British merchants should risk their persons or property in Canton. The terms of the treaty are infringed; no notice is taken of it by the British authorities; British merchants, of course, cannot without great risk transact their business in Canton, which meanwhile remains open to neutrals, to the great disadvantage of the former.

A great number of troops are said to be again collecting in and near Canton, and the wives and families of Mandarines are again leaving.

We invite the attention of our readers to the communication Doctor Holgate has favored us with, concerning the health of the inhabitants of Hongkong. We are glad that the accounts of the sickness prevailing on that island, which have been so industriously circulated, are altogether untrue, and regret that we should have extended their circulation; but they seemed so well authenticated that we saw no good reason for refusing them belief.

Nothing, as far as we can learn, has yet been done by the authorities at Hongkong in the case of the Maria Passage Schooner, which as we related last week had got on the Chuenpee Island, and was there attacked by Chinese, many of her crew wounded, and besides seven of them probably murdered, as they are still missing. If such enormities are permitted to be committed with impunity we shall probably see them repeated whenever there is an opportunity.

It is with deep regret we have to announce the death of the Revd. JOAQUIM ALPONS GONSAVES, whose loss will be severely felt by the students of the Chinese language. Padre Gonsalves, a native of Portugal, has during a great number of years resided in Macao as member of the College of San Joze, and applied himself to the study of the Chinese language, the difficulties of which he is supposed to have mastered in perhaps a greater degree than any other sinologue. The Chinese student in indebted to him for several works on the Chinese language, and only a few weeks before his death Padre Gonsalves published his Lexicon Magnam Latino-Sinicum. To his friends and acquaintance Padre Gonsalves was endeared by his amiable and frank nature and the kindness with which he imparted to others the manifold stores of his knowledge.

The French Frigate l'Erigone, Captain Cecilie, which arrived at Singapore about 6 weeks since, left there early last month for Manila. It is said that this ship will follow the movements of the British fleet on the coast of China, and that she has on board an Envoy from the King of the French to the Emperor of China. The Danaide has left Hongkong for the northward some time since.

THE NERBUDDA.—Yesterday morning the very disastrous tidings were received here of the probable loss of the Nerbudda transport which left from Hongkong to join the fleet with stores and upwards of 300 Camp-followers on the 2nd of last month. We have kindly been favored with the following particulars contained in a letter from Capt. Smault, her commander, to Capt. Morgan, and extract from that gentleman's letter to Messrs Jardine Matheson & Co.

"To Captain Morgan.

My Dear Sir.—I have the mortification to request you will have the kindness to write Messrs. Aagabeg Brothers, of Calcutta of the accident occurred to the Nerbudda, which Mr. White will explain to you. I am off immediately to the ship to endeavor to save her and the Crew, which I think may be done yet.

Yours truly,
M. Smault.

Hongkong, 7th Oct., 1841.

Extract from Captain Morgan's letter 7th Oct.

"Enclosed is a letter from the Capt. of the Nerbudda; his vessel struck on a rock on the North end of Formosa, after which they anchored in a leaky state, and the Long boat left with the Captain and all the Europeans,—she was picked up by the Black Swan two days ago and brought in here this morning. The Nimrod has gone to look for those remaining on board, taking the Captain with him. It seems they left all the natives on board."

The particulars under which the ship was left, are not explained in the above, but from the Nimrod's having gone in search of her immediately, we are led to hope that the circumstances under which the Captain and all the Europeans abandoned her were not desperate. The lives of upwards of 400 souls will depend on the Nimrod's making a speedy passage. The above extracts do not however mention the date of the disaster. Possibly also the ship may have anchored so near the shore that her inmates may be able to reach land, perhaps through the assistance of Chinese or Formosans. We are not aware whether that part of the island, being the northernmost point, is independent or under Chinese sway. The greater part of the eastern coast has, we believe, has never yet been subdued by the Chinese. The Nerbudda is, we believe, chiefly laden with coal for the Steamers.

Excepting a few and not heavy showers, we have had no rain almost since the typhoons in July last, and the consequence has been that the winter rice-crop is likely to be much injured by the continued drought. Already rice, we are told, is rising in price, and should rain not come soon, the crop, which is generally cut in the middle of next month, will be very scanty. During the last five years the province of Canton at least has enjoyed most abundant harvests, and we believe the price of rice has never been known to continue so low in price as it has been since 1838. We are told that up to now about 12 inches less than the usual quantity of rain has fallen, nor is it likely this will be made up, the months of October and November being generally very dry.

THE MORRISON EDUCATION SOCIETY.

We intended to have presented to our readers a more lengthened account of the meeting of the members of the MORRISON EDUCATION SOCIETY of Wednesday week last, but some of the papers were required not being in a state of sufficient forwardness, we are compelled to limit ourselves to the resolutions come to at the meeting, at which were present Messrs. L. Dent, J. Matheson, Wm. Bell, E. Moller, S. W. Williams, A. W. Lawrence, Dr. B. Hobson, and Revd. Messrs. E. C. Bridgman, W. J. Boone, D. Ball and S. R. Brown. The President Mr. Dent in the Chair, who opened his business with an appropriate speech, after which the Corresponding Secretary the Revd. E. C. Bridgman read the Report, detailing the labors of the society during the last three years.

It was then moved by Mr. Moller, seconded by Mr. Williams, and resolved:

"That the report now read be adopted, and printed under the direction of the Trustees."

It was next on motion of Mr. Matheson, seconded by Revd. Mr. Boone, resolved:

"That the especial thanks of this Society be conveyed to Professors Gibb, Stillman, and Goodrich of Yale College, for their promptness in acceding to the request of the Trustees to select a tutor and, to promote generally the interests of the Society, and for the admirable selection they have made in the Revd. Mr. Brown."

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Doctor Hobson, and resolved:

"That the thanks of this Society be given to the Revd. Mr. Boone and Mrs. Boone, and the Revd. Mr. Milne, for their valuable services in teaching the school and taking charge of the library during the late visit of Mr. Brown to the Straits, and for their generosity in doing so without entailing expence of any kind on the Society."

Moved by the Revd. Mr. Bridgman, seconded by Mr. Dent, and resolved:

"That the thanks of the Society be given to Mr. Brown and Mrs. Brown for the care, assiduity, and zeal which they have so constantly exhibited, in carrying into effect its objects, in educating Chinese youths."

The members present then proceeded to ballot for officers for the ensuing year, when the following Gentlemen were elected.

TO THE TEA TRADE.

SUPURIOUS TEA.
GENTLEMEN,—During seven years we have now had experience of the working of free trade in tea, ample opportunity to prove its merits, as compared with the long reign of previous monopoly, and proudly may the comparison be instituted, the quantity of sterling useful and really fine tea included in the last twelve months' import being beyond all precedent. The argument fairly deducible from this fact is, that the future interests of the consumers of this now necessary article are in safe keeping, and that it is to the high character of the tea trade as a body, both for intelligence and integrity, that the public must look for protection and advantage. You have been (and, to an old stager, it seems but recently) relieved from the clumsy and useless system of excise-periodical stock-taking, which so long degraded and annoyed you—may you ever be exempted from the like infliction. But remember that if some such plan is again imposed, it will be your own fault, for not exercising sufficient jealousy over the nature of supply, to the exclusion of everything of an imitative and spurious kind.

The interruption of the China trade has caused a great increase in the import of what are termed "Junk Teas," principally produced in the more northern provinces of China, and adjacent territories, where the tea plant is indigenous, and brought in junks chiefly to Singapore, where they find a ready market for local supply. The purveyors of this tea (which consists mainly of what is called "Pouchong," from the Poo, the neat measured wrapper in which it is packed) sometimes laid upon the confiding and unwary buyer preparations of other leaves, got up in a similarly neat manner, and, emboldened by frequent success, this cunning has at length advanced to audacity, and large quantities of all kinds of trash, some harmless, some noxious, and some even noxious, are thus disposed of amongst the bulk of the genuine article. It is now, for the first time, that a quantity, which may be reckoned by tons, has found its way here, and has been brought to public sale. The larger parcel has been twice catalogued, but the trade have refused to take it at even one-third the price of the lowest tea, contenting themselves with thus rejecting it. No general remonstrance has as yet been made, the backwardness of individuals to interfere with what was really another's property having operated thus far successfully if not commendably. But this writer feels so much modesty when attacking what will assuredly entail on both merchant and buyer equal injury. Let but one parcel of this trash be reshipped to the place whence it came, and indemnity demanded, and the evil practice will cease at once, to-day's experience proving that nothing else will do. This day, for the first time, disgrace is fixed upon the trade by the purchase in public sale (by one or two parties ignorant of what they were buying) of upwards of fourteen hundred pounds weight of the merest rubbish, spurious and filthy. Now, what will these unconscious proprietors do with it? This exposure, will doubtless, lead them to inspect it before they pay duty on it, not a pound of it being fit for consumption; and it is to be hoped that at least the impost will protect the consumer from its introduction.

But to the point, Sirs. What is to be done? Should or should not anything be done of said publicly by the members of the trade themselves? I seriously press the importance of this question on their attention; for if such things are allowed to go on, your whole community will suffer in it.
The broker, whoever he may chance to be, is bound by his duty to his merchant to put the article up, and I ask you, who have an undoubted right to do it, to take this responsibility off his shoulders by a decided and determined, but judicious, opposite.
Bound in mutual interest in the growing honour and prosperity of the trade,
I am, your obedient humble servant,
WILLIAM JAMES BLAND.

SINGAPORE.
(Singapore Free Press, 9th Sept.)

JUNK TEA.—We have published above from the London Journal of Commerce of 26th June, a letter addressed by Mr. Bland to be, Tea Trade, denouncing some "spurious and filthy rubbish" which under the name of "Junk Tea" is said to have been imported from Singapore, and which had found its way into the London Market. Mr. Bland is as good right in calling public attention to an imposition of this nature; and we hope he will succeed in his endeavours to expose it, but without at the same time prejudicing the public mind against the generality of the Teas imported from Singapore; which it is alleged, some people have attempted to do—for such is the force of peculiar interests even among so every respectable a class as the London Tea Trade. It believes, however, the shippers of the article here to be particularly cautious—for although there is no doubt that Junk Teas imported from this (all of the Congon sort) have sold in London as well as the best Congon direct from Canton, it is also true that attempts have been made to pass off the merest rubbish for the genuine herb. Some of the Chinese settlers also have sometimes employed the English Agency houses to send home consignments of Teas on their own account, which it is probable often compose the refuse of the whole market—but these shipments also ought to be well examined into, in order to prevent any useless or deleterious trash finding its way into the home markets from Singapore, and thus tending to gain a bad name for the bulk of the cargoes from the port.

BOMBAY.
CIVIL, MILITARY AND NAVAL SERVICES.
(From the Bombay Times, July 24.)

The following is the draft of a Government order which has just been sent us, and which will appear in the usual shape when passed through the customary forms: though we are not informed of the precise date of its publication. As purveyors of the very earliest intelligence, we give it by anticipation. It seems to us extremely judicious, and we trust our Mofussil friends will view it in the same light as we do. It is, we presume, consequent on the new order of things:

NEWSPAPER DEPARTMENT.

The Governor in Council remarks with great dissatisfaction, that it has lately become customary for officers of regiments, who have been in the habit of subscribing for Indian Newspapers for their own individual use, that, so soon as they join a Mess-room Club or Reading Room, where the papers they formerly took for their own study are received, their personal subscription to them is immediately discontinued.

The Governor in Council is pleased to direct, that this practice be immediately put an end to, and that no officer who has been accustomed to subscribe to a Newspaper shall, on any of the pretences usually assigned, discontinue the same.

The Governor is also pleased to direct, that all Officers on joining their regiments immediately order a Newspaper for their own use—paying for the same in advance. There can be no excuse for non-compliance with this, as the Editors do not insist on their subscribers reading the papers, or even receiving them, should the postage be objectionable—provided the subscription be regularly paid in advance.

Few Officers receive the Government Gazette, and in defect of this the only mode of becoming acquainted with the wishes of Government is the study of the newspapers.

Gentlemen at out-stations are recommended to order duplicate copies during the monsoon, in case of accidents by daks.

There is no signature, the order not having yet been finally sanctioned.

CHINA AFFAIRS.

(From the Friend of India, August 12.)

H. M. S. Nemesis came in on Friday last from China, the 10th June, announcing that our troops and sailors had acquired fresh laurels, and that the Plenipotentiary, Captain Elliot, had afforded another specimen of his notorious incapacity for the situation in which he has been so unhappily placed. From the various papers brought round by this vessel, we have drawn up a succinct narrative of these events, to which we refer our readers. The substance of the intelligence is that the warlike preparations of the Chinese, having left no doubt of their intentions, on the 21st of May, Captain Elliot warned the British and Foreign merchants to quit Canton, which they had no sooner done than the Chinese began their attack. The ships of war and steamers were brought up, and demolished their fortifications. The troops to the number of 1700, aided by 500 marines, moved upon the city, in which and its neighbourhood nearly 45,000 Tartars had been assembled. After a sharp engagement, in which a great number of them are reported to have been killed, the British troops took possession of the heights to the north of the city, and prepared to storm it. Meanwhile the Chinese authorities made overtures to Captain Elliot for the ransom of the city, and agreed to pay down six millions of dollars for the use of the Crown of England, within one week. Five millions were punctually paid, and ten hundred for the remaining million. But Captain Elliot stipulated at the same time that the Chinese Commissioners, and all the troops except those belonging to the river, should evacuate the city and proceed to a distance of sixty miles. On his part he agreed that all the fortified places in the river should be restored, not however to be armed, and that all the British ships of war should quit the river, and return without the Bogue.

No one will blame Captain Elliot for having held the city at ransom, and saved it from the horrors of a sack, which, in addition to the indescribable misery it would have inflicted on its unoffending inhabitants, must have left an indelible impression against us on the people of a province, with whom it is our ultimate and anxious hope to carry on a beneficial commerce. Neither will Her Majesty's Ministers at home censure him for having obtained the sinews of war from the enemy, and acquired for the ransom of a single city, a refund of all the expenses we have yet incurred in this enterprise. But it will baffle the keenest intellect to discover any reason for relinquishing the city, evacuating the river, restoring all the forts and, retiring to the distance of sixty miles. Nothing but the unfathomable wisdom of Captain Elliot, of which we have had but too many specimens during his wretched career, is sufficient to accredit for a step which to every other mind must appear the height of folly. A crowd of questions suggest themselves to the mind on a view of this most unaccountable proceeding. Captain Elliot was under no necessity of withdrawing from the city. Canton was at his mercy, and he dictated his own terms; why then did he resolve that the victors should submit to the same rule with the conquered? Why leave the fortifications of the city standing, or abandon conquests, the fruit of so much time, labour, and expense, which cannot but prove of the highest value to us, in the more extended enterprise on which we are about to enter? Why, as soon as we had thoroughly humbled the provincial authorities, and opened the way for renewing our intercourse on a favourable footing, close up all trade at once, and render it impossible for any merchant to trust his person and property at Canton, from which he had withdrawn all British protection. Why allow forty thousand Tartar troops, to depart with their arms? But there is no end of humiliating questions.

By this fatal error we again lose the advantage which the valor of our troops and soldiers gave us. The Chinese Commissioners will doubtless represent to the Emperor, that the English attempted to plunder the town or its suburbs, but that their fire ships and junk had expelled our ships, and obliged them to hoist their sails and depart; that the invincible Tartar troops, had vanquished our armies, and that the most unequivocal token of the Imperial arms was afforded by the fact that the river and all its forts were again in possession of the Chinese authorities, and that the English had fled in dismay. These reports will be re-echoed in the lying bulletins of the Emperor, and diffused through the Empire, and fresh courage will be given to the country. The evacuation of the city and province by the Tartar troops will of course be merely nominal. They will march off into the interior, and the British command will certify the fact of their departure, and retire. What is there to prevent their returning immediately, and remounting the forts, but Chinese good faith, and the value of this commodity we have long since learnt to appreciate. There is no British force, naval or military, left within the river to guarantee the observance of the treaty, or to resist the first attempt to violate it. And there can be nothing more certain than that they will thus return, and give us the trouble of recapturing the forts, and a new besieging the city, for it is impossible that the Plenipotentiary should not at once perceive that to leave the southern capital entirely in the hands of the Chinese, would be a most unsound policy. The first intelligence which he will receive landing at Macao, however, will be that Captain Elliot has tied up his hands by a most injudicious treaty.

It would be well if we could congratulate ourselves upon the prospect that this will be the last error of Captain Elliot's administration. But unfortunately two months must elapse between the date of our last advice from Canton, and the arrival of the officer who is to supersede him. During this period, too many opportunities will be afforded him, to repeat his errors, at Amoy and at Chusan, Sir Henry Pottinger and Sir W. Parker cannot be expected to reach Macao before the 8th or 10th Aug., and should they proceed immediately in quest of Captain Elliot, it must be the middle of August before they can overtake him, and rescue the expedition from his hands. Then happily will be brought to a close, the most extraordinary series of blunders on record in the British annals; and then may we hope, that those vigorous measures will be adopted which shall bring this expedition to a successful issue.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

THE DISCOVERY SHIPS.

(From the South Australian Register, May 1.)

The first season's expedition towards the Antarctic Pole has just been completed. The following account of it, which we find in the Hobart Town Courier, just received, will be read with interest.

It is our pleasing task to announce the safe return to our port of the M. discovery ships Erebus and Terror, Captain Ross and Crozier, after a voyage of six months to the antarctic Pole.

Our readers will be happy to learn that the expedition has been crowned with the most complete success, for though they reached not the exact position of the magnetic pole, owing to the immense barriers of ice and ice-capped mountains that intervened, they were enabled to fix it at about one hundred miles distance from them, as nearly as could be ascertained from the observation of the needle.

The Erebus and Terror left Hobart Town on the 12th November, 1840, and arrived at the Auckland Islands on the 20th; having completed the necessary observations there, they sailed on the 12th December for Campbell Island, which they reached the following day, and having finished the requisite observations in the south harbour of that island, they sailed for the antarctic region on the 17th, and entered the main part of ice on the 5th January, 1841, in latitude 68° 45' S., and longitude 174° 13' E. They reached this field of ice on the 9th, in latitude 68° 15' S., and longitude 176° 22' E. On the 10th they discovered land, and took possession of it on the 12th in the name of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. Latitude 71° 56' S.; longitude 174° 17' E. This land was traced, extending in a continuous line to the southward as far as the 79th degree. On the 28th January, in latitude 77° 31' S., and longitude 162° 60' E., they saw a large volcano, to which the appropriate name of Mount Erebus was given, and that of Mount Terror to another mountain in its neighbourhood. Mount Erebus was emitting deep clouds of smoke.

On the 2nd February they reached the latitude of 78° 04' S., in longitude 173° 12' E., when the ships were finally stopped by an immense barrier of ice 150 feet high, beyond which it was found impossible to penetrate, and as the season was likely to become more severe, and the ships to be detained in the ice, without the possibility of effecting anything until it broke up, Captain Ross resolved to return, and consequently both ships sailed from thence for this port on the 18th February.

As soon as the season promises a chance of additional success, Captain Ross will again explore the antarctic regions. The barrier of ice which impeded their further progress, was traced for 300 miles eastward.

This Expedition has penetrated four degrees farther than that of the French or Americans. The positions marked by the French were found to be correct, but an extraordinary mistake appears to have affected the American calculations, for the Erebus and Terror sailed over the positions marked on their charts as land, which is upwards of three hundred miles from the latitude and longitude in which the Americans have laid it down.

The appearance of these iceless regions is represented, as one continued scene of valleys of ice and mountains of snow, which however, cannot fail to excite surprise is the discovery of a volcanic mountain in such a latitude. The effect of a burning mountain in a desert of ice and snow must be extremely strange, if not terrific, and will no doubt in England furnish the subject of many a poetic fancy painting.

We have heard that seals and sperm whales were seen in abundance.

The officers and crew are all in the enjoyment of excellent health, and have not sustained a single casualty. We congratulate our gallant countrymen on their return. If they have not shared in the glory of the achievement, which bore of it a distinguished British navy in the east, they have been accomplishing no less enduring although peaceful triumphs in the south.

In noticing the recent voyage of discovery made by the Erebus and Terror to the Antarctic Pole, we committed an error in stating that they proceeded only four degrees farther than the expedition under the command of Commodore D'Urville. On further reference to the account published by Commodore D'Urville himself, we find that Captain Ross penetrated eleven degrees lower south than the Atrevida or Zelle and four degrees more than any vessel has ever yet reached.

There can be little doubt that the Americans saw the land of the same coast, but they have made some mistake in fixing its exact position.

The seals which have been seen are not of the valuable kind, and it would be a matter of extreme difficulty and risk to carry on sperm whaling in so cold a latitude. In the Greenland fisheries the blubber of the whale is never melted down, owing to the impossibility of the whalers being able to endure the changes of intense cold and heat. The same obstacles present themselves in this sphere, only in a far greater degree.

As soon as the first rumour of seals and sperm whales was sent abroad, a good deal of speculation began to prevail in Hobart Town, but from the causes to which we have just alluded it has since altogether subsided.—Sing. Free Press

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 16th Oct. 1841.

Are we or are we not war with China? is a question we asked last week, and which we again repeat, with a wish to have it answered to every body's satisfaction, and to see as much light thrown upon the present anomalous state of affairs as possible. We are told that on referring to Sir Henry Pottinger's notification we may see that England is at war with China, and the same paper which vouches for this information then inconsistently enough, in order to disprove our position that British merchants are under great disadvantages, compared to neutrals as regards their trade with Canton, points to a list of 19 British ships at Whampoa and to four or five English gentlemen transacting business at Canton.

According to the Plenipotentiary's Notification, we must admit therefore that we are at war, but 19 ships at Whampoa and Englishmen transacting commercial business at Canton, and "any British merchant as safe in Canton as any neutral" seem to give the lie to the Notification, and to point to a state of hybrid warfare, the nature of which it is somewhat difficult to comprehend; nor is it a matter of astonishment that under such circumstances opinions of men should be greatly at variance. The real state of the case seems to be this: a truce was agreed on under certain conditions, and a threat is held out by H. M. Plenipotentiary that if those conditions are violated, active hostilities will be immediately recommenced. British subjects are warned not to put themselves into the power of the Chinese, sufficient experience having been gained of the treachery of the authorities, to put much faith in their observance of their promises or treaties. Soon after the Expedition left for the northward, the Chinese, contrary to the stipulations of the truce, began obstructing the river, and an English squadron under Capt. Nias went up to remove these obstructions, which was partially effected. No sooner, however, became it known in Canton that ships of war had again entered the river, than British Merchants no longer deeming themselves safe in Canton, left it, and withdrew on board their ships at Whampoa. This fact is in direct opposition to the assertion that "any British merchant will be as safe in Canton as any neutral," since we presume that those who so precipitately left Canton on the approach of a British squadron, must have had some good grounds for apprehension, indeed they were warned by the Hong merchants that they had better leave. Neutrals on that occasion remained quietly at Canton, and we think facts bear us out sufficiently in what we said last week, that "British merchants cannot, without great risk, transact their business in Canton, which meanwhile remains open to neutrals, to the great disadvantage of the former." That there are merchants who have thought it worth their while to run the risk of staying at Canton and of taking their ships to Whampoa does in no way invalidate our position; on the contrary, the very small number of British subjects at present in Canton is a proof that the majority consider the risk of giving themselves into the power of the Chinese too great to be run, particularly having been warned by the highest officers of the crown against so doing. But even were we to admit that British merchants staying at Canton have as yet not run any risk, that indeed the Chinese authorities will protect them as well as they can. It yet cannot be denied that hostilities near Canton may be recommenced on any day—in fact it has now every appearance that the present quiet will not last much longer. The Chinese government is purchasing guns wherever they are to be sold, the fortifications in and near Canton are being repaired, contrary to the express stipulations of the truce, and we are told that two hundred armed boats are stationed at Napier's fort. If the Chinese themselves do not begin the hostilities, it is very probable that the British will; and can any one, under such circumstances consider the stay of British merchants at Canton, and of their unarmed merchant-ships at Whampoa, as safe?

But while indications are thus warlike, we must still recur to our original question, for it must be kept in mind that although very good cause of apprehension exists, British merchants, have since the conclusion of the treaty had to complain of no act of hostility towards themselves and their property, and have been able peaceably to carry on their trade. Why but few have availed themselves of it, we have above explained, and as long as the present state of inactivity and uncertainty exists, they will continue to be under great disadvantages as compared to neutrals. We hope that if the reports of hostile preparations at Canton, which are daily brought down, do prove to be true, the threats of Sir Henry Pottinger will be carried into immediate effect, and British interests be placed on an equal footing with those of neutrals.

We hear it said that the seven missing lascars detained by the villagers when the Passage Schooner Maria got on shore, have been sent to Whampoa by the villagers after a detention of several days. We have not heard of any official interference in their favor, or for the recovery of the value of the boat and the articles stolen from its crew and passengers. The wounded lascars we learn recovering.

The Rehe, American Passageboat, was the other day, on her way from Canton to Macao attacked by a Pirate who was in the act of boarding her, when one of the crew a Manila man, cut the first assailant down with a cutlass, a reception for which the pirate was apparently not prepared, as the Rehe was permitted to continue her passage without further molestation.

We have during the week had an arrival from the coast, by which we learn that a portion of the fleet arrived off Buffalo's Nose, an island of the Chusan Archipelago, on the 21st September, and that the whole fleet would rendezvous there probably in a day or two. Chin has and Ning po would, it was supposed, be the first objects of attack, and it was believed that Chusan would not be taken permanent possession of. We regret to have to report another instance of Chinese cruelty, exactly similar to that by which Captain Stead of the Pentonjee Bomanjee lost his life last year, and singularly enough, almost upon the same spot. The brig Lyra, being in want of provisions, the chief officer went on shore to purchase them, near Kitter Point, a little to the southward of Chin has. The inhabitants promised to have the provisions ready if he would return for them the next day, which he did; but no sooner had he and his boat crew landed, than they were attacked by about 300 men who had lain in ambush, and Mr. Wainwright, the chief officer, and one lascar were killed; the remaining part of the crew succeeded with great difficulty in reaching the boat, and shoving off. Fortunately, as has hitherto generally been the case, the Chinese have not, on this occasion, perpetrated this act of treachery with impunity. On the circumstances becoming known, the Phlegathon steamer, assisted by the boats of some trading vessels, went to the spot, the crews were landed, a fort attacked, taken, and destroyed, as also the village where the murder was committed. We must again warn people, whether in this neighborhood or to the northward, to be extremely careful how they trust themselves into the power of the Chinese, for where they can they will attack the unarmed or the few, such acts being looked upon by their government as highly meritorious, and the perpetrators are generally rewarded by military honors. Yu Kien, the Deputy Governor of Che Kiang, the province where Captain Stead and Mr.

Wainwright were murdered, has indeed expressly recommended, in a proclamation to the people, and also in a report to the Emperor, that foreigners arriving on their coasts should by apparent friendliness be enticed on shore, and that their unwary victims should them, instead of tasting the promised hospitality, be immediately seized and killed. This plan of cold blooded murder has already succeeded in two instances, and will probably in many more, if seafaring people are not more on their guard in future.

Amoy.—Letters from Amoy to the 7th of this month have been received, from which we learn with pleasure that everything was proceeding prosperously and quietly there. The English ships Druid, Pythias and Algerine remained at anchor in port, and the garrison of about 500 men on the island of Kolongau. The climate is represented as most delightful, and all sorts of provisions abundant. The numerous pirates, however, who infest the Amoy waters, keep the squadron on the qui vive, and a good number of their boats have been captured or destroyed, not always however without loss. The pinnace of H. M. S. Druid with 15 hands went in pursuit of a pirate boat, when having nearly come up with her, three others came to her assistance, and the four then bore down upon the pinnace, which succeeded very soon in sinking three of them; but when boarding the fourth it blew up, and of the pinnace's crew only four escaped unhurt; most of the others were dreadfully burnt and otherwise severely injured.

THE NERBUDDA TRANSPORT.—We last week had to record the probable loss of the vessel, and we have now been favored with the following particulars, from a letter from Capt. Man of the Black Swan, dated 7th October. "I beg leave to inform you that last evening about 7 o'clock, being about 15 miles E. N. E. of Hongkong, discovered a ship's boat standing down before the wind; it getting dark before the boat could get alongside, hove to and showed lights, and in about an hour she was got alongside, proving to be the Nerbudda's longboat, with 33 souls on board chiefly soldiers. I of course took them on board, and at the Commanding Officer's entreaties bore up for Hongkong, he assuring me that government would recompense me handsomely. The poor fellows were in a wretched state having been eight days in the boat in a continued gale of wind, boat frequently filling. They left the ship at anchor in a sinking state, having drove over a large reef with 150 souls on board, all natives of Calcutta. The Nimrod starts immediately to succor them, but I fear from the account the Captain gives of the ship at the time of leaving her, there is no hope."

We understand that the ill-fated vessel had nearly reached the latitude of Chusan, when she lost her mainmast, in a gale, and being no longer able to beat to windward, had put back again, for Hongkong, we presume. From the crew having been 8 days on board the boat, and the boat having been picked up on the 6th, the Captain and other Europeans must have abandoned her on the 28th or 29th September. We have heard that the native crew seeing themselves, in what they considered, inextricable danger, lost courage and refused doing any work, and this may in part account for her abandonment by her officers, which certainly requires full explanation if we can acquit them of blame for such very unusual proceeding.

POST OFFICE.—Great inconveniences has again been experienced from letter-bags being addressed to the Post master at Hongkong and their not being allowed to be opened here at the Superintendent's Office where there still continues a clerk. The Defiance from Madras and Singapore arrived on the 13th; her letter-bag was landed, but not opened, and there having as yet been no opportunity to send it to Hongkong, it still remains here, and may for some days longer. During the at present prevailing strong easterly winds, a passage to Hongkong takes frequently two days, and upwards of 10 or 12 days may thus elapse before consignees by this vessel can be put in possession of their letters, an inconvenience which might be avoided if H. M. Deputy Superintendent gave directions for the letter-bag to be opened at his office here, which would be a great convenience to many and inconvenience to no one. In the present case this mismanagement falls peculiarily hard upon consignees of goods by the vessel and upon the ship herself; for being without shipping documents, the former cannot send for their cargo, and the discharge of the latter is retarded many days, possibly to the great detriment and loss of her owners. Surely something might be done by H. M. Superintendent to mend this state of things. In the meanwhile we warn all in places abroad that their letters for China be not enclosed in the letter bag for the Postmaster at Hongkong.

The accounts from Canton continue to be to the effect that a great number of workmen are employed in repairing and rebuilding the fortifications at & near Canton, particularly those of Sha ming, Napier's and Howqua's forts. At the latter a great number, some say as many as 200 boats, evidently armed and well manned, are stationed, with what object is not known. The river between Whampoa and Canton is being effectually obstructed, and we hear from Chinese who only a few days since passed through the Bogue, that under the directions of a late Viceroy of Yunnan or Honan, who to retrieve his disgrace has offered to drive out the barbarians, a number of workmen were already employed in rebuilding the Bogue-forts. That mandarin is said to have as many as 30,000 soldiers under his orders who are all to assist in the repairs of the forts.

A fire, the work of incendiaries it is said, broke out at a village of the name of Homun, on the river's bank between Heangshan and Canton, and destroyed 330 houses and a great quantity of property.

HONGKONG.—The Government buildings at this place are rapidly proceeding; the Jail is finished, and already filled with pirates awaiting their trial; houses and godowns are now building for the Commissariat department; these are to be substantially built of stone; many of the government officers are also building private residences, several of which are nearly finished. The British commercial community has as yet held back, with a few exceptions, a few private godowns and one dwelling house belonging to a commercial firm are nearly completed. The new road constructed on account of government is, we are told, already seven miles long, and about a thousand workmen are daily employed by Government. The Chinese population is rapidly increasing, amounting at the settlement already to from 10 to 12,000. All this is fair enough for a beginning, but before the arrival of the intentions of the home-government with regard to the permanent occupation of the Island it can hardly be expected that British and other foreign merchants will venture much Capital in building.

The Hoppo at Canton has of late been in the habit of granting 'true chops' i. e. permits for the exportation of Tea to Macao, on payment of a duty of 4½ Taels per Picul, but now we understand refuses granting any more. He has probably listened to the representations of Hong-merchants, who would by such arrangement lose a great portion of the teas, which for passing through their hands pay them for charges, commission, Consol-fund, etc, exclusive of the duty, very near six taels; they would represent to the Hoppo that in granting permits for Macao he would lose the portcharges on ships at Whampoa, and he seems to have listened to their argument; but we doubt whether the Hoppo will long be proof against the higher rate of duty obtained by shipments to Macao, the Hong-merchants paying only T. 3 6 or 7 mace per Picul, whilst others give him nearly 8 Taels more.

SWEEPING BOATS.—The commercial enterprise of the people, and a love of hazard if large profits can be made, on one side, and on the other the extreme venality of mandarines, who for a fee are ever ready to connive at evasion of the fiscal laws, have now many years since created a system of smuggling which could in no other country exist for any length of time without leaving the public coffers empty and causing besides the greatest disturbances and contempt of the law. We are not aware that the smuggling was regularly organised before the prohibition of Opium, nor before the consumption of that drug increased so rapidly. When the Opium trade was in 1831 banished from Whampoa, and established in the outer anchorage, then the smuggling boats became the medium of introducing the drug into the country, and numbers of them were soon built, and, excepting periodical interruption either from severe edicts or disagreement with mandarines as to the amount of fee, continued prosperous until the end of 1836, when the provincial government began to show serious intentions of suppressing the trade. Many boats were at that time either destroyed in their conflict with mandarines, or broken up, as the trade continued no longer worth the following; the more severe prohibitions from the Court having increased the vigilance and the persecutions of the mandarines; not however that these became the implacable enemies of the smugglers from any motive or love of duty; on the contrary, they now became themselves the carriers of the Opium and continued so, to the almost total exclusion of smugglers until September 1838, when the repeated and threatening orders from the court, and rumours of the speedy arrival of the Commissioners intimidated even the mandarines, and for a while, until Lin's advent, the Opium-trade was prostrate. Since that time however the smugglers, the coast being clear of mandarines who no longer dared openly to engage in the trade, have revived in greater numbers than ever before, nor is their smuggling now confined to Opium, Camblets, and a few other articles, of little bulk and great value. They have now become the carriers of the whole of the very considerable illicit trade, which consists in the export of Tea, Silk, Cassia, and other articles of Chinese produce and manufacture, and the import of Opium and British manufactures. Their number has of course kept pace in proportion with their increased business, and being engaged in carrying more bulky articles than heretofore, the size of the boats has also grown in proportion. Those which trade now between this and Canton, Fuh shan and Whampoa, are generally of from 50 to 100 tons burthen, very long and low, to allow the use of oars; though they are equally well adapted to sailing; they generally have a main and fore mast, with large mast sails, and are very fast sailers. They are beautiful boats as to shape and construction, and are always kept in the very best order; their sides though unpainted being of bright wood, kept very clean. When leaving a port, the gong in the stern is beaten for about 10 minutes, as a leave-taking to the boats left behind, which civility is returned by them with a similar beating, until she is out of sight or hearing. It is a fine sight to see these boats leaving the harbour, sweeping out at a very fast rate with frequently 40 oars of a side, all manned by athletic looking men; they have not inaptly been compared to centipedes, the long hull of the boat representing the body, and the many oars, continually rising and falling, its many legs. When under sail with a fresh breeze they likewise appear to great advantage, going through the water with astonishing rapidity; nor is it a matter of surprise that they are generally allowed to pass unquestioned by the mandarines, when you cast a glance at the deck covered with men, and their stern bristling with all kinds of cut and thrust weapons, with generally one or two swivels in the mid-ships and bows, and the side covered with rattan shields, ready for use in case of personal conflict. Notwithstanding however these formidable means of defence, the mandarin preventive service boats which are built and manned in almost all respects like the smugglers, sometimes gather in sufficient numbers to venture an attack, and, as in such case they always have an overwhelming force are generally successful, and capture one or both the boats, (for the smugglers always go in pairs), for which they have lain in wait. Only a few days ago, as two smugglers were coming down the river on their way to Macao, eight mandarin boats suddenly sallied out upon them, without giving them time of escape. The first fire from the mandarines killed 9 men in one of the boats, which was then run on shore, where the crew escaped, and while the captors were engaged in securing their prize, the other smuggler got away. This boat contained a quantity of Rhubarb, Tea and Silk, a rather valuable cargo worth perhaps $8 or 10,000. Their profits generally must however be great, for the trade is persevered in notwithstanding occasional heavy losses, and the great expense at which the boats are sailed.

Another week has gone by without rain: the rice growing districts are represented to be very much parched, and the price of rice, retail at least, is rising daily. There is every appearance of a scanty crop, it being not likely that the rain, so much wanted, will fall at this advanced season of the year.

PUBLIC AUCTION.

THIS-DAY SATURDAY, THE 23RD INSTANT,

At 12 O'clock Precisely.

JOHN SMITH, has much pleasure in bringing to the notice of the public, that this day Saturday, the 23rd Instant, he will sell, (on his premises) by Public Auction, (in two lots,) the following remarkably strong and fast sailing vessels: The Brigantine "WAVE," of 165 tons tons or thereabouts, at anchor in the Tyne, with all her Masts, Rigger, Sails, Boats, Stores, &c. &c., and the Brig "SERV," of about 157 tons, as she now lies at anchor in the Tyne, with all her Masts, Sails, Rigger, Sails, Boats, &c. &c.

It is hardly necessary to expatiate on the qualities of the "WAVE": she is only three years old, and built expressly for sailing. On application her Inventory may be seen.

The "SERV" one may literally term her as "strong as a rock," she is new, and most faithfully built—the order she is in, deserves particular notice—has an abundance of stores: remarkably good, and some entirely new sails, and, in fact, were only a commander, crew, and provisions sent on board, she would be ready for sea instantly.

To dictate to those, who may be in want of vessels on the East and West Coasts, would be presumptuous,—yet, similar to the "WAVE," and the "SERV," to them must be almost invaluable—such opportunities will probably never again offer—and to hope for the like, it would be as well to anticipate the act of an insane Jew to be seen heaving Watches or Clocks into the sea from the Prais Grande!

Conditions of the sale as usual.—The lots, when knocked down, will from that moment be at the risk and expense of the purchaser; twenty per cent deposit, and the rest payable within ten days after the sale.

Macao, 23rd October, 1841.

INTERVIEW AT THE PEIHO

From a Soldier's Notebook, by Lord Jocelyn.

"A blue screen was placed at the entrance, so as to hide the interior from the gaze of the public, and here we were met by many more mandarins, and marshaled into the presence of Keshen; he rose at our entrance, and received the mission with great courtesy and civility.
Indeed, the manners of these high mandarins would have done honor to any courtier in the most polished court in Europe. He begged us to remain covered, and was introduced to each person separately, and expressed his hopes that the supplies had been received by the squadron. He made some excuse for the reception in the tents, but intimated that Takoo was some distance from the landing-place. Judging from appearance, he might have been a man of forty, and looked, what he is said to be by his countrymen, a person of great ability: in his tail, the Chinese appendage to men of all ranks except priests, was remarkable from its length, and the care that was evidently bestowed upon it. He was dressed in a blue silk robe, with a worked girdle; on the legs were the white satin boots common to all the higher orders; his head was covered with a mandarin summer cap, made of a fine straw; in it was placed the deep red coral button, denoting the rank of the wearer, and the peacock's feather drooping between the shoulders. On the whole, his dress was plain; but the mandarins when in full costume, judging from specimens taken at Chusan, must have a gorgeous appearance. The encampment was surrounded with a high canvas wall, resembling that which encircles the private apartments of great men and native rajahs when travelling through India. Inside this screen were eight small tents, in each of which a table and forms were placed. These formed an oval; and in the centre was erected a canvas cottage, of rather an ingenious description; whilst at the upper end, concealed by another screen, stood the tent of conference.
This was lined with yellow silk (the royal color) and worked with the arms of the empire at the back. The interpreters and captain Elliot remained with the commissioner, whilst the rest of the officers and gentlemen sought the different tents around, in which the lower orders of mandarins were busy preparing a breakfast for the party; for it was an extraordinary thing to this visit, that everything was apparently done by mandarins—none of their servants being admitted. The meal consisted of numerous little plates, piled one upon the other, containing birds' nest soup, sea-slugs, sharks' fins, hard-boiled eggs, whose interiors were far advanced to chickenhood, and dressed fish; these were the greatest delicacies. This is but a small portion of the supply; for at the table where I had the honor to partake of the good fare, there were no less than thirty of these little sauces. These breakfasts were spread in the different tents, and each was intended to stay the ravenous appetites of five barbarians. So afraid were the mandarins of our seeing their weakness, that they had not only placed the before-mentioned screen around their encampment, but had thrown up a mud embankment, which, however, failed in its intention; for, although we were soon brought back by the watchful guards, we managed to get a glance of the forbidden land. The forts had been repaired since our last visit, and were now crowded with soldiers; a few outworks had been thrown up, but they were extremely paltry, and indeed the whole thing, as a military position, was quite ludicrous. With two six pounders and a couple of hundred marines, they might have been ours at any moment. We were, nevertheless, much struck at the immense bodily strength and power of these northern Chinese, particularly of the men who were employed tracking the boats upon the river; who, although seemingly a wretched class, more like beasts of burden than human beings, are possessed of such physical power, that six or eight of them will drag against the stream, and with apparent ease, a boat of considerable tonnage. In the course of the day some of the Tartar body-guards went through the sword exercise and other manoeuvres for our amusement. These, consisting rather in grotesque antics and ludicrous faces than in the use of the weapon itself, are supposed to be no effective in fighting an antagonist, whilst, for the same reason, many of the troops we saw farther to the south at Chusan and Ning-po, wore a tiger uniform, a dress cut and painted to resemble that animal. These Tartars were dressed in a white cotton garb and black cap, and their weapons were swords and matchlocks, or bows and arrows. They were considered the elite of the Chinese troops belonging to the emperor's body-guard, and believed to descend from the same tribe as the sovereign himself. After a conference of six hours, during which period the loud voices of the plenipotentiaries in high argument had often struck upon our ears, the British plenipotentiary came forth, and the rest of the party having performed their salutations to the Chinese commissioner, we departed for the Wellesley; greatly,

I believe, to the relief and satisfaction of the mandarins."

SMALL FEET.

It may not be out of place to mention here, that of all the females who came to the hospital (and they were not few), and of others seen in various parts of the island, not one among them had feet of the natural size. Some were not so much compressed as others, but the practice of confining the feet, during its growth, is universal at Chusan, while at Canton and Macao many women have their feet completely free, and of natural size. Though several females came to the hospital affected with various diseases, and with ulcers of the leg, only in one or two instances was there seen any ulcer or other disease apparently caused by the compression of the foot, and the forced distortion of its bones. It cannot be said with any degree of certainty how far this practice is injurious to health; but it would appear, from the observation of numerous instances, among different classes of society, both in children and adults, that it does not cause so much misery as might be expected from the severe treatment to which the feet are subjected in infancy. Very frequently when walking in the open country, strong healthy women, though having their feet very much compressed, were seen walking about with readiness, and not apparently suffering from any pain in the feet whatever; others also have walked several miles to the hospital, and have had to return home the same day, so that locomotion is by no means prevented.

It is very interesting to observe the effects on health, which are caused by the habits and customs of a people, and this is one not undeserving of some attention as more intimate acquaintance with the Chinese is obtained. And torturing as this treatment of the feet would appear to be, and unasily to us as are its consequences, it is perhaps on the whole not more injurious to health and comfort, than are the practices inflicted by fashion on the female sex in western nations.—Doctor Lockhart's report to the Medical Missionary Society, of proceedings at Chusan.

LORD PALMERSTON AND CAPT. ELLIOT.

Our morning contemporary says, "from the tone assumed by Lord Palmerston in his Persian correspondence, we should infer that his instructions to Col.
Pottenger would be of a very clear and decided character." We should hope so. If after the lesson that has been taught him, the Foreign Minister neglects, as he has hitherto neglected, our relations with China, no language could be sufficiently strong to denote the enormity of his conduct.

We are as yet in almost profound ignorance of the specific character of the instructions communicated from the Foreign Office to Capt. Elliot. We know that the wisdom of Downing Street, in the first instance decreed, that the China war should be a sort of Buceanering get-what-you-can expedition, the primal, and, as far as was then determined, the ultimate object of which was to be compensation—pecuniary compensation—and that the Government of India, from the very first hour, in which they received intimation of the Downing-street design, and instructions to help to carry it into effect, by supplying the necessary materials, anticipated that a most renowned failure would crown the attempt. The fact is, we suspect, that Lord Palmerston, until he found that embarrassments had arisen, which were likely to fix an indelible blot of disgrace on the name of Great Britain, never gave the matter his serious attention. Engaged in other affairs, which, because relating to countries nearer home, he considered of greater magnitude, he has neglected the consideration of our China Politics, and, left in a great measure, affairs to take care of themselves—or to be taken care of by the Elliotts twins, which was pretty nearly the same thing. He evidently thought it, from the first, a small matter—one of easy settlement—one which did not require that the Foreign Secretary should put forth his best energies. It is obvious that since the mismanagement in China has reached a crisis, and the almost universal voice of the Press and People of England has been raised against this mismanagement, and the degradation, which has been imposed upon the country by its efforts have been made in ministerial quarters, to avoid all reference to the subject of instructions, or to any other which might induce an exposition of the ministerial policy, and its operations, past, present and to come. The Government supporting portion of the Press has avoided, with much discretion, entering into so delicate a subject; and when forced to touch upon it, they have hurried lightly over the discussion, and said as little as possible on the subject, as though the least said is soonest mended. The great excitement produced, by the state of Politics at home, has proved greatly favourable to the Foreign Minister, who will probably, thus escape altogether those enquiries into his conduct, which at a less perturbed political season, might have been loudly called for. It has been fortunate, too, for Lord Palmerston that his indifference has been matched by Capt. Elliot's incompetence, and that the angry cries with which the latter has been denounced, have drowned the less clamorous voice, which has been raised in accusation of the former. Both are, in our opinion, deserving of strong censure; had only one of the two failed, matters would have worn a more favorable aspect, than they wear at this present moment; but neglect on one side, and incompetence on the other, have involved us, as we have rarely been involved before, in perilous and disgraceful embarrassments. The Editor of the London Spectator says, and says rightly, that Captain Elliot will be made the Downing street scape-goat. "No one can tell," writes this journalist, how the officers of the expedition might have been fettered by absurd or frightened by those instructions. Looking at the shameful way, in which Lord Palmerston left Captain Elliot's urgent appeals without any answer, and the neglect with which the whole business has been treated by the Foreign office, ever since the opening of the trade to China, it is highly probable if the truth could be got at, that Capt. Elliot (an indecisive man, no doubt, but therefore the fitter for the purpose) has been made the scape goat of Downing Street." The truth will be got at, some day, and then, we suspect, Lord Palmerston will cut a worse figure than Capt. Elliot.—Bengal Harkara.

MAULMAIN.

CENSUS OF THE POPULATION.

(From the Maulmain Chronicle, June 30.)

We have sometimes had occasion to advert to the great increase of population in Maulmain. There are few towns in the East which can boast of so rapid a growth. At present we learn from a census taken within the last month, that the fixed population amounts to 26,040; besides this number, there are 2,645 Burmese strangers from other places, who have come here as day-labourers, to remain only for a few months, making in all 28,685, exclusive of the four Regiments of Infantry, the Artillery, and camp followers. The population is estimated as follows.

Males,	10,688
Females,	13,187
Malays,	61
Chinese,	480
Foreigners (Christians, & natives of India),	2,634
Burmese day labourers, from Burmah, &c.,	2,645

No. of houses,	4,383
Monasteries,	49
In the year 1839, the population of Maulmain was ascertained to be:
Males,	8,769
Females,	8,263

Total, 17,029

Houses,	2,565
Burmese and Talaings,	14,397
Chinese,	540
Malays,	73
Natives of India,	2,019

Total, 17,029

According to the above different statements there has been an increase of males 1,929, of females 3,914, in all 5,843, and of houses 1,867, in about two years. So great an increase of population to a single town in the course of so short a time, is remarkable, but especially extraordinary is the numerical predominance of females over the males, a circumstance for which we have not at present the means of accounting; indeed, this extraordinary increase and the excess of their numbers over the males is so unusual, a circumstance, that it would seem at first sight to suggest a doubt as to the accuracy of the census-takers. We are not however by any means prepared to impute inaccuracy to the statement, as we understand the census has been twice taken, and we presume therefore, it is taken as correctly a circumstance will permit.—Sing. Free Press 3rd Sept.

SINGAPORE.

(From the Sing. Free Press of 16th Sept.)

REVENUE & EXPENDITURE OF THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—Our number of 29th July last, we published an official Statement of the Revenue and Expenditure of Singapore for the year 1840-41; and we are now enabled to lay before our readers an abstract statement of the same nature, including the whole three stations in the Straits, and in which the Revenue and charges appertaining to each station are stated separately. The abstract winds up with a very startling item in the shape of a deficit amounting to within a trifle of 8 Lakhs of rupees; but this, it will be observed, is effected by debiting the settlements with the entire charges both for the troops and convicts, without which the Revenue would be adequate to meet all the charges for the civil administration within a very few thousand rupees, as will be seen from the following analysis of the Statement; namely.

REVENUE.
Penang,	Rs.	177,393
Singapore,	"	338,796
Malacca,	"	60,817
Total Co's Rs.		576,406
CHARGES.
	Civil Establish.	Troops
Penang,	Coa. Rs. 232,247	372,816
Singapore,	" 215,794	171,352
Malacca,	" 149,815	135,195
Total Co's Rs.		597,856
		93,171

It thus appears that the combined charges for the Troops and convicts amount to Co's Rs. 772,521, or about 20,000 Co's Rs. short of the alleged deficit, amounting, according to the Statement, to Co's Rs. 793,977; and that the Revenue only falls about the same sum short of the total annual disbursements for the Civil Establishment, forming the item under the head of Local Charges in the figured Statement below; and which includes all the charges attendant upon the judicial Establishments at the three places, the expenses of the Steamer Diana &c.

The Convict force amounting in all to 1918 up to the 30th April 1841, was distributed in the following manner, namely:—

Penang.....	5-8
Singapore.....	1,162
Malacca.....	182

Total, 1918 Convicts.

The amount of Revenue set down in the abstract does not of course include the assessment Fund and Taxes collected at each of the three Stations; nor do the Charges comprise the disbursements for the maintenance of the police force, the repairing of Roads &c. of which in accordance with Act 12 of 1839, separate statements are published annually.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 23rd Oct. 1841.

We have had no arrivals during the week bringing intelligence of interest later than what we have been in possession of for about a month past; our local occurrences are equally void of interest; we are however in possession of some public documents of interest, of which we hope to be enabled, by the kindness of a friend, to lay translations before our readers in our next.

We have heard a report of an attack having been made by some Chinese upon some soldiers of the garrison at Hongkong. We have not been able to learn particulars, but suppose it to have been some chance medley.

CANTON.—Reports of further preparations of the Chinese for attack or defence have during the week been silent, and everything was proceeding quietly at Canton. Near Howqua's and Napier's fort the river has been almost totally obstructed, and Chop or Cargo boats can pass it only at high water. We have not heard anything further about the report we mentioned last week of the rebuilding of the Bogue forts.

Some Chops of new Teas had arrived, and we hear Congous quoted at 33 a 37 Taels, an enormously high price. It is said that the long continued drought interferes must with the inland navigation, and that for this reason but few teas have yet arrived. Imports of all kinds had been excessively low, and great sacrifices have been submitted to, but by the last advices there was a slight improvement in British manufactures generally, the Chinese Shopkeepers being more disposed to make purchases now, than they have been for some time previous.

A considerable improvement has taken place in Cotton, and we learn that extensive sales of Bombay have been made at 10 T. which would not have commanded more than T. 6, 5—a week ago.

CHUSAN.—The latest reports from Canton state, upon information received through Chinese, and come overland, that Chusan was again taken by the English on the 4th of this month, after four days hard fighting, for which latter singular circumstance they account by saying that an island near Chusan, strongly fortified, gave the English much annoyance. From the same authority also we learn that a high Imperial Commissioner, another Yumchas, uncle to the Emperor, was about to enter into negotiations with a view towards a speedy settlement of differences, with H. M. Plenipotentiary. These reports, however, require confirmation. Ningpo also is said by the Chinese to have been taken on the 24th Sept. (a former report said on the 28th) and that large quantity of treasure had fallen into the hands of the captors. It is very singular that we have no direct news from Chusan by sea, later than the 21st Sept., the day of the arrival of that Archipelago of part of the fleet—a vessel arrived from the coast during the week brings no news whatever. As the northwind has now begun to blow we may expect to receive the so anxiously expected intelligence every moment.

A good deal of rain has fallen during the week, and revived in some measure the husbandman's hopes.

The Emperor is at great pains to convince his people that the foreign barbarians have been defeated, and issues thanksgivings to the Gods for the manifest favor shown in repulsing them with great loss from before Canton by a most reasonable thunderstorm, and in utterly destroying them afterwards during the Typhoon. His Imperial Majesty singularly enough in thanking the Goddess of Merry for having destroyed his enemies, also rejoices at the destruction of a great number of his own subjects, who it is true he styles native traitors, but surely all that gain their livelihood upon the Chinese waters do not deserve that appellation, and yet the thunderstorm and typhoon would reach them equally. The Emperor does mention that about forty boats only belonging to natives, escaped the fury of the elements; he may perhaps mean to insinuate that these belonged to his loyal subjects exclusively. However this may be, it is certain that the great mass of the Chinese believe in the special interference by the gods in human affairs, and it is possible that therefore these Imperial Edicts may have the desired effect, at a distance at least from the scene of action, to calm the public mind. Although the lower orders of Chinese have, we believe, very little notion of any system of religion, yet they are in the strictest sense polytheists, and excessively superstitious. Their religious rites enter into almost all their every day affairs. It would be considered ominous to omit lighting scented josssticks in the morning, and placing them in a conspicuous part of a dwelling. No journey or voyage is ever undertaken without first offering sacrifice to the deity, nor any business of consequence entered on without consulting the calendar for a lucky day. Votive offerings to the altars for deliverance from danger or for some singular good fortune, and ascribed to the benevolent influence of the favorite deity of the respective persons thus benefited, are made in great number, as likewise to deprecate the divine wrath. The fear of the common Chinese of ghosts or spirits is very great, and there are few, if they may be believed, that have not seen or conversed with them. Women are frequently said to commit suicide, in order that their disembodied spirit may have the satisfaction of tormenting a faithless lover, or a cruel husband or relations. If a man comes unfairly by his death, it is supposed that his spirit will find no repose, until his murderer has been avenged. Houses haunted by evil spirits are as plentiful in China as they used to be a few centuries back in Europe. There is in fact no end to the numerous superstitions clouding the intellect of Chinese, and it may probably therefore, be very good policy in the Emperor to avail himself to this feeling in the people, for political purposes, nor is it altogether unlikely that he should share in the same opinions. One thing however seems to be certain that the gods will be as unwilling to extricate the Chinese from their dangers unless they defend themselves, as Hercules was to assist the waggoner he put until his own shoulder to the wheel.

IMPERIAL PROMOTIONS.

From the Peking Gazette.

The Emperor's commands have been received as follows; It appears that on a former occasion Yang memorialized in relation to the rebellious barbarians. They desired to enter the river of the provincial city, (Canton) but our officers and troops energetically attacked them and drove them out. The imperial will has been handed down ordering that the matter of the officers and men having thus exerted their strength be taken up and definitely examined into and reported to the throne accordingly. Whereupon in obedience to the imperial will a list has in genuine truth been made out and presented for his majesty's inspection that due and proper favours may be awarded. [Here follows a very long list of promotions for glorious deeds performed in actions against the rebellious English. Has Yang really been thus successful in imposing upon the Emperor? or does the Emperor know better and worship lies through fear of the truth?]

PROMOTIONS FOR DEEDS PERFORMED AT CHUSAN &c.

From the Peking Gazette.

The imperial commands have been received as follows; Yuh keen having clearly examined into the merits of the officers and men who excited their strength in seizing alive or killing the barbarian banditti, has made out a list and presented a document for imperial inspection. The English last year invaded and attacked the Province of Che keang in the regions of Taze ke and Yu Yew (Chusan). Already have both civil and military officers despatched official messengers who have taken alive as well as put to death many names of the barbarians, and have laid schemes so that their vessels have been enticed and fallen into inextricable quicksands, and the said barbarians dare not now be found spying about in the inner land. And moreover from the sixth month of last year up to the present time the said regions (in Chusan) have been prepared and guarded against the barbarians by Mandarins and people, official messengers, and office clerks.

Let those who have but little merit, and those who have in a still greater degree exerted their strength be all with favors duly rewarded accordingly, that receiving them they may be stimulated to animated exertion. [Here follow any amount of meritorious promotions.]

P. S. The Gazette also notice fresh difficulties and great suffering caused by the incorrigible Yellow River having again overflowed its banks and inundating extensive and populous districts. The Emperor discharges the high officers who had charge of the embankments and appoints other civil and military officers to make vigorous exertions for the immediate repair of the breaches.

From the Canton Register 19th Oct.

The following imperial edict has been received. Yikshan and his colleagues have reported concerning the provincial city of Canton province, and the manifestation of the favour of the Gods, and that votive tablets be offered—(as a thanksgiving)

It is authenticated in the report that at that time the English barbarians were causing disturbances, and had approached near the city walls, and had opened their fire on Yuesan hill; when the goddess Kwanyin manifested her divine power in the sight of all the people, by extinguishing the rockets; a storm of thunder and rain immediately followed, darting down and exterminating very many native traitors and barbarian banditti; the barbarians were in the greatest fear.

At present the disturbances on the ocean being ended the city has resumed its quiet, the country being guarded and the people protected—by the influence of the goddess Kwanyin.

I, the emperor, looking up, seek for the favour of the Gods, and am moved by the most respectful gratitude. I order that votive tablets, in scribbed by my own hand, be sent to and respectfully received by Yikshan and his colleagues, and be reverently sent to the temples, and be there suspended with the profoundest reverence, in answering gratitude for the protection of the goddess. Respect this.—6 moon, 10 day, (July 27th.)

THE TYPHOONS.

The following imperial edict has been received. Yikshan and his colleagues have reported that the ocean has been agitated by typhoons, and the public offices and landing places of the English barbarians entirely destroyed, and one ship wrecked.

By the report it is authenticated that on the 4th day of the 6th moon (July 21st) between the hours of 3 and 5 a.m. a typhoon commenced which forced the waves to run mountains high, and at the same time torrents of rain descended. The large and small barbarian vessels anchored in Tsomakake (the Typa) were sunk by the waves, and the great and small flower-boats belonging to native traitors, were either entirely destroyed, or driven out to sea; of those that have escaped, large and small, the number exceeds forty. The masts of all the ships were carried away, and of the barbarian banditti and native traitors the number drowned exceeds calculation; all the tents and mat-sheds were blown away by the wind, none were saved. The new built landing places were swept clean away, and nothing left but an empty space, and the sea was covered with floating corpses. Such is the report.

I, the emperor, having turned over and looked at the rest, feel most grateful for heaven's favours; but while thus rejoicing in happiness, I should also entertain a wholesome dread of heaven's awful majesty—(rejoice with trembling). The cup of the iniquities of the said barbarians is full; their disorderly and illegal conduct has destroyed the people; long and much have they travelled in unrighteous paths; but at last they must bow their heads to heaven's extermination. All this has been accorded by secret silent influences; the intelligent Gods aid and protect in silence. The murderous influences are swept clean away, and the boundaries of ocean are established in quiet. It is proper that we should with sincerity burn incense, to offer up our righteous thoughts. I order Yikshan and his colleagues to go in person to all the temples and reverently announce my thanksgivings; and on the 29th day of the moon, to fast and sleep within the city; and on the 30th day to perform all the ceremonies in the different temples. I further order the Tschangking, to reverently attend to all the preparations. RESPECT THIS. 7th moon—5th day (August 21) By J. S. ED. C. R.

THE CASE OF CAPTAIN DUNBAR, AND THE MUTINY ON BOARD OF THE COWASJEE FAMILY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BRITISH HURKARU.

SIR,—You have many times remarked that the Press is a Court of last resort, and that when redress under grievous hardship, has been sought for in vain before other tribunals, an injured party, has an appeal to the press as a matter of right. That right I now claim, and I am confident that in consistency with your principles you will recognise it. I am told that it is a maxim of law, that there is no wrong without a remedy; but certain it is that as far as the law is concerned, that maxim is deceptive. There are wrongs which are beyond the reach of law, and which set its tribunals at defiance. Such, sir, happens to be my case, because I have been accused and imprisoned upon a charge of a highly criminal nature, and denied a trial. I have been denied the first privilege of an Englishman—a trial. It is a grievous thing for a Captain of a merchant vessel, to be compelled to have recourse to violence against his crew or his subordinate officers, and no man ought to be presumed to have done so, excepting under circumstances of the utmost necessity, where fatal consequences could only be averted by such means. But, sir, when a ship's commander, entrusted with the charge of the lives of his crew and the property of his employers, is compelled, for the safety of both, to commit an act of necessary violence, towards one or more of those under his command, he ought to be regarded as one who, from the responsibility of his trust, is reluctantly forced upon the sacrifice of his feelings, towards offending individuals, for the preservation of the lives and property placed under his charge. At any rate, when compelled to restrain the desperation of men, who renounce all control, but that of violence, he is put upon the hard alternative, of either aiming at the life of an individual of his crew, or of quietly witnessing the destruction of others, or of being destroyed himself—he is, when accused of such an act as a crime, entitled to a fair trial, and an acquittance in the face of the whole world. That which has been my case, may to-day or to-morrow be the case of any commander of a ship that sails; and surely it is the interest of every ship's commander, as well of every ship-owner, merchant and passenger, to see justice done to one who has been compelled to the cruel necessity of raising his hand against the life of one of his subordinates. Such, sir, has been the cruel position in which I have been placed. I was compelled, under the circumstances which I shall presently relate, to fire a pistol shot at my chief mate, by which he was severely wounded, for which act I was taken into custody by Captain Elliot, the Superintendent of the trade in China, and kept in confinement during six months; but from that day to this I have been denied a trial; the consequence of which is, that malignant tongues have had full scope to attack my character, and misrepresentations and falsehoods of the grossest nature have been spread abroad, relative to the unfortunate affair which is the subject of this letter; and, as my only resource, I address myself to the public press, for the vindication of my character.

I now, sir, proceed to a narration of the transaction, to which my present communication has reference. If in doing so I impugn the reputation of my officer, I beg that you, and the public, will bear in mind, that I am constrained to do so in self defence; otherwise I should have been willing to bury the past in oblivion, particularly as my mate had, ever before, discharged his duties, and conducted himself, in the most unexceptionable manner; and very sorry would I be, indeed, if he were to suffer still further for his misconduct, though my worldly prospects have been nearly ruined, in consequence of his insane proceedings, and the injustice of Capt. Elliot, Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary in China, and Mr. Bonham, the Governor of Singapore. On the morning of the first of March 1840, about 2 a.m., waking and hearing no person moving about the decks of the barque Cowasjee Family, which was under my command, and then lying at anchor in the Bay of Hongkong, laden with a valuable cargo, and preparing to proceed towards the East Coast of China, I went on the poop, which I found to be wholly unguarded, not a single individual being awake. The seacunny was lying asleep close to the mizen mast, although it was his watch. He was awakened by me, and after I had reprimanded him for his negligence in being asleep, I inquired of him what officer should be in charge of the deck. He informed me it was the chief officer's watch, who I found was lying asleep, upon his chest in his cabin. I then ordered the seacunny to call him, and upon his coming on deck, I remonstrated with him in a kind manner upon the danger to which he exposed the vessel and crew, in consequence of being asleep, when in charge of the ship; more particularly at a time when he was well aware, in consequence of an attempt of that nature having been made the night previously, and which we had escaped with difficulty, that the ship, and lives on board, were hourly exposed to the greatest danger from the fire rafts which the Chinese had in preparation to destroy the whole British Fleet, then lying in the Bay of Hongkong. Instead of his receiving the reprimand in a proper spirit, he became very insolent, and I was, therefore, obliged to request him to go to his cabin, saying that I would speak to him the next morning. He refused to comply with this order in very offensive language; consequently I told him, that unless he obeyed me I should compel him by force. After some consideration he rushed into his cabin, drawing the door to with great violence, and there he remained about 15 or 20 minutes. In the mean time I had provided myself with a great-coat, &c., and had seated myself in a chair upon the poop, with my feet upon the brass rail, with the intention of keeping the watch until day light—the second officer having had the first watch. I was, however, surprised to see the chief mate, Mr. Williams, open his cabin door and rush on the poop. He immediately opened a volley of abuse upon me, demanded redress for being confined to his cabin, and tried all that he possibly could to irritate and make me strike him. But on finding that he could not succeed in inducing me to do so, and that I was perfectly cool and collected, he put his fist against my face, in a threatening attitude, calling me at the same time a "bloody coward," and following up this expression with a blow on the mouth. I immediately attempted to rise from the chair, but was unable to do so, in consequence of his placing his knee between my legs, and holding me down with his left arm, while he kept assaulting me with his right hand,—and from my legs being entangled between the brass railings, as well as being confined in a great coat, &c., I found it impossible to extricate myself from him. I then called out to the seacunny for assistance, and upon his answering me, Mr. Williams immediately released his hold, saying, "wait till I get my pistols," and rushed from the poop to his cabin. Fearing that he might, from the frantic state in which he appeared, be induced to commit some rash act, I followed him down, with the view of preventing him, if possible, from perpetrating any further violence. On entering his cabin I found that his back was towards me, and perceived that he had a pistol in his left hand, his right arm being extended in the act of taking another pistol from the bracket, in which it was placed. The first thing that I did was to secure the pistol, which he held in his left hand, and on doing so, he turned round upon me and knocked me down with the pistol in his right hand, cutting my head open and beating me senseless. On my coming to myself, I found the blood streaming down my face, from the wound in my head, and felt very faint and suffered great pain. On my leaving the cabin I heard the second officer,—who was dressed only in his shirt and trousers, and I supposed him in consequence to have just risen from his bed,—remonstrating with Mr. Williams, on the starboard side of the quarter-deck. I distinctly heard the second officer say to Mr. Williams, "Why don't you go to your cabin and keep yourself quiet? You see that you have wounded the Captain—you will be sorry for this to-morrow." From the poop I then requested the second officer to secure Mr. Williams, to prevent his doing any more mischief, stating at the same time, that he had already wounded me. Upon hearing what I said, Mr. Williams replied, "Neither you, nor he, nor any such b—s like you, can do it," and rushing into the cuddy, took from the stand of arms a loaded musket, and proceeded with it on deck, snapping it at the crew, who had by this time come aft with the view of securing him. They, on being threatened ran away and hid themselves, some in the main rigging and others forward, Mr. Williams chasing some few that had remained round the capstan; but, fortunately, the musket would not go off, from the badness of the fire. Upon his finding the defects, he said, "Wait a little; I will damn soon find one that will go off," and returned into the cuddy, to procure another musket. In the interim I, considering it high time to bring things to a more decided bearing, went to my cabin and armed myself with a brace of pistols, which were always kept there loaded, and returned to the poop. Mr. Williams, on returning to the quarter-deck, appeared to be searching for me, saying "Where is the b—r," and turning round upon his heel discharged the contents of the loaded musket directly at me, the ball passing close over my head. After this he appeared more frantic than ever, and swore that he would blow up the magazine. Hearing this I became much alarmed, knowing that he had the key in his possession. He then took a light from his cabin, and deliberately removed the apron from a twelve pounder, loaded with round shot and cannister, and discharged it, the shot passing over the fore-castle of the Royal Saxon, and nearly killing the watch upon deck. Mr. Willins then came upon the poop, with the intention of again attacking me, upon which I desired him to go to his cabin several times, and solemnly warned him, that if he advanced another step towards me, I would shoot him. He, however, persisted in his intemperance, and I fired at him, upon which he dropped the pistol upon the deck, to ded his arms across his breast, and said—"Now, I suppose, I must go down"—and walked from the poop to his cabin and laid himself in his bed.

Such, Sir, is a strict and accurate narrative of this unfortunate transaction; and I confidently put it to my fellow countrymen, whether or not any alternative was left to me to act otherwise than I did. But by such an act, however unavoidable, I became amenable to the laws of my country, and I calmly surrendered myself to the local authorities, to take my trial.

I need not inform you, Sir, that a special tribunal was created a few years ago, by act of Parliament, to hold jurisdiction in the China Seas, and that several trials have taken place therein; and such being the case, I naturally expected that I should be immediately put upon my trial. Instead of this, however, I learned, to my equal astonishment and concern, that Captain Elliot, the Chief Superintendent, had determined on sending me a prisoner to Singapore, to be tried before the Court of that settlement, at a distance from the spot where the transaction occurred, and where I should necessarily be deprived of the evidence of all witnesses. Against such a proceeding I entered a strong protest; but in vain. I was sent away without trial to Singapore, where, on my arrival, I was committed to prison on the authority only of a private note from Mr. Bonham, the Governor. In this prison I remained during a period of two months, was refused a trial, and finally discharged, upon my own recognizance.

Such, Sir, is the wrong of which I complain; a wrong which has occasioned me incalculable anxiety of mind, the most serious injury to my professional character and future prospects, and for which I am left entirely without remedy, except in as far as I may hope for the assistance of the Public Press, for the vindication of my character. To that tribunal I appeal with confidence, in the consciousness of having acted as every commander of a ship must act, when placed in the same position of emergency.

In corroboration of the above statement, I beg leave to attach hereto a copy of a letter received by me, when at Singapore, from Mr. Willins, the party whom I was unfortunately reduced to the necessity of discharging a pistol upon; on board of the Cowagee Family, on the morning of the first of March last.

I have the honor to remain,

Sir, yours most obediently.

CHARLES DUNBAR.

Calcutta 26th July, 1841.

CHARLES DUNBAR, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—No doubt you are as tired of remaining at Singapore, as I am of remaining in China, unemployed, I am very sorry to observe, these last two months and upwards, waiting for a conveyance to Singapore, to procure your acquittal. Dadaiboy Rustomjee, when I left the hospital, in which place I was 114 days, sent me on board a vessel belonging to himself, where I have remained up to this present period, at my own expense. My dear Sir, you are fully aware, that we are both at a great loss for so many months lost time; but we must hope for the best. I hope and trust your feelings are to me, as mine are to you, and, that no animosity exists between us. God above knows that I have long and long ago forgiven you, and so again, both solemnly and sincerely forgiven you, for what occurred, to my detriment, on the 1st of March, which I regret to say, I shall have cause to remember as long as I exist. An opportunity now offers me to procure employment, and I think it needless for me to go to Singapore, (enclosed you will find for your perusal a copy of a letter, or doctor's certificate will procure your acquittal; in the mean time allow me to say, with the greatest pleasure, I do hereby wholly and solemnly acquit and forgive you, for what has occurred and passed, and that I have no claim or demand whatsoever on you, for injuries received, and in hopes the lawful authorities at Singapore will release and liberate you (Charles Dunbar) and allow you to proceed to any part of the Globe, you may think proper to journey to,

is the sincere wish of yours most respectfully,

NATHANIEL WILLINS.

Given under my hand and seal, this eleventh day of September, in the year our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and forty,—Captain Moore.

LEADING ARTICLE.—We remember hearing Lord Lyndhurst state at a public dinner, that it was only those who had tried to write leading articles who knew the difficulty of producing any that would be read.

Lord Lyndhurst, like almost every other prominent public man, has doubtless adventured in this field; and if his great talents stumbled in the path, who can travel it without sometimes halting? Yet, according to the general opinion, nothing is easier than to strike off, currente calame, a newspaper article or a political essay. Those who think this, have either never tried it, or have been blindly partial to their own bantlings. Every one remembers the story of that American gentleman who conceived the idea that, in his then present circumstances, the plan of becoming a popular preacher was the best that he could adopt. Few careers are more inviting, and our friend from the far west built himself a log convention, and reared in the middle of it a very lofty and respectable pulpit. The day of opening arrived and his new building was crowded. Nothing could be more successful. He climbed his pulpit, and then, for the first time, it suggested itself to him that it was possible for a man not to be quite ex fait an extemporaneous sermon. He kept his congregation in anxious suspense for many a long minute. He cleared his throat, and got three times to the middle of an opening sentence; but finding that the enterprise was desperate, he at last addressed his astonished auditors thus: "If any one of you down there thinks it's the easiest thing in the world to preach, let him just come up here and try." So saw we as to the less grave task of political instruction. But the newspaper writer is even worse off than this gentleman was, for he had a multitude of texts open to him; and the vices of mankind afforded him an infinite variety of subjects for instructive exhortation. He was not compelled to be new, or smart, or eloquent; he was not obliged to interest and to excite. His auditors were before him, and they were bound to listen. Not so the unhappy parrot to the public appetite for political pamphlets. He must be ever smart, witty, pungent, and, alas! his subjects also must be ever new. If an one thinks this easy, let him see the listless contempt with which papers are just now taken up, glanced at for a moment, and thrown down upon the table. If any one thinks it a common capacity, let him look at the dullness of some papers, even when topics are frequent, and let him mark the uninteresting dreariness of even the best of our journals, at this dull period of the year. —[London Atlas.]

OVERLAND MAIL.

From the London Mail of 4th August.

The quarterly account of the revenue has been published. As compared with the quarter ended 5th July, 1840, it exhibits a decrease of 3,661. But taking the ordinary revenue, there is an increase of 148,646. In the Customs there is a decrease of 289,348, in the Stamps a decrease of 48,830, while in the Excise there is an increase of 88,360. In the Taxes 392,888, and in the Post-office 19,000. The year ended 5th July, 1841, as compared with the year ended 5th July, 1840, exhibits a decrease of 325,647; but, taking the ordinary, only a decrease of 237,407. The decrease on the year's revenue is, in the Customs 856,991, in the Post-office 645,000; while the increase in the Excise is 131,090, in the stamps 31,664, and in the Taxes 649,471. The decrease in the Post-office for the year is easily accounted for, the reduction having commenced with the third quarter of year ended 5th July, 1840.

July 7.—The boy Jones, who on so many occasions effected an entrance in Buckingham Palace, has been sent off to New South Wales. The female box constrictor at the Jardin des Plantes recently hatched three eggs, and the three young serpents that have issued from them are of the greatest beauty. The Earl of Cardigan was balloted for as a member of the Senior United Service Club, on the 6th July. There were 28 black and 166 white balls. The noble earl was therefore rejected, and the consequence of the rejection is, that he cannot be again proposed as a member for ten years. It so happens that the other fourteen candidates, and among them the Major of the Eleventh Hussars, were all admitted.

July 10.—An address of condolence from the President and Council of the Royal Academy has been transmitted to the brother and sister of the late Sir David Wilkie. In connexion with the failure of Messrs Whitmore, Wells & Co., bankers, there have been two other stoppages, one of the bank of Messrs Dainty, Hyle & Co., of Manchester, and the other of Messrs Dainty and Ryley's bank, of Macclesfield. Both these banks drew upon the London house, and had done so for many years. The highly respectable firm of Messrs Ladbroke & Co., bankers, have determined to wind up their affairs, not from any embarrassment, but merely from a desire of retiring from business.

A medal has just been engraved and struck by Mr. A. J. Stothard, to record the return of Lord John Russell as representative of the City of London. The obverse exhibits the head of his lordship, surrounded by the inscription, "The Right Hon. Lord John Russell, M. P. and beneath his head, the date of his last victory. The likeness is excellent, and the engraving executed in the artist's well-known and effective style. The reverse bears, within an appropriate wreath of wheat ears, the inscription of the watch words of true and enlightened Reformers "free trade," which is rendered still more comprehensive by the legend, "per mare per terram."

Letters from Constantinople state that the Sultan's health had become so much worse, that little hope was entertained of his ultimate recovery. The epileptic fits to which he is subject were becoming more frequent, yet was he, if possible, more and more the inmate of the harem.

The operations against the wrecks of the Negut George and Bayne are carried on with great success. From the latter the most curious thing recovered and brought up in the scoop, was a beautifully ornamented brass field piece of three inches and a quarter calibre and four feet in extreme length. It has the following inscription in Swedish, translated by Mr. Vauderburgh, of this town:—"With God's help, by King Charles XII., taken at the battle of Clissow, 9th July, 1702." This battle was fought between Augustus, King of Poland, and Charles, on the plains between Cracow and Warsaw, the former having about 24,000 men, and the latter little more than half that number, yet Charles gained a complete victory and took possession of the enemy's camp, baggage, cannon, &c., of which the one now recovered was one. It seems somewhat curious that this gun was raised from the deep on the anniversary of the day Charles took it from the Poles. In addition to the above inscription, this gun has also the following:—"F.A.H.Z.S.I.C.B." and under this, "E.U.W.C.H.U.R.F." and under this again there is a shield having on it two words crossed. The operations are still proceeding.

July 31.—The bank of Messrs Wise, Farwell, Baker, and Bentall, of Newton Abbot, has suspended payment, which will have a fearful effect all through South Devon.

The Globe says—"On 31st that the Queen has heard of the vain boast of Sir Robert, that if he came into power, he would make her a Tory (a Conservative as he said) in six weeks; and that the baronet is, consequently, more disliked than ever at head quarters.

The experiments with percussion shells having been concluded for the present at Woolwich, the result has been such as to afford this country great cause of satisfaction, so far as our superiority as a nation possessing the most powerful engines of destruction in a military point of view is concerned, as it has been proved that we have the best means of defence or punishment to those who might attack us of any of the other European Powers. When the experiments with percussion shells were made last year in France, it was ascertained that under the most favorable circumstances not one in four exploded; but by the experiments made in Woolwich marshes it has been demonstrated that under every circumstance the shells invented by Mr. Keese have exploded without fail, although they have been about eight months lying in the Royal arsenal, the same period as Mr. Napier's and Mr. Wilkinson's. Out of Mr. Napier's seven, five exploded, and out of Mr. Wilkinson's seven, three or four exploded, one being doubtful on the previous occasion. The result of the experiments is day render it probable that from some variation in the marking of the degrees of the elevations of the gun from which his shell were fired, they might have grazed the ground, and caused the explosions as they have been reported.

July 23.—The death of Sir E. Montagu and that of Lady Emma Wemyss are announced. Intelligence has been received of the failure of the eminent banking-house of Geymuller and Co. of Vienna.

At Minto House, on the 30th ult., Lord John Russell, M. P. Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, was married by special licence to Lady Frances Anna Maria Elliot, second daughter of the Earl and Countess of Minto. The Rev Gilbert Elliot officiated at the ceremony, in the presence of a select circle of relatives, comprising the Earl and Countess of Minto; Lord and Lady Dufferin; Lord Edward Russell, Lord Melgund, Lady Elizabeth Elliot, Hon Admiral George Elliot; Captain

Elliot, &c. The Earl of Minto gave the bride away, and the Misses Richardson were the bridesmaids on the happy occasion. The noble lord and lady started about 4 o'clock for Bowhill, the seat of the Duke of Buccleugh, near Selkirk, where they purpose residing until the second week in the ensuing month. A grand ball was given by the Earl and Countess of Minto to the family tenantry, to which nearly 800 had been invited. A sumptuous fête was also to be given on the lawn, for which great preparations were made. There were two bands engaged, and the paper was considered one of the first in Scotland.

July 29.—The Totness and Newton banks have suspended payment.

August 3.—Sir H. Vivian is to be created Lord Truro.—The 24th, 34th, and 65th regiments have arrived from India. By the census returns of the City of London and Liberty of Westminster, it appears that the increase of population since 1831 amounts to nearly 200,000; the total at present being 1,139,433.—A favourable change in the weather had produced a change in the reports of the crops, which promised well in most quarters, but the weather is again broken.

Aut. 3.—The great iron steamer at Bristol will probably combine a greater number and variety of untried principles than ever before united in one enterprise of the same magnitude and importance. The vessel herself—her enormous magnitude—her material (plate iron)—her engines, nearly 1,300 horse power—her cylinders, 120 inches in diameter!—no piston rods!—no beams!—the connecting rod laying hold immediately on the piston, and a moveable hollow casting playing through a stuffing-box in the top of the piston, to give play to the said connecting rod—an unlimited application of the expansive principle—and, to crown all, no paddle-wheels!—no paddle boxes projecting from her sides!—no apparent propelling power; but an unseen agent revolving under her quarters, and enabling her to "walk the waters like a thing of life."

PARLIAMENT.

The Elections are now over, and the result has disappointed Reformers and given an augmentation to the Conservative strength in Parliament, which the Conservative leaders could not have anticipated. That a large number of English counties would pass from Liberal hands, was of course to be expected; but it was never imagined that Lords Morpeth and Milton would be rejected in West Yorkshire, Lord Howick in North Northumberland, Mr. J. E. Stanley in North Cheshire, Mr. Trevelyan in East Cornwall, Mr. Noel in Rutlandshire; and scarcely to be supposed that Mr. Hanley was to be defeated in South Lincolnshire, or Mr. Alston in Hertfordshire. In Ireland, too, Reformers have been deceived. For instead of recruiting their ranks, as they expected, they have sustained a loss of ten seats which were considered quite secure—two in the country Dublin, where the Conservative strength has undoubtedly increased—one in the country Wicklow, where Mr. Grattan attributes defeat to conduct of Lord Fitzwilliam's agents—two in Carlow county, where the Sheriff is accused of unfair conduct, with some appearance of probability—two in Dublin city, where O'Connell and Huston had a considerable majority, which however, was disfranchised by the assessor, in consequence of the word "premise" appearing in the certificate of registry, a decision which usurps, to say the least of it, the jurisdiction of the House of Commons—two in Waterford city, and one in Athlone, under precisely similar circumstances, so that the result of the general election, entering the double return for Theiford on both sides, stands thus:—

	Reformers.	Tories.
English Boroughs....	176	166
English Counties....	32	137
Scotland.....	34	89
Ireland.....	62	43
Total	291	385

From this it will be seen that the Conservative majority in the new house will be at least 72.

In the face of such majority as this it would be quite impossible for the present ministry to retain office. Their resignation has been determined upon, but it will take place under circumstances which show their determination to pursue a line of bold and determined policy, as may be collected from—Lord John Russell's Manifesto to the Electors of the City of London.

IRELAND.

The Earl of Portescue, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was united to Lady Somerville, at the Viceroyal Lodge, Phoenix Park Dublin, on the 26th July, by the Lord Bishop of Cashell.

The Right. Hon. Richard Baron Castlemaine has been chosen to be the peer to sit in the House of Lords of the United Kingdom, in the room of Comerser Lowry, Earl of Belmore, deceased.

Mr. O'Connell's defeat for Dublin is said to be in some degree owing to his support of "teetotalism," which has drawn down upon him the hostility of the Vintners. During the election there was considerable rioting.

FRANCE.

The South of France has been seriously troubled in consequence of the fiscal measures of the Finance Minister. Toulouse was barricaded, and the Prefect feared to employ the National Guards in taking them down. He employed the troops of the line, and subsequently the National Guards, who however fraternised with the populace, and the Prefect was obliged to fly. Active measure have been taken, and tranquillity is comparatively restored; but both at Toulouse, Carcassonne, and Montauban, much dissatisfaction prevails.

The three days were celebrated at Toulouse even without exciting a tumult. The extraordinary-commissary had suspended the National Guard of the town from its duties; and the National Guard of Martres, which had openly evinced sympathy with the revolvers of Toulouse, had been dissolved.

SPAIN.

In the sitting of the Senate on the 9th July the President of the Council brought in a bill to the effect that the government be authorised to cede to Great Britain the Islands of Fernando Po and Annabon, in consideration of a sum of 60,000*l.* sterling offered by Great Britain conformable to a special convention to be signed by her Catholic Majesty and her Britannic Majesty, to be submitted to the Cortes after being ratified. The President then proposed that the bill be referred to a committee.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

August 4.—There is some report in circulation that General Hill is so succeeded to the command at Madras Sir Hugh Gough going on to Bengal. Sir C. Fitz Roy has been appointed governor of Antigua and its dependencies. A letter from Paris states that General Harland, formerly in the service of Dost Mohammed has been in communication with M. Thiers and Count Pahlen, and by special invitation of the Russian Government has proceeded to St. Petersburg. There is no truth in the report that the Marquis de Landolowne is seriously indisposed.

On the 3rd another large failure took place in Manchester, and more hands have been thrown out of work. On the night of the 1st we learn that the number of individuals then out of employment from the stoppage of different mills, amounted to no fewer than 4000. This is really an awful state of things.

We are sorry to hear very bad accounts of the state of trade in Dundee. A failure of a mill-spinning concern took place a fortnight ago, with obligations to the extent of nearly 100,000*l.*, which has involved others to a very serious amount. Several foreign houses in the flax-trade, it is also understood, will be considerable losers by these failures, and that, added to the general depression in trade, had affected the Baltic trade greatly at this, the usually busiest season.

There is at present an exhibition at 209, Regent-street, a model in ivory, of the celebrated Tappan Muhul. This model was brought to this country from India (?) To whom was it presented?

It is said that Lord and Lady Howick have arranged to spend the long period of two years on the Continent. The noble lord's health, it is understood, is not altogether satisfactory.

The Assistant Barristership of the country of Limerick is vacant by the death of Mr. Malaholli Fallon.

The population of Manchester is 308,893, being an increase of upwards of 30 per cent. in the last 10 years.

The population of Glasgow is 280,674, being an increase of 78,250 persons in the last 10 years.

The Morning Post of this morning announces, on authority, that Sir Robert Peel has intimated to Mr. Shaw Lefevre that he will support his re-election as Speaker.

A most extraordinary charge of conspiracy to commit felony has been made against the High Sheriff of Cardiganshire, the Chairman of the Quarter Sessions, and about forty other magistrates and gentlemen of that country; and of felony against two gentlemen for stealing the Aberyswith poll-books, by Mr. Pryse, M. P. for the Cardigan Boroughs.

FRANCE.—The affair of Toulouse is the all absorbing topic of discussion in Paris. The government continued to act with firmness and decision with respect to it, but most moderate men feared that Ministers were proceeding too fast and too far. The Moniteur publishes the Royal ordinances dissolving the National Guard and the Municipal Council of Toulouse; and the prefect of Upper Garonne is directed to convoke to assembly of the municipal electors the elect a new municipal council.

SPAIN.—M. Arguelles, the new Guardian to the Queen, was sworn into office on the 26th July, in the presence of the two Legislative bodies assembled in the Hall of the Senate.

FRANCE.—Accounts from Algiers mention that Mascara, of old abandoned, is now re-occupied by 2,000 French, who have provisions to last them till October. This means that the garrison cannot communicate with their countrymen, nor with Algiers, till that time. General Lamoriciere had quitted Mascara, and returned to Mostaganem. Several engagements had taken place in which French arms were victorious.

The King of Sardinia was out riding in his park on 28th July. The horse having run away, his Majesty had a dangerous fall, and his foot remaining in the stirrup he was dragged along by the horse several minutes. An abundant bleeding, which was immediately resorted to, restored some degree of confidence to the persons whom the news of the accident had greatly alarmed.

TURKEY.

On the 13th July there was signed, in London by the Plenipotentiaries of Austria, France, Great Britain, Prussia, Russia, and Turkey, the Convention about the Straits of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, which has long been agreed on the initiative, but the signature of which had been delayed till it should be known that Mehemet Ali had accepted the firman of the Sultan. The signature of this Convention puts an end to that schism between France and the Four Powers which had arisen out of the different views which France and the Four Powers had taken as to the practical measures best adapted to carry into effect the general principles which France and the Four Powers equally maintained in theory; and thus an additional security has been obtained for the continuance of that state of peace which every European power is so deeply interested in preserving. The ratifications of the Convention will be exchanged as soon as they can be received from the respective courts; The object of the Convention is to render general to all the Five Powers the engagement which subsists between Great Britain and Turkey by the eleventh article of the treaty of 1809, and by which the Sultan declares his intention of closing the two straits against ships of war of all nations as long as Turkey is at peace.

AMERICA.

The anniversary of the declaration of American independence was celebrated on the 5th July, the 4th, falling on a Sunday.

Major-General Scott had been nominated by the President as Commander-in-Chief of the army of the United States, vice Major-General Alexander Macomb, deceased. The Senate had confirmed the President's nomination.

The remains of General Harrison have been removed, under the superintendence of committees of of both houses of the legislature, from the Congress burying-ground, and sent, under a military escort, to the late President's residence, at North Bend.

The President, Mr. Tylet, is said to be very much worn down by the cares state.

The widow of Gen. Harrison is to have a sum equal to the salary of President for one year.

Meetings to promote the repeal of the union between England and Ireland says Publicus, the correspondent of the Morning Chronicle, are increasing in all the towns and cities of America. In Philadelphia the Repeal Association has been joined by several learned judges of the law.

In the American papers some curious diplomatic letters have been published, addressed by Mr. Stevenson, the British Minister in London, dated March 8th; and by Mr. J. H. Powell, during Mr. Stevenson's temporary absence in Paris, dated March 11th; addressed to Commodore Hull, the United States Commander in Chief on the Mediterranean station. The letters are written in a semi-official strain, warning Commodore Hull of the hostile aspect of affairs both in England and America in respect to the M'Leod question, and recommending his return to America: Would it not be the most judicious course," says Mr. Stevenson, "to get nearer home?" Mr. Powell was much startled by the cheering of Lord Melbourne's assurance in the House of Lords, that "succor" should be sent to Mr. M'Leod, and by the "violent and warlike tone" of the committee of congress on foreign affairs and the Legislature of Maine. Commodore Hull took immediate steps to comply with the suggestions in these letters.

The supreme court, sitting at Utica, has delivered its judgment in the matter of Alexander M'Leod. The court denies the application for the discharge of the prisoner, and orders that he be remanded to take his trial in the ordinary form of law. He was accordingly recommitted to the custody of the sheriff. The counsel for M'Leod would, it was supposed, sue out a writ of error, or carry the case to the court for the correction of errors. It was also supposed that if the court of errors should affirm the decision of the supreme court of the state New York, an appeal would be carried to the supreme court of the United States.

The decision had, on its first promulgation, alarmed the friends of peace, who feared that the course pursued in the case of M'Leod might issue in war between Great Britain and the United States. The alarm had however, considerably abated, from the belief that Mr. Fox would patiently await the course of events.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

SILK.—At the public sale the quantity offered was about 1,530 bales Bengal, 550 bales China, and 270 bales Canton; a very large proportion was sold at fully previous prices. Bengal current quality of good and even, realising an advance of 3 to 5 per cent, and in some instances 10 to 12½ per cent in consequence of the large stock of low quality; several parcels were taken in. Since public sales very little business has been done, but prices generally remain firm.

In Turkey and Persian Silk fair business has been done at about previous prices.

THE TEA MARKET.

LONDON, 3d August.

The Public sales of Tea since our report on the 2d July have been confined to three, viz.

That of the 15th inst, 12,000 packages of which 8200 sold
" 20th	16,000
" 27th	17,000
	44,000
	24,000

There was a good demand in the early part of the month after the arrival of the Overland Mail, principally by the Dealers, at gradually improving rates.

On the 18th—19,000 Packages were offered by Public sale, of which two thirds found buyers at a further advance of 1d. to 1½d. per lb. on Congou, and 1d. per lb. on Twankay. Great spirit for purchase on the part of the Trade having been manifested at the commencement, though much less evident towards the close.

These improved rates caused several parcels to be brought into the Market for sale the next day, the desire of many being to take immediate advantage of the rise, and this impatience on the part of sellers, coupled with the knowledge of sales being already declared for the following week, produced a reaction to fully the extent of the recent advance.

On the 20th—15,000 Packages were put up to sale, and nearly half sold, at rates on a par with those of the previous market—thus establishing the decline which had taken place since the sales of the 13th—viz to the extent of 1d. to 1½d. on Congou, and ½d to 1d. on Twankay.

Subsequently the market presented a dull appearance, but prices were maintained until the sales.

On the 27th when 17,000 Packages were brought to auction.—Of this quantity there were not less than 5,500 Packages Junk Tea from Singapore—nearly the whole of which were sold at prices about 2d per lb. under the last Public Sale.—On Congou there were only 4800 chests, and the portion sold went off readily at an advance of nearly 1d. per lb.—On the 30th the second Edition of the Times appeared conveying intelligence, that the Overland Mail had arrived at Marseilles, but that there was not any information from China—Company's Congous opened early in the morning at 2s 3½d money, the price of the previous day rose to 2s. 4d. at which considerable transactions took place and closed on change at 2s 4½d. money. In Free Trade Tea the business was limited, and about 3d. to 10. per lb. advance was obtained.—On the 31st, Free Trade rose ½ per lb.—(there being a brisk demand of the Trade) and Company's to 2s 5d. each. Yesterday the letters by the Overland Mail were delivered, the dates from China were only two days later than those last received, but tended strongly to confirm the former reports regarding the Emperor's hostile views towards the British—an immediate advance took place, considerable transactions occurred in Free Trade Tea and Company's—Prices rose gradually 1½d. for Free Trade and 2½d. for Company's—viz. to 2s. 6d. and 2s. 6½d. for blackish leaf Congou, and to 2s. 7½d. money for Company's Congou—the latter however, closing on change at 2s. 7d. per lb. cash. To-day the demand has not been so brisk, but prices are fully supported, and Company's Congous have recovered the slight depression of yesterday afternoon, and now rule at 2s. 7½d. per lb. cash.

Comparing the annexed quotations with those of the 2d July we find there is an advance upon Congou of 5d. per lb. and upon Twankay of 6d. per lb.

In Co's Congous (there have been (as is usually the case) repeated fluctuations—on the 2d ultimo they ruled at 2s. 3d. cash—gradually rose to 2s. 4½d. by the 15th—became depressed and receded by the 16th to 2s. 3d.—but rose shortly to 2s. 4½d. and declined again to 2s. 3½d., which was the ruling price prior to the arrival of the "Express"—and then progressively advanced in the manner we have stated above to 2s. 5d. per lb., and afterwards to 2s. 7½d. cash—or 5½d per lb. above the rates of the 2d ultimo. The deliveries during the past month have been only 174 Chests; the stock on the 31st ultimo was 17,558 Chests. The next sales are declared for the 10th August,—and at present there only 7,000 Packages advertised, but a larger quantity may be expected.

We estimate the stock in the United Kingdom at 32 million lbs.—(From W. J. Thompson's Report.)

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 30th Oct. 1841.

By the arrival of the Island Queen from Bombay the 8th, and the Lady Grant the 7th September, we learn that the August overland mail arrived there on the 6th, and we have received by these vessels files of Bombay papers to the 8th September, the London Mail of 4th August, and the Singapore Free Press of 30th September, and Extra of 3d October. Although we received these papers at a late hour, we have made copious extracts from them; the intelligence they contain, with the exception of the Tory victory in the elections, of little importance; indeed few mails of late have been so barren of interest. We do not find China mentioned, nor had news from here, later than the 2d April, reached England. The commercial affairs in England were anything but satisfactory; a great many failures of banking establishments, and in the manufacturing districts had occurred, and numbers of people been thrown out of work in consequence of the latter. Money was not, however, scarce, discount being no more than 4½ per Cent. and 3 per Cent Cons. are quoted at 89½. The tea-market had, as will be seen in preceding columns, improved considerably, although chiefly owing to speculation, the deliveries having been unusually small.

The most important item of news brought by the overland mail, concerning India, is the appointment of Sir William H Macnaghten to the government of Bombay. We perceive from the Bombay papers that his credentials had been forwarded to the Cau-bul envoy, and that it was expected he would proceed to Bombay without loss of time. Sir Alexander Burnes succeeds Sir Wm. Macnaghten at the Court of Afghanistan. Sir James Graham, it is generally supposed, will be appointed Governor General of India.

The Alatovic, Clark, (transport) has during the week put into Hongkong with loss of topmasts. She was sent by Capt. Smith from Amoy to look after the Nerbudda left, as we stated a fortnight since in a very perilous condition, with only natives on board, at anchor on the northern coast of the Island of Formosa. The Alatovic however encountered such tempestuous weather and contrary winds that she was unable to reach her destination, and having carried away her topmasts, was obliged to run for Hongkong. There are some rumours of the crew and camp-followers on board the Nerbudda having been taken off by Chinese, and of their being now in their hands; we have no means to judge of of the correctness of this report.

H. M. S. Sulphur, Capt. Belcher, has during the week paid a visit to Whampoa, whence she returned to Macao Roads on Wednesday morning last.

From Calcutta our advices are by way of Singapore to the 2d September. H. M. S. Calliope with part of the Canton ransom or board had arrived there. The Falcon was to leave for China in a few days. Opium was rising in price in consequence of advices from China, and the quantity of Specie imported by the Calliope had lowered the exchange on England.

By the late arrivals (per Margaret via Manila) we have dates from Sydney to the 2d September. The Giraffe, Jean, Hope and Nimrod had all arrived, and the market for tea was in consequence very flat. Hysonskin on the 30th of August is quoted at £ 6. 5. per chest, but entirely nominal.

A report was current. In the early part of the week, of the death of the Emperor Taou-kuang, which, had it been true would ere this have been confirmed by authentic information to the government's offices here and at Canton. No such confirmation has arrived, and we do not therefore consider the report to be entitled to any credit whatsoever. The Emperor's death, were it to take place at present, might possibly involve the empire in great difficulties; for not only has it to sustain a war with a foreign enemy so infinitely superior to its own people in strategy; but the long minority of the successor, a boy 9 or 10 years old, is likely to provoke the ambition of the numerous kindred of of the Imperial family, or might even call into activity the now hidden enemies of the Tartar dynasty, many of whom are said to exist and who, it is supposed, are able to muster strong whenever a favorable opportunity should offer, by means of the secret societies, which have long existed notwithstanding the persecutions of the government.

From Ningpo and Chusan we have only reports; no vessel has come down from the north, with the exception of one from the coast of Fuhkeen, and she brings no intelligence whatever regarding the expedition. The reports are as we last week stated, that Ningpo had been taken, and a large treasure found there; that Chusan had again fallen into the hands of the English, after an obstinate resistance, and that an Imperial Commissioner, the Emperor's near relative, had been sent to H. M. Plenipotentiary to commence negotiations. These are however mere reports requiring confirmation.

We publish below a singular document kindly translated for us, being the official report of the trial and condemnation of Keshen. It is remarkable that the gravest charge brought against him, seems to be that of incapacity; and supposing him to have been really unequal to the duties imposed upon him by the government, the latter would according to our notions in such matters be the responsible party for having made a bad selection. But no accusation was ever more false than this of incapacity against Keshen; on the contrary he seems perfectly well to have understood the position of the Empire, and its miserable military defences, which he knew incapable of offering effectual resistance to British arms. Hence he attempted by negotiations to obtain time for better preparation, but the impatience of the warlike party at Peking, and possibly his personal enemies frustrated his designs, and Chuenpee in consequence fell into the hands of the English. His attempts afterwards to neutralize this loss by negotiation are well known and the Chuenpee treaty is a proof of his ability, but has caused his ruin; for next to incapacity, the reason of Hongkong is imputed to him as the greatest crime. That so excessively unjust a sentence should have been pronounced against him, we cannot otherwise explain than by supposing that he was judged by his enemies, who possibly besides had motives of interest to serve in procuring his death; they probably shared between them Keshen's immense wealth, which had been declared not guilty they would have had to restore. The fate of this man, who certainly saved his country well in most deplorable, and not less so that of the Comptroller Paouchung against whom there seems to be no other accusation than that of having faithfully served his master in his country's cause, and yet for this he is to be ignominiously put to death!

THE TRIAL OF KESHEN BEFORE THE GRAND COUNCIL OF THE EMPIRE.

From the Peking Gazette.

The royal Prince Wo shih and the Minister Jin sean and others respectively intimate, that having in council assembled, come to deliberate decisions, beg leave now to lay their report before the throne.

On the thirteenth of the seventh moon and twenty first year of Taoukwang His Majesty's commands were received as follows:

Ying lung reports that Keshen has been placed under arrest and brought to the capital and has been delivered over to the Board of Punishments and we appoint our Princes royal, Juy tai; Chwang tai; Ting keun, and Hwuy tsin, the great literary doctors, the high military officers of the privy council, and the vice presidents of the Six Boards to assemble together and constitute a Board of Punishment to sit in judgment upon (Keshen's) affairs. REVERSE THIS.

Whereupon the Kwang chow foo and the Adjutant general, Yinglung, having delivered Keshen up to the said Board, we the Ministers and others in council assembled brought him forth, before us, and in regular order examined into each particular, to all and each of which he in person replied; and we memorialize and respectfully request the sacred glance to be cast upon the case, praying that torture may be added in the examination. It appears that Keshen, last year was appointed to proceed to Kwang tung to examine into the affairs of the barbarians, and in consequence of there being no person who understood the barbarian language, as he passed through Shan tung he wrote a letter to To kwun poo, the Lieut. Governor, that he wished to take with him to Canton Paou chung, who understood the barbarian language, and who was of the same Canton village as the Heen magistrate, Chao tsze yung. After his arrival at Canton, he first proceeded upon the principles of reason to deliver his lucid commands, after which the said barbarians demanded that a port for trade should be given them, but ere the negotiations were completed, they for a while attacked the fort of Tae kuk and also surrounded that of Sha kuk. In consequence of this Keshen attempted to rescue (the forts) from the dangerous position, but was destitute of plans, and became willing in behalf of the English to memorialize the Emperor to give them the region of Hongkong as a place upon which to dwell. The said barbarians, intently scheming to have the rule of the place, immediately issued their false proclamations there, and spread out their tents.

During the twelfth month the said barbarians wished to deliver up Ting hae, and they sent the barbarian ships to Canton to have an interview, while Keshen sent a letter to Ele poo, to go and receive it (Ting hae) back from the barbarian eye who was detained in Che keang. In the present year, first moon and fifteenth day, Keshen repaired to the Bocca Tigris to make examinations, and on arriving at the office of Taze sze, the barbarian eye Elliot sought an interview in order to deliver back Ting hae, and being desirous of seeking some deal intercourse he presented his statement of regulations, several points of which were to be deliberated upon, many of them being troublesome matters connected with trade. A great many of these points too were so embarrassing that it was necessary that their contradictory bearing should be pointed out. At that time the Kwang chow foo, the military officers and the Hong merchants, all were in waiting at the said place (Taze sze), and Paou chung, thoroughly understanding the barbarian language, was therefore ordered to interpret. On the nineteenth day Keshen having gone to the Bocca Tigris to inspect the forts and when he had arrived at Tow wan, Elliot again came to seek an interview. He earnestly besought that the whole of Hongkong should be given to him, and also at the same time brought forward several points touching residence and trade, to all of which the requested Keshen to affix his seals.—But Keshen withheld assent.

On the twenty eighth the said barbarians, hearing of the coming of our grand army and supposing that so great a force must certainly be designed for attacking and exterminating them, were about commencing the attack themselves, and Keshen being anxious for the safety of the Bogue, sent Paou chung to present a document in which it was stated to them that they could proceed to Hongkong to remain there for the time being, and ordering them to keep quiet as the negotiations would be determined after an answer had arrived in reply to the clear memorial which had been made to the court. Paou chung was also ordered that if the barbarians did not manifest obedient temper then to take the document and bring it back. Paou chung having seen the barbarians and finding their designs to be murderous and wicked withheld the document.

On the first day of the second moon the barbarians attacked the fort of Sha kuk, and Keshen called troops to rescue it but could not.

We the Ministers have examined (Keshen) on the whole of the foregoing positions, and at the close of the third examination Keshen could only tremble with fear and acknowledge his own unpardonable crimes.

At the time he and the barbarian eye held their negotiations, he without delay fully delivered Hongkong over to the English for the time, not daring to deceive them nor persevering to receive the things they had to offer, but his entire policy was decidedly bad, and he now requests that we, the Ministers, would on his account memorialize and implore that the celestial favour might be manifested in inflicting upon him the heaviest punishment.

(The Emperor's reply to the above Report)

On the sixteenth of the sixth moon the imperial will was received as follows:

Let Keshen be remanded to the original judges of Princes, Magistrates, and Ministers, that assembled as a Board of Punishment they may determine the sentence for his crimes and report accordingly. REVERSE THIS.

In obedience to the above we proceed to record our decision. Keshen when sent as a high commissioner to Canton to examine into and arrange the affairs of the barbarians should have applied the most attentive care and thorough ability and devised plans for the full settlement of every point. When the barbarian English became refractory towards his clear commands for arrangement, and manifested their wicked dispositions, he ought straightway to have memorialized the court requesting troops to be prepared in order that at an early day they might be exterminated. But he incoherently presented them a place to dwell at, and for the time being gave Hongkong to them, which is the excuse they (the English) give for taking possession of it. In all matters where it was necessary to guard and watch he made no previous preparation, and consequently the barbarians have attacked and destroyed the forts in succession, and the very important place (the Bogue) cannot now be guarded. He has throughout been guilty of the greatest political errors, and it is in accordance with the laws that his case should be inquired into and deliberated upon, for it is owing to his not making previous preparations that we have lost our important passes, the city fortifications, and encampments. The law decrees imprisonment and decapitation, and we hereby sentence him to be beheaded, but to be imprisoned until after autumn, and then to be executed.

Paou chung is a criminal who formerly resided with barbarians and clandestinely acted as a co-conspirator, but there are other and additional charges of lawlessness against him and accordingly we distinctly sentence him to receive additional punishment.

All of us, the Ministers in council assembled, having adjudged and deliberately settled the whole circumstances of the case, in accordance with the principles of reason make our record and present it up to the throne that the imperial will may be received and recorded.

Note.—It will be seen that although Keshen was allowed to answer for himself, yet the council undertake to report his defence for him, and the report is no doubt a very different thing to what the defence was.

The Report says that Keshen did not go to the Bogue on purpose to hold an interview with Cap. Elliot. This would have been stooping too low for a Chinese statesman. Keshen being there to inspect the fortifications, Elliot is represented as taking that occasion to seek an interview, being desirous to deliver back Chusan and to seek commercial intercourse.

The Report says Keshen only granted them a residence at Hongkong "for the time being."

LATE ENGLISH INTELLIGENCE.

(From the London Mail of 4th August.)

H. M. ship Cornwallis, 72, took her final departure from Plymouth for China on the 3d July. There are no less than 59 officers in the gun-room mess, including supernumeraries.

Sir W. H. Macnaughten has been chosen by the Court of Directors Governor of Bombay. Sir R. Jenkins was also a candidate. Sir William's appointment will, no doubt, be confirmed by the Board of Control.

18th Regt.—Capt. Moyle is on leave. Lieut. Bentley commands the depot. Recruiting for this regiment is carried on in Ireland.

26th.—Lieut. Staff died on board the Edinburgh, on the 17th of July. Lieut. Bentley of the 18th regt. commands the depot, no officer being present. Recruits joining rapidly.

49th.—Capt. Pasley commands the depot.

55th.—Lieut. Magrath has arrived.

It was naturally expected that Sir Robert would develop his views at the Tamworth festival on the 25th July, but in this his own friends and the public were disappointed, for in his speech he restricted himself to mere generalities, so loose and unsatisfactory, that even the Times, which had been recently defending the Right Hon. Baronet against the attacks of the Standard, had not at first a word to urge in his favour. In the words of Lord Morpeth, whose determination to retire for the present from public life is matter of universal regret.

"The great oracle of Tamworth has indeed again spoken, but no intimation of the future has issued from the shrine." Sir Robert says, "Gentlemen, the political principles which I announced to you when I sought for the honour of your suffrage, I intend to uphold. I think it can hardly be necessary, after the active part I have taken in public affairs—after having been called upon not only to vote, but to deliver an opinion, upon almost every public question which has been submitted to parliament for many years past—it can hardly be necessary for me to state to you what are my political principles, and what are my views of the great questions which are likely to occupy public attention. When I was called to office by the favour of my Sovereign, I did convey to the electors of Tamworth my general views with respect to the principles on which public affairs ought to be conducted. At a more recent period in the last year, when a resolution was proposed implying a want of confidence in the present Administration, I did also state what were my views with respect not only to the general principles on which the administration of affairs should be conducted, but with respect to almost every public measure to which attention was then directed. And on a review of the declarations which I made in 1835, and on a review of the opinions which I expressed with regard to particular measures in 1840, I have nothing now to retract. I entertain the opinions which I then professed, and it is my intention, whether in a private or in an official capacity, to act upon those declarations. I shall not presume, whatever may be the speculations as to majority which the Conservative party may exhibit on the meeting of Parliament—I shall not presume in what manner her Majesty may think fit to exercise her prerogative. I retain my opinion that no government in this country ought to continue in the administration of public affairs, unless it possess the confidence of Parliament. That while I respect that constitutional principle, I hold in equal respect the prerogative of the crown, and it is not for any individual to presume in what manner that prerogative may be exercised, I am constantly asked what it is I mean to propose supposing I am called to the administration of affairs. Gentlemen, I will answer that question when I am placed in that position. My advice for the present is—dismiss those who are now in office. They have not the confidence—they had not the confidence of Parliament, and they have not the confidence of the country. (Loud cheers.)

MINISTERIAL MANIFESTO.

We lay before our readers the address of Lord John Russell to the electors of the city of London. His Lordship avails himself of the occasion to explain to the empire at large the course which the general state of the returns will make it his duty to pursue. From Lord John, who introduced the Reform Bill to the House of Commons, the announcement of the course to be pursued by the Reform Government at its close comes with peculiar propriety. This state paper, for such it truly is, cannot be praised beyond its merits. It is temperate, manly, and dignified, and must command the admiration even of those who are most eager to profit by the change which his lordship announces.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

Gentlemen.—I request you to accept my sincere and hearty thanks for the honour you have conferred upon me by electing me one of your representatives in the Common's House of Parliament. I should have made this acknowledgment at an earlier period, had I not been desirous of explaining to you the course which the general state of the returns will make it my duty to pursue; in order to do this the more clearly I must refer to some past events.

In the early part of last year, when a resolution declaring want of confidence in the government was brought forward, I distinctly announced the intention of proposing additional taxes to meet the increased expenditure of the country. In the present year, so soon as the estimates had been completed, and the probable amount of the revenue could be calculated, her Majesty's ministers took into their serious consideration the disparity which still existed between the income of the country and the cost of its establishments. We found that the new taxes were not sufficient to supply the deficiency. We were of opinion that we could not, with due regard to the honour and safety of the nation, reduce its naval and military forces. But, upon a careful view of our commercial impost, we came to the conclusion that, by removing prohibitions, and lessening restrictions, it was possible to replenish the Treasury, and at the same time to secure to the working classes a greater command of the necessities of life at steady and moderate prices. The first measure brought forward on this subject was intended to give increased freedom of trade to our colonies. But in defending this measure, in a debate before Easter, I stated that the Cabinet were resolved to apply the same principle to our whole commercial policy, and had prepared propositions to carry their views into effect. In the face of this declaration. It has been asserted that our commercial and financial plans were brought forward only because we had been defeated upon a clause in the Irish Qualification Bill, it was difficult to refute our arguments; it was easy, to misconstrue our motives; and those who were incapable of discovering reasons, have not been unequal to the labour of inventing facts. Others have said that, with a prevarious majority in the House of Commons, we ought not to have announced measures of such vast importance. But had we resigned with a deficient revenue, and without pointing out the means of improving it, the same persons would with far more justice, have accused us of being unable to meet the difficulties we had caused, and of imposing upon our successors an unpopular and impracticable task. It appeared to us, on the contrary, that it was our duty to lay before the House of Commons plans which we deemed beneficial; when defeated there, we advised her Majesty to appeal to the people at large.

As soon as the new parliament meets, we shall take the first opportunity of asking for a clear and decided judgment upon the policy we have proposed. The result of such an appeal may now be easily foreseen. In the English cities and boroughs there is a small majority in our favour. In the Scotch cities and boroughs, a very decisive majority the same way. In the Irish boroughs and counties there is also a major ity in favour of the policy of the present ministers. In the Scotch counties the majority will be the other way; and in the English counties that majority will be overwhelming. To those who recollect Lord Stanley's description of our English county representation, or who have observed the effect of the Clarendon clause of the Reform Act, this result will not be at all surprising. It should be added, however, that the manufacturing districts have not, as might have been expected, tended to restore the balance.

As no ministers of the Crown can stand without the confidence of the House of Commons, our retirement from office will immediately follow the condemnation of our policy. In this altered position it would be inconsistent with any notions of public duty to harass the government of the day by vexatious opposition; still less to deny to the Crown the means of maintaining the reputation of the country abroad and internal quiet at home. But when the great principles of religious, civil, and commercial liberty come into question, those principles must be firmly and fearlessly supported. Whatever party may be in power, they are so inseparably connected with the progress of society, that—although the country may doubt, may pause, may ponder—it will examine, discuss, and finally adopt them. I am encouraged to this conviction by former victories.

Out of power, we obliged our opponents to abolish those tests by which political office was made exclusive and a religious sacrament profaned. Out of power, we forced our adversaries themselves to free the Roman Catholics from those disabilities which they had declared indispensable for the maintenance of the constitution and safety of the Church. In power we obliged the one who had refused to allow the representatives of Manchester, Leeds, and Birmingham, to sit in the House of Commons, to submit to a much larger and more sweeping measure of reform. In power we obtained the sanction of parliament to the abolition of slavery in our colonies. In power, we have destroyed monopoly of privileges in our municipal corporations. In power we have carried into practical effect the principles of equality of civil privileges between Protestants and Roman Catholics, and have thereby secured to the crown the affectionate loyalty of the people of Ireland.

None of these measures received the early assent of the main body of our opponents; to several they opposed a violent and persevering resistance. But truth triumphed over them, and will again. Returned to office they may adopt our measures, and submit to the influence of reason; or, if they refuse to do so they will be obliged to relinquish power, and the monopoly of trade will share the fate of religious intolerance and political exclusion: But for the attainment of this object it is necessary to be vigilant and united: to oppose zeal to zeal; to watch minute details as well as to maintain great principles; in short, to exert for a great and salutary end, the same untiring activity which has been exhibited in a more questionable cause. As we do not distrust the justice of the measures we have proposed, let not temporary failure check our perseverance. I am well aware, indeed, that in the City of London and in some other places, great exertions have been made, and large sacrifices incurred in behalf of this cause. Nor can I conclude without again expressing my grateful sense of the support I have received in the late unexpected, and in many respects unexampled, contests—I have the honour to be, etc.

—(Chronicle.) Minto House, July 16.

July 8.—It would appear that 64 persons were lost by the up-setting of the vessel at Rotherham. We learn from Montserrat that a rock on the south-west side had suddenly given way, and killed several negroes.—The accounts received from Jamaica continue to be distressing, both in a commercial point of view, and also from the continuous dryness of the weather, whereby the sugar-canes in several districts had been destroyed.—As the steward on Wooden Oustead, Roxburghshire, was employed a few days ago in a turnip field belonging to Captain Scott, he was fiercely attacked by no less than seven of these ferocious little animals, weasels. They leaped upon his person, and attempted to get at his face and throat, but, after a conflict which lasted several minutes, the man succeeded not only in repelling, but in killing the whole number. Had the victim in this case been a girl, or even a grown-up woman, the consequences might have been fatal.—The Louisville Gazette gives an account of a horrible experiment, by the application of galvanism, on the body of an executed convict, who was hardly dead when cut down, in consequence of some error in the fastening of the instrument of death—the rope—around the neck of the sufferer. On the first application of the fluid to his body, which was yet warm and trembling, a universal tremor was seen to pass over his frame; on a sudden he arose from the bench to a sitting posture, and with great eagerness and impatience raised his hand to his neck, trying to grasp the scarf in his fingers and tear it from his throat. He first snatched at it with great rashness, as though the rope was yet around his neck, and then continued some moments picking at the scarf with his fingers, as though it was something that adhered to his throat giving him great uneasiness. But this symptom was soon forgotten, for almost the next moment he rose upon his feet, raised his arms level with his breast, and, opening his bloodshot eyes, gave forth from his mouth a most terrific scream, after which his chest worked, as if in respiration, in a very violent manner. The experiment, if it were ever made, was a cruel one, for the resuscitated corpse only revived to suffer the most exquisite agony in order that it might die again. His system was critically examined, and, though he was pronounced by the doctors to be perfectly alive, yet he could live but a very few minutes, for congestion of the brain was rapidly taking place. Every method was adopted to equalize the circulation, and save the patient from the terrible consequences of so sad a catastrophe, but in vain. The blood vessels of the head were enormously distended, and his eyes appeared to be balls of clotted blood. His system was immediately thrown into direful spasms, and he died in a few minutes in the most excruciating agonies.

GHUZZNER AND KELAT PRIZE-MONEY.—The Naval and Military Gazette states, in answer to the enquiries of a correspondent, that the necessary routine of collecting prize property, reporting the amount of value first to head-quarters, then to the Government at home, obtaining the Queen's grant for the appropriation, and making out the rolls, must all be gone through before any order for distribution can be given, and will occupy not much less than two years, even should no obstacle intervene. The claimants therefore, for the Ghuznee and Kelat prize-money cannot expect to touch the coin for a long time to come; and this answer will suffice to great numbers of similar enquiries respecting these and other prizes.

EAST INDIA SHIPPING.—According to Mr. Stikeman's

comparative statement of the number of British ships, with tonnage, &c., which have entered inwardly and cleared outward from and to places within the limits of the East India Company's charter for the quarter ending June 30th, 1841, it appears that the total number of ships entered inwardly was 462, with 188,388 tonnage, and 8,249 men, showing as compared with the same period in 1840, an increase of 83 ships, 35,139 tonnage, and 1,402 men. Of this total amount, 278 ships, 111,423 tonnage, and 6,056 men, entered at London; 90 ships, 35,172 tonnage and 1,543 men, entered at Liverpool; 9 ships, 3,208 tonnage, and 166 men, entered at Bristol and Hull; and 25 ships, 8,585 tonnage, and 444 men, entered at Clyde, Leith, and other British ports. The arrivals were as follows:—135 ships from Calcutta, 5 from Madras, 35 from Bombay, 14 from China, 9 from Ceylon, 28 from Singapore and Penang, 12 from the Philippine Islands, 1 from Siam, 17 from Java and Sumatra, 32 from New South Wales, 75 from the Mauritius, 1 from Malacca, 27 from the Cape of Good Hope, and 11 from the South Seas. The clearances outward comprised a total of 489 ships, 194,791 tonnage, and 9,983 men, which, as compared with the same period of 1840, gives an increase of 75 ships, 40,147 tonnage, and 1,418 men. Of this total, 274 ships, 110,274 tonnage, and 6,045 men, cleared from London; 138 ships, 59,610 tonnage, and 2,662 men, cleared from Liverpool; 14 ships, 4,670 tonnage, and 230 men, cleared from Bristol and Hull; and 54 ships, 20,237 tonnage, and 1,046 men, cleared from the Clyde, Leith, and other British ports. Their destinations were as follows:—116 ships for Calcutta, 59 for Bombay, 32 for China, 10 for Ceylon, 21 for Singapore and Penang, 3 for Java, and Sumatra, 1 for Arabia, 160 for New South Wales, 55 for the Mauritius, 18 for the Cape of Good Hope, and 8 for the South Seas. The ships which have left for China double in number those which left for the same situation last year, and there is a great increase in the number bound for Singapore and Penang, which goes far to show that there is expected to be a revival in the trade with those countries at no very distant period. The number of ships cleared out for New South Wales is, we believe, beyond a precedent, but the prosperity of the colony does not appear to keep pace with the increase of traffic, and perhaps it would be better if it were in a measure restricted.

On the 13th ult. a vast multitude of persons crowded the dock yard of Mr. Pritchard, at Northfleet, to witness the launch of a first-class steam-ship, the Medway, 1,200 tons burthen, which took place at high-water, in perfect safety. She belongs to the East India steam-packet Company, and is intended to carry out the mails.

THE FINAL PROTOCOL OF LONDON.

The Augsburg Gazette publishes the following as the text of the final protocol or treaty, signed at London on the 13th instant:—

"The Emperor of Austria, King of Hungary and Bohemia; the King of the French; the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; the King of Prussia; and the Emperor of all the Russias; persuaded that their concord offers to Europe the surest guarantee for the preservation of the general peace, the constant object of their solicitude, and their Majesties wishing by that concord, to give to his Highness the Sultan a public proof of their respect for the inviolability of his right of sovereignty, as well as of their sincere desire to secure the tranquility of his Empire, have resolved to accede to the invitation of his Highness the Sultan, that it would please them to declare in common by a formal act their resolution to conform to the ancient rule of the Ottoman Empire, by which the passage of the straits of the Bosphorus, and the Dardanelles is to remain always closed to foreign vessels of war, as long as the Ottoman Porte enjoys peace. Their Majesties, and the Sultan having resolved to conclude a treaty for this object, have named their plenipotentiaries—the Emperor of Austria, Prince Esterhazy and Baron Neumann; the King of the French—Baron de Bourquey; the Queen of Great Britain—Viscount Palmerston; the King of Prussia—Baron Bulow; the Emperor of all the Russias—Baron Brunow; the Sultan Abdul Medjid, Emperor of the Ottomans—Sheik Effendi. After the exchange of their powers, which were found en règle, the plenipotentiaries decreed and signed the following articles:

Art. 1. His Highness the Sultan, declares on his part he is firmly resolved to maintain, for the future, the principle followed from all time as an immutable rule of his Empire, by virtue of which the ships of war of all foreign nations are forbidden, to enter the straits of the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles and which imports that his Highness shall not suffer any foreign ship of war to enter the said straits so long as the Ottoman Porte shall be in the enjoyment of peace. And their Majesties the Emperor of Austria, the King of the French, the Queen of Great Britain, the King of Prussia, and the Emperor of Russia, on their side, engage to respect this resolution of the Sultan, and to act in conformity with the principle which is above expressed. Article 2. It is well understood that the inviolability of the ancient rule of the Ottoman Empire being established by the preceding article, the Sultan reserves to himself, as in times past, the right of granting firman of passage to light ships carrying flags of war, which, according to usage, are employed in the service of Ambassadors of friendly powers.—Art. 3. The Sultan reserves to himself the right of communicating this present treaty to all the Powers with whom the Sublime Porte holds relations of amity, and of inviting them to accede to it. Art. 4. This Present treaty shall be ratified at London, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at the expiration of two months, or sooner, if possible. In faith of which the Plenipotentiaries have signed this present treaty and affixed thereto their seals with their arms. Given, at London, this 13th July, in the year of Grace, 1841.—Malta Times, August 16.

SMYRNA.

A most dreadful calamity has befallen the city of Smyrna. In the short space of 18 hours nearly half of the city was burnt down on the 17 and 18 ult., and the property of more than 30,000 people was consumed by the devouring element!

The fire began in a coffee-house, and favoured by the violence of the wind it defied at first all efforts to extinguish it.

Admiral Bandiera, and the men of his division, with those of the French vessels of war, gave prompt and efficient assistance in extinguishing the flames.

Many lives were lost in this terrible catastrophe—some 20,000 persons were without bread and shelter—but subscriptions are being made to feed and protect these unfortunate beings.—Malta Times, 10th August.

DELHI GAZETTE, AUGUST 25.

MURDER OF MR. O'GORMAN.—The only news we have from the North West is the following letter giving an account of the murder of Mr. O'Gorman at Candahar alluded to in our Supplement of Saturday last. The letter is dated the 26th July:—

"I lament to inform you that a most respectable and well conducted European met with his death yesterday morning from the hands of a murderous Afghaan; he was a Mr. O'Gorman, who had accompanied Major Todd on his mission to Herat in capacity of writer, and who remained here on that officer's departure for Hindoostan. He was quietly taking his morning walk through the Chanoes, when the villain watching his opportunity, quietly walked up to him and buried his murderous Chaco in his bowels; he immediately attempted to repeat the blow, when a recruit of the 38th, who was on the spot, brought him to the ground by a severe blow of a Lance across the temple; he endeavoured to rise, whereupon the sepoy repeated the dose which enabled him to secure the culprit and hand him over to the Civil authorities. An hour had scarcely elapsed when the perpetrator of the foul deed was launched into eternity, being blown from a gun. The poor offending European survived but a few hours when he expired from internal hemorrhage. Is it not extraordinary that the Political authority will so far insult Christian feeling, by the execution of those villains on the Sabbath day, which he has done in two instances since my arrival here. Immediately before the execution of the felon, he confessed he had followed the Palanquin for a great distance, watching for an opportunity to murder the Feringhee in it, but not being able to effect that, the Palanquin having turned up a narrow gully, he returned and met his unfortunate victim. It is supposed that Dr. Jacob, of the 88th N. I. was the person intended, he having just passed that way in the Palanquin proceeding to his hospital. He further stated that there were seven more men in the city who had bound themselves by oath on the Koran to destroy every European they could meet with, having an opportunity. That tragic scene was scarcely concluded when an armed Sowar presented himself in the evening at one of the gates of the city, demanding admittance of the sentry, on duty; the sentinel declined, saying if he directed himself of his arms he might do so, but that his orders were to admit no armed man through the gate after night fall. On this the Sowar drew his pistol and fired, but fortunately, though the sentry was quite close to him, he missed his mark, the sepoy then presented his fixed bayonet at the horse to prevent his entrance whereupon the Sowar drew his sabre and wounded the man in three places, who however finally succeeded in securing him. It is said the second is one of Mr. Macpherson's Sowars, who accompanied him a few days since from Quettah. My servants just now inform me that he is this moment about to expiate his crime on the gallows."

NUMERUS KHAN has come in, as we announced in our Supplement of last Saturday, he surrendered to Colonel Stacy on the 25th ultimo at Kheiat. And Mr. Ross Bell was made acquainted with the tidings before his death. The young Chieftain will, we hear, proceed to Quettah, thus the so often reported event is at length confirmed, but we dare not prognosticate, however we may hope, that all will now be peace and tranquillity, our rule we fear is as irksome as it ever was.

BORNEO COAL.—In our notice last week of the visit of the H.C. Steamer Diana to Borneo Proper, we mentioned that she brought over specimens of a superior quality of Coal, which was procurable in that quarter in great abundance; and we are happy to learn on further inquiry that the situations in which it is found are peculiarly easy of access. A coal formation is found on Pulo Cheremim, an island at the embouchure of the Borneo River, extending along its Coast, and running out towards the sea, by which it is covered at high water, and also taking a direction inland; but to what depth or extent has not as yet been ascertained, although manifestly considerable. The coat of the island in fact presents a naked surface of Coal, and it is probably from the glistening appearance which it has when the tide is out, that the island has obtained its name of Pulo Cheremim or Mirror Island. In another island, about half a mile distant from it, called Pulo Kain Arrang, Coal is also found; but the specimens, as gathered from the surface, were very inferior; although further research might lead to the discovery of a much better description in this island also. The specimens taken from the formations on the main-land of Borneo Proper are excellent; and from all accounts it exists there in vast quantities, combined with great facility of access, being found close to the banks of the principal River, or its tributary branches. Some of the most intelligent Nakhodas from the country who are over here, say that there are Mountains of Coal, by way of describing the quantity, and that hundreds of ships might be laden with it. This intelligence we conceive to be of great interest, and viewed in connexion with the future establishment of a Steam communication to China; of the highest importance. Specimens of the Coal have been forwarded to Calcutta, and the subject will no doubt obtain the attentive consideration of the Supreme Government, and lead not only to further inquiry and research, but to effecting an arrangement with the Borneo chiefs to form depots of Coal on the coast, which for a Steamer, might be said to be on the high road to China.

THE EXPEDITION.

At length some accounts from the Expedition have been received by the French Corvette Donside, Capt. Rosamel, which left Chusan on the 26th and arrived here on the evening of the 31st October. Unfortunately however but few letters containing details have been received, these referring generally to others previously written and sent, but not yet come to hand. The following are all the details we could gather from these scanty materials.

Tinghae, the Capital of the Island of Chusan was retaken on the 1st of October; many new and strong fortifications had been raised for the protection of the town, and the Chinese are said to have defended them with some courage and severe loss. The attack was led by General Sir Hugh Gough in person, and the town taken with the loss only of one officer and five men. As usual the Chinese had been able to remove the government treasure, and little or no prize-money will here reward the British forces.

Chin hae, the strongly fortified mouth of the Ning po river, was taken on the 10th October; the British troops were landed at different points, so as to take the Chinese in the rear and flank, whilst the ships attacked the forts in front. Their garrison is supposed to have amounted to upwards of 14,000 men, of which about 1,500 are said to have been killed. After the capture of these forts, no further opposition seems to have been made by the Chinese soldiery, and the large and wealthy city of Ning po was taken possession of by the English without any resistance on the 13th. All the mandarines had of course fled, and the inhabitants retired into their houses over the doors of many of which were hung up the characters of "shunmin" or "submissive people." The city of Ning po is at the head of a district, and supposed to contain about 300,000 inhabitants. The plain in which it is situated is described as one immense garden, so fruitful and highly cultivated is the land. The steamers Phlegelion and Nemesis went 40 miles up the river beyond Ningpo, as far as the town of Yuyaou without encountering any resistance. Confidence in the moderation of the victors was growing up among the people, and though the houses continued closed, all sorts of provisions were plentiful not only in Ning po but at Chusan also. In the former place very little treasure, only about $20,000 was found; but the corn magazines were well stocked with a two year's supply. The principal cause of the mortality at Chusan last year, namely a want of fresh and sound provisions, will not exist on the present occasion.

It must be no small satisfaction to Captain Anstruther to be in command now, where last year he was as prisoner in a cage, an object of derision and insult to the mob. H. M. S. Blonde, Capt. Bourcier, guards the Ning po river at Chin hae.

It is said that Admiral Sir William Parker may be hourly expected here, as well as H. M. S. Farne, Craiser, and Columbine, and that H. M. Plenipotentiary will winter at Amoy.

As the present war with China will in all probability lead to an increased intercourse with the people, official as well as for purposes of trade, the acquisition of the Chinese language which has hitherto been so much neglected, owing to the little encouragement held out to Chinese students, will become a most valuable accomplishment, as giving a certain claim to employment. We are glad to learn that the home government has appointed Mr. G. T. Lay one of the interpreters to H. M. Plenipotentiary, and that this gentleman, who arrived here from Bombay in the Island Queen, having left England by the last over land mail, proceeds to join the expedition, charged with government despatches. The interpreters with the Expedition were by the last advices, Mr. Morrison with H. M. Plenipotentiary; Revd. Mr. Guizlaff at Ningpo; Mr. Thom at Chusan; and Mr. Medhurst at Chinhae.

By the Red Rover advices from Amoy to the 24th Oct. have been received. Everything remained quiet there, but large numbers of soldiers were collecting in the neighbourhood, which were however vigilantly watched by the garrison and ships. H. M. S. Nimrod has returned there from her trip in search of the Nerbudda transport, without finding the vessel, which by all accounts must have gone to pieces soon after she was abandoned by her Captain and the other Europeans. From accounts given by the natives it would appear that a great proportion of the crew and campfollowers reached the shore upon rafts or pieces of wreck. 109 of these unfortunate men are said now to be in the hands of the Chinese, and have probably been sent to Chin-chew, the remainder, about 60 or 70, must have perished. We hope that the strictest investigation will be made into all the circumstances of the abandonment and wreck of this vessel. The Nimrod went into a harbour on the northern point of the Island of Formosa, called Ko-lang near to where the Nerbudda had gone down, to make enquiries, but was on entering it fired at from several batteries; in the hope of hearing of the shipwrecked people the Nimrod did not then return the fire, but on being refused information in other parts also, returned to that port, silenced the forts by her guns, and sent a party of men on shore who destroyed them.

There was an intention we believe of taking up the Red Ray for the Commissariat, to carry to the north warm clothing for the troops, and the stores of the Allatene, but we hear that instead of her the Masden has been chartered by Capt. Ramsay, and the preference given to the latter vessel is, we believe, owing to her being manned by Europeans, better able to bear the cold of the north than lascars.

CANTON.—The Chinese are very busy in again fortifying the city; and new forts are being erected on the hills at the back, from which in May last it was commanded by British artillery. Napier's fort is also rebuilding, and the passage of the river has been most effectually choked up near Howqua's fort. There is only just space enough on one side of the river for Junks to pass through. The Mandarin boats are still numerous near Napier's and Howqua's fort, and it is said that a number of stone laden junks are kept in readiness to be sunk whenever the English should again threaten to pass up. This manifest infraction of the conditions of the truce is not followed by resumption of active hostilities on the part of the English, as Sir Henry Pottinger in his Notice dated 11th August threatened they would be, and although trade is proceeding quietly at Canton, it is carried on naturally under the apprehension of interruption at no distant period, and hence the conditions upon which it exists are highly unfavorable to the foreign, and particularly British merchant. The number of ships now at Whampoa, as will be seen from our shipping list, is considerable, and some of them we hear are already beginning to take in the new Tea. The prices for tea we mentioned a fortnight since are maintained at their high rates, namely $1 a $5 taels for Congous at which there have been buyers, and a considerable supply has already reached Canton, notwithstanding that the long continued drought is said to render the inland navigation difficult. The transactions in Cotton which we mentioned at the same time, seem to have been chiefly on speculation, if we may judge from the fact of the deliveries having been far short of the extensive purchases then reported; the market now is quiet, nor could the rates of a fortnight since be now obtained. All other imports, particularly British Manufactures, can only be realized at great loss.

IMPORTANT TO MARINERS.—The following extract from the Times of 23rd February has kindly been sent us, and we the more readily give it insertion, as the frequent appearance of Steamers on these coasts now, renders it very desirable that such rules as are intended for the general safety, should be extensively known.

(From a Correspondent.)

"Had the rules issued by the Trinity House Board upwards of three months ago, for the navigation of steam-vessels, been attended to, the distressing catastrophe which has befallen the American packet-ship Governor Fenner would have been averted. The regulations published by the Trinity Board, on the 30th October last, were as follow:—

"Whereas the recognized rule for sailing vessels is, that those having the wind fair shall give way to those on a wind.

"That when both are going by the wind, the vessel on the starboard tack shall keep her wind, and the one on the larboard tack bear up, thereby passing each other on the larboard hand.

"That when both vessels have wind large or abeam and meet, they shall pass each other in the same way on the larboard hand; to effect which two last mentioned objects the helm must be put to port.

"And, as steam-vessels may be considered in the light of vessels navigating with a fair wind, and should give way to sailing vessels on a wind on either tack, it becomes only necessary to provide a rule for their observance, when meeting other steamers, or sailing vessels going large.

"Under these considerations, and with the object before stated, this board has decreed it right to frame and promulgate the following rule, which, on communication with the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the Elder Brethren find has been already adopted in respect of steam-vessels in Her Majesty's service; and they desire earnestly to impress upon the minds of all persons having charge of steam-vessels the propriety and urgent necessity of a strict adherence thereto—viz.

"Rules.—When steam-vessels on different courses must unavoidably or necessarily cross so near that by continuing their respective courses there would be a risk of coming in collision, each vessel shall put her helm to port, so as always to pass on the larboard side of each other.

"A steam-vessel passing another in a narrow channel, must always leave the vessel she is passing on the larboard hand."

It is perfectly clear that had the Nottingham steamer, which was coming in an opposite direction, observed the above rule, by putting her helm to port, she and the Governor Fenner would have passed each other, and the dreadful loss of life which has taken place would have been avoided. But until a legislative enactment is passed, compelling vessels to observe the rule promulgated by the Trinity Board, we may expect the recurrence of similar calamities.

The following was circulated by Capt Belcher yesterday, and he beg to draw the attention of our readers to the subject of the letter.

HER MAJESTY'S SHIP SULPHUR.

Macao,

Gentlemen,

It has already become my painful duty to cause two British vessels in the Canton River, to haul down pendant which they had presumed to wear.

As the flag, ensigns, or pendants, are objects, equally deserving of attention, and a negligence in one case may be presumed on, as undue partiality,

I beg to direct the attention of the Owners, or consignees of vessels, frequenting this Port, to the consequences to which they will, inevitably, become liable (under chap. 13, art. 11. William IV.) should any of the Guard boats, in obedience to this act, bring to me any such seizures; and to refer them to chap. 89, art. 26, 4 and 5th William IV. for the punishment to which I should become liable, by failing to forward the same.

At all times alive to the mercantile interests of my countrymen, and their respectability; which is never lessened by a mere obedience, and respect, to the laws.

I have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servt.

EDWARD BELCHER,
Capt. and Senior Officer, Macao.

To the Mercantile Community.—Macao.

The foreign trade now carried on at Canton, deserves well; we think, the attention of the British authorities, and they will soon become convinced, that it must supply the greatest part of the expense now again lavished by the Chinese upon the defences of the City and its neighbourhood. The duties seem to be raised in proportion to the necessities of the government, and we hear that that now levied on tea, including the Hongmerchants charges, amounts to as much as T. 10. 6. per Picul. Should the 17 ships now at Whampoa all get away with full cargoes, the duties and charges on their exports alone cannot fall short of 900,000 Taels, or about 1,250,000 $, a great part of which will either directly, or as sequeres on the Hongmerchants find its way into the provincial treasury. This appears a strange way of making war, and is not likely to be conducive to its speedy termination; for while in the north the British forces are employed in distressing the enemy to the utmost; consultation is offered him, and means to prolong the struggle in the south. But it is not only because the Chinese are benefited by the present anomalous state of warfare, that we call the attention of our readers to the subject; it is also to shew that British merchants by the port of Whampoa being kept open, are under great disadvantages, and exposed to loss and vexation which in a great measure would be avoided, if a close blockade were established. That by infraction of the Canton treaty, it is no longer incumbent upon the British to observe the truce, appears to be quite clear, for the fortifications now building and the obstructions of the river are evidently contrary to the terms of the agreement; why not then remind the faithless Chinese of their obligations by closing their river altogether? At present, uncertain of the duration of the peace, imports are forced upon the market, that no time may be lost in realizing them, at great loss, whilst to get the ships and property out, the same anxiety which prompted low sales, causes purchasers of produce to outbid each other in order to obtain the teas. The Chinese of course take the greatest possible advantage of this state of things, and hence teas are at prices higher than almost ever known before, whilst with out almost an exception, manufactures can only be exchanged for them at a ruinous loss. The experience of the past year and present has taught us, that whatever obstacles the Chinese government may throw in the way of an outside trade, the people will manage to provide for the wants of their foreign customers, wherever it may suit the latter, and we have no doubt that, were the port of Canton closed, a supply of Tea and Silk nearly equal to the demand will be brought to Macao or Hongkong, and the Government will by this illicit trade lose the greatest part of the duties now paid. Such policy would probably immovably assist the new settlement of Hongkong, and in the end, or at least while the war lasts, prove highly advantageous to British interests. Amoy also is now open to British influence, and although hitherto the fiscal regulations of the Chinese did not permit the Fokeen teas to be shipped to Canton direct, we believe that these obstacles would, as here, soon be overcome by the industry of the people, and if proper encouragement were given, tea cargoes may soon be seen leaving Amoy for England direct. We hope that with the expected arrival of the Admiral, the baneful truce will be at an end, and a more intelligible line of policy pursued.

Not many years ago it was the opinion of several who from long residence in this country might be supposed to have some knowledge of its affairs and government, that in case of any difference arising between it and England, a couple of frigates and a few hundred men would be all the force required to awe the Celestial Empire into submission. However extravagant such a notion even then was held to be by others, yet we believe no one fancied at the time of its being sent, that the armament which arrived on the coast of China in June last year, would not be fully equal to obtain redress from the Chinese for wrongs committed, and security for good conduct for the future. Yet these expectations, reasonable as they appeared to be, have been utterly frustrated, not only by the injudicious measures of those to whom the interests of Great Britain were confided, but by the avarice and perseverance or perhaps obstinacy of an enemy whose means of resistance to our demands had been too much undervalued. That mistakes should be committed in the conduct of a force invading a country utterly unknown, may be a matter of regret, but they can hardly be imputed to the incapacity of the leaders who however, had they been gifted with the genius or talents necessary to command so great an enterprise, had ample time to correct their errors. During the whole time of the command of Admiral and Capt. Elliot, one ill-judged measure was succeeded by another more fatal, until, at the expiration of a year, no progress towards an honorable settlement of the differences had been made; but the land forces had in that period from several untoward circumstances, which it would perhaps be not fair, all to ascribe to mismanagement, dwindled to one half their original number. From a force consisting of near twenty ships of war, 4 steamers, and about 4000 bayonets the most favorable results might justly have been expected; but on its arrival in the estuary of this river, instead of immediately destroying the Bogue forts, and ascending the river to take possession of Canton; the scene of the insults and spoliation which had caused the rupture with China, the fleet made sail to the northward, and took the Island of Chusan, certainly a very desirable situation from its being near the great rivers, and many of the principal cities of the Empire. Here the whole force was kept inactive during 8 months, whilst either from the effects of the climate, or from a want of fresh provisions, the health of the troops was so much reduced that very soon not more than one fourth of the number were fit for duty. H. M. Plenipotentiaries, after remaining nearly a month at Chu-an, waiting we suppose, but in vain, for answers to the many Chops which were whenever opportunity offered, forced upon the Chinese, and which we suppose very seldom, if ever, reached the hands for whom they were intended, then sailed to the Petho, but suffered themselves to be deceived by promises, that if they would return to Canton, their wrongs should then be redressed. This promise they allowed to amuse them until January, six months having already elapsed in inactivity, when at length to quicken the progress of negotiations, which in an unwearying exchange of Chops had been carried on during nearly a month without result, two small forts just outside the Bogue were taken. Specious promises from the Chinese were the result of this demonstration, and soon after the famous Chuenpee treaty was concluded, which proved H. M. Plenipotentiary, Captain Elliot, to have been as regardless of the interests of his country, as he was generally judged incapable of fulfilling the duties imposed by his high post. Chusan and the two small forts were restored to the Chinese; on their more promises that the trade should be opened immediately after the Chinese Newyear, and of a payment in six yearly instalments of one million each. A barren Island was at the same time yielded to the English, who were permitted to occupy it, because resistance would have been useless. As might have been expected, no guarantee having been exacted from the Chinese for the due fulfilment of their part of the contract, easy as its conditions were, they seem to have entered into it merely with a view to gain time for defence, and, after having fooled H. M. Plenipotentiary with vain promises and protestations until the end of February, the mask was at length thrown off, and Capt. Elliot found himself mist, egregiously duped. Now was the time for making the Chinese feel the weight of British arms and punishing them for their want of faith; the Bogue forts were taken, and all the defences of the river fell into the hands of the British. Canton was at their mercy, but on reaching Whampoa, a truce was again agreed to, and a war of Chops recommenced, which was of course intended for nothing else by the Chinese, but to gain the necessary time to invent and execute new acts of treachery. The infatuation of H. M. Plenipotentiary in still having faith in Chinese protestations was most extraordinary, and he very narrowly escaped being made a prisoner on the 21st of May, when the Chinese had at length, contrary to their promises, prepared every thing necessary as they thought for the total extermination of the barbarians and commenced the attack. Canton then was prostrate, and everybody knows how foolishly the prize thus within our grasp, was again allowed to escape by the truce entered into by Capt. Elliot. Fortunately however, the Chuenpee treaty had by this time become known in England, and was as generally reprobated there as it had been everywhere else, and Ministers were at last obliged to confess that their officer was unequal to the trust confided to him and declared that he was to be recalled. On the 9th of August Sir Henry Pottinger and Admiral Sir William Parker arrived, and the hope justified by the well known talents of these distinguished officers, revived, that matters would now soon assume a more favorable appearance, and that vigorous measures for the punishment of the Chinese would be pursued.

Unfortunately the treaty entered into by Capt. Elliot with the Canton authorities, did not permit Sir Henry to resume hostilities at Canton, and leaving a squadron here, the main body of the expedition which had been reinforced by the 55th regt., and by recruits for the 18th, 26th, and 49th, set sail on the 20th August, took and retained possession of Amoy, and proceeding northward, recaptured Chusan, destroyed Chinshai and took Ningpo; these operations affording another proof that where their means of defence are greatest, the Chinese can never hope successfully to cope with the discipline and valour of British troops.

But if success has invariably, in this war, attended the British arms, it cannot be denied, that to all appearance, the impression which it was desirable to make on the Imperial Government, has not been produced, and that the probable epoch of a settlement of differences is as uncertain as before, nor have we any data whereupon even to found a conjecture as to what the Peking government is likely to do. Hitherto, so far from having been intimidated, as was hoped would be the case, the arrival of the Expedition, and its successes from time to time, have only called forth from the Emperor Edicts increasing in their tone of hostility, and their threats of extermination, in the exact ratio as it might be rational to suppose an impression had been made by British arms. Witness the furious Edicts which were culminated from the throne after the destruction of the Bogue, when the Emperor solemnly swears that he will not cease hostilities until either one or the other of the contending parties is annihilated; nor is there much difference in the tone of the Imperial rescripts after the ransoming of Canton became known to him. We are as yet without information of what impression the taking of Amoy, Ningpo, and Chusan may have made, but from the circumstance that up to the last date from Chusan (26th October) no advances towards negotiation had been made on the part of the Chinese, we suspect that the warlike or rather hostile feelings of the Chinese government remain unchanged, and that very different measures and means from those hitherto employed must be put in motion, before we can hope for honorable peace.

It seems that the policy pursued by Sir Henry Pottinger has hitherto been that of giving as much annoyance as possible to the enemy, in order to compel him to be the first to come forward with proposals. Whether this will be successful we much doubt, at least not with the means at present at his disposal, with which he may be able to take or destroy several seaport towns, and thus produce local distress wherever he comes, but the impression thereby made upon the Empire at large, upon the Imperial government, and the nation, who are for subsistence dependent only in a very small degree upon the coasting or foreign trade, may possibly be but transitory, and the Chinese government may, without any very serious apprehension, look upon the attacks and small successes of an enemy, who is apparently wasting his strength without being capable of any great enterprise, as a momentary evil preferable by far to the humiliation of treating with him upon equal terms, and of making itself the first advances. That the sentiments of the Chinese continue hostile, receives further proof from the intelligence lately received from Amoy of large bodies of troops again collecting there, and from the preparations now carrying on at Canton.

We cannot from all we have said above, help coming to the conclusion that the force hitherto sent is altogether inadequate to carry out the objects proposed, and that unless very large reinforcements of troops arrive here in the early part of next year, we may expect that year also to pass over as the present has, nearly done, viz without approaching to the attainment of the objects contemplated by the Expedition.

THE SULTANA.
From the Singapore Free Press, 83d Sept.
CAPTAIN PAGE'S NARRATIVE OF THE DESTRUCTION OF THE "SULTANA," AND CAPTIVITY IN BORNEO PROPER.

At 9 P. M. on the 4th of January the Sultana was under double-reefed topsails to a fresh North Easterly gale with heavy sea and rain, when her main-top-mast and main-mast, head were shivered by Lightning: and several of the crew in, and on, the forecabin being knocked down, made me conclude it had passed from the ship by the chain cables. At 11:30 smoke was discovered issuing from below, fore and aft, and the decks much heated. We endeavored to get at the Gunpowder but found it impossible, and being of opinion the fire was general, below, the ship was hoisted to, and with much difficulty we succeeded in hoisting out the long boat, the flames forcing themselves up the main-hatchway and the vessel pitching heavily. On this occasion, as well as all throughout, the greatest credit is due to the Officers, Gunners, and Seamen. The boats were dropped astern, and the small quantity of biscuit &c. in them was nearly rendered useless from the salt water. At 1:30 P. M. on the 5th, not knowing how soon she would blow up, the chief officer and myself joined the boat. At this time every thing was rapidly burning on deck, and about 15 minutes afterwards the masts fell, when the poop became a mass of fire and wreck.

We remained near the hull until 9, and then made sail in the long boat, with a top-gallant standing sail, taking the other boats in tow, for the wreck of the French frigate Magicienne, which was lying in 3 feet water on the S. E. extreme of the Bumbay Shoal, bearing S. W. about 40 miles, intending to sit out from her and proceed to Singapore. At daylight on the 6th, went within a few feet of the wreck, but could not effect a landing; the wind increasing and the boats falling to leeward, we made sail for the land of Palawan then in sight. Served out for 3 days 2 1/2 part of a biscuit to each person, which was our entire stock and two wine glasses of water. Had fresh North Easterly winds with a most scorching sun. On the 9th the long boat was with great difficulty kept afloat. Lost sight of the cutter pulling in for the shore; Balaback Island N. E. distant 10 miles. On the 10th ran our boat on one of the Mangrook Islands, where we stopped some of the leaks and procured very bad water and a few shell fish. Found there two Malay huts with fire in them. On the 11th, expecting an attack from the Malays of the opposite shore, we lighted our fires and left in the dark, and from that time to the 16th, had light variable air with strong currents, when we arrived at the entrance of the Borneo river in the extreme of misery, with the tide and wind setting us in and no means of bringing up. Many of us had been twelve days with nothing more to eat than half a biscuit. There were in this boat Mrs. Page, and her attendant Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Miss De Souza, Mr. Gill the chief officer, Mr. Young, A. Loise, the Nakoda, myself and—lasters. We determined on applying to the Sultan for provisions to enable us to reach Singapore, and took in a pilot from one of his boats. This man informed us, that a ship had left the roads for Singapore two days before, and that three crews were preparing to start by the next moon, in which, no doubt, the Sultan, whom he described to be an excellent old man, would order us a passage, as he had repeatedly done the same with others in our situation. When within a few miles of the Sultan's house we were boarded by a heavily armed boat, which brought directions from the Sultan to take us and our effects before him, and he would be responsible for all. To this we submitted, and were landed in Borneo at an out-house of the Sultan's, where we were detained and most of our clothes &c.

taken and examined by him. My hutler had a box of trinkets of Mrs. Page's which was forced from him by one of the Sultan's people and given to the Sultan, whom I requested to see, but was told that was impossible as he was too great a man to be disturbed. At that time he was seen by the officers examining our parcels. He sent me a message by the gunner, the purport of which was that if we did not give up all we had to the person he had appointed, Phangrang Monain, his son-in-law, that the people around us, who afterward proved to be his private attendants, would take them and our lives, and if we did not wish to die we had better entrust every thing to his care, which should be returned when we left. An account was then taken in our presence and all valuable delivered to him accordingly, it being too evident he was determined to have them. We pointed out the man that stole the trinket box of whom they took no notice. They gave us some Rice and fruit and we were removed to a small room belonging to one of the Rajahs, and being thoroughly exhausted went to sleep. Later, directly on awaking I went to look after our boat, but only found part of her hull remaining, the Sultan having taken every thing from her even to the iron work, which we saw repeatedly afterwards in his house. On returning I found a disgusting looking Malay, who told us he was the Sultan, and we must always address him Patik Tomkoo, and that we were truly fortunate in having fallen into his kind care, as any other Rajah would have taken all we brought and then killed us. He then, without waiting a moment, started off accompanied by a train of armed men and boys, his constant attendants. I followed and requested to purchase provisions, saying we intended repairing our boat and leaving for Singapore in a few days. He replied he was far too good a King to permit us to leave in so small a boat, that he had a large Government prow which should be dispatched in a few days with us for Singapore, and that, as his most anxious wish was to gain the favorable opinion of the English, he had ordered clothes to be made for us, and we should be sent away loaded with presents. This I did not believe, and told him our own boat with a little provision would answer our purpose: much better than his, and that we would certainly give him a high character at Singapore. At this he was much displeased and desired me to leave him. This day we were fed on boiled grass and the heads and tails of small fish, the holes of which we had the satisfaction of seeing the Malays appropriate to themselves. The supply of food continued 10 days, with the exception of one duck, served on economically that it lasted only a party of 11 in number, 4 days, with a piece of tough buffalo. Amongst other things he had 340 Dollars of the chief mate which I demanded to defray our expenses, but he would not part with one of them. He now called constantly; piffing on all occasions. Five days after our arrival I demanded our boat, when he told me if ever I mentioned her again he should be much annoyed, as he wanted her himself, and then ordered his people to send me from his presence. I called the following day, and he said in 7 days more the prow would be ready as they were only detained to have calms made for the ladies. He advised me to be patient, as I was not a Captain in Borneo, and that he always did as he pleased. Mr. De Souza and I, he said, were good men and he would give us our lives and liberty, but the Officers, who had not offended him in any way, should have that—placing his hand in a threatening manner on his knee.

Pangrang Esouf now arrived, who is next in rank to the Sultan, and a council was held, which consisted of the Sultan and four Rajahs. We were informed its result was, that we should be allowed to Singapore in three prows which the Pangrang would have ready to sail in 15 days. He gave us some cloth and a buffalo calf, part of which, the Sultan, took without ceremony. I requested a bed for Mrs. Page, and received a new instead two months afterwards. We were now allowed one Rupee a day in value, with which, and our prospect of leaving, we became somewhat reconciled. The Sultan, after this told me he was sorry to disturb us, but he must have our apartment for a wedding to take place there, as we were to honor it in our new clothes. This was the last we heard of either. The incense used to be burnt by him, and told the Captain was a bad man &c. His son-in-law promised he would use his influence to procure our liberty, provided I engaged to give him the preference in taking the child when born. This I gave him to understand was quite out of the question. I requested the Sultan to permit us to leave in a private prow about to sail, but he said we must go in his, and asked me which of the things we had left in his charge, I should require—I replied he might have them all, and our boat also, if he did not prevent us departing immediately; but he observed he must have his present as well, to show my heart was pure towards him, and that we ought to think ourselves well off with our lives, and I had better not attempt to write to Singapore, as God would assist in getting us there. I said we had lost every thing in the ship, and could not give more than he already possessed of opium. The next day he offered me some sweet rice and said what he had of ours was of no value, I told him the property in his possession belonging to the officers and myself, was worth at least 3,000 Drs. that he might have it, and our boat, if he sent us to Singapore at once, to which he replied, he feared, there was but little prospect of his recovering the trinket box for me as the Malays were very cunning thieves, all excepting himself, he was like an Englishman, as he had never uttered a falsehood, or stolen anything in his life. Mr. de Souza and I then accompanied him in a canoe up the river, when he amused himself blowing a boatman's call he had forced from one of the tyndals he threatening him with 5,000 lathes. It was attached to one of Mrs Page's guard chains, which he wore round his neck, and was in the trinket box when taken. We repeatedly saw him afterwards with his rings over his fingers, taken from the same box. An old blind Rajah, his usual companion, boasted of their having cut off an English vessel and killed her officers, without the British Government taking the least notice of it. The Officers names were Dixon, Walker, Campbell, and Tate, and 22 Europeans, who all died about the same time! We were not ordered, by the Sultan, to leave our few remaining articles, and were conducted through a scorching sun over a passage of sticks 70 yards in length, elevated on piles 10 feet above the mud, most of them either rotten or broken, a difficult task for an active person. Mrs Page had to go repeatedly on her hands and knees, which might have been obviated, had the souldard allowed me to procure a canoe. We found a wretched hut for our reception, with one side of it as a fire place, without a door, and when it rained we might as well have been in the open air. Four places of a similar description were on the same platform with as, occupied by the Sultan's slaves. Our few effects were taken to his house and examined by himself, when he stole several of them. The allowance daily decreased, and we had numbers of armed men and boys continually in our room, who examined our food, and committed the most disgusting acts. He took the flannel shirt off my back himself, and sent for those of the Officers. On the 26th of February we heard the DeSouzas had settled with him to leave in a few days by promising a large sum of money. He now would not see us, and enquired men to strike me amongst the lascars, and who were ordered not to supply us with wood and water. I accidentally met him, when he said he had heard the boats would be ready in a few days, and we should all be sent to Singapore. He demanded what present I intended making him—I again mentioned the Jew's box &c. At this he was vexed and said I must consider that, and all we had brought here, as burnt in the ship, and our lives would have been lost also if he had not given them us. I offered him 500 Drs. being convinced he would not allow us to leave without some fresh inducement, at which he laughed in my face. Pangaran Ensof now returned after an absence of 45 days instead of 15. We immediately called on him but were received without civility. He said the Sultan would do as he pleased, and the prows would leave the next moon for all that he knew. The Sultan now sent for Mrs Page's wedding ring, observing that the English custom was the same as theirs not to take it off the finger, but that was nothing to him, he wanted it. It was sent him the following day, when he told me he did not care whether I was angry about the ring or not, and that he would make me answerable for my wife's acts. Our means of procuring food was now stopped altogether. I demanded what he intended doing with us, he replied he had given us our lives, and wanted his present, but would not say how much. I offered 2,000 Drs. for all, but he would not allow me to mention the lascars, and directed me to sign documents to the amount of 2,750, for the officers and myself and he would send to Singapore for the money.

We mentioned to Pangaran Ensof we had no food, when he laughed, but made no reply. I then told him if he would supply us with provisions and use his influence to procure us a passage, we would make him a present of 1,000 Drs. at which he promised to speak in our favour to the Sultan, and said if we would make him our friend, that he did not want the 1,000 Drs.; all he wished was to assist poor men in distress, but we must promise to give all the money we sent for into his hands, and he would take care of us, until one of our party returned from Singapore with it, and we had better send for all the funds we could raise, and he would procure merchandise for them and insure me a large profit. The following morning he requested me to write a list of upwards of 47,000 worth of articles, which he gave Mr. Gill instructions to bring as his present, informing me that we must pay besides for all we had from him; and on the 30th of March we took up our abode in an out-building close to his house. Mrs. Page was confined the night after, and all went well with her, notwithstanding her wretched situation. The Sultan now ordered us to make all the Rajahs presents, and we were obliged to give notes to the amount of 2,500. The prows were to sail in 4 days, but did not leave until the 23rd of May, when they took Mr. Gill, Miss and Mr. De Souza, and 3 native servants, we being detained as hostages Pangaran Ensof's brother Pangaran Yacob, informed us the Sultan had sold us to Pangaran Ensof, this we heard from all quarters. About this time a trank-built vessel of 30 tons, or thereabouts, arrived, jury rigged, which the Malays said the pirates had given them for 19 Drs. She had been a cutter, and likely a Dutch trader or gun-boat. Pangaran Ensof allowed us sufficient to procure food, 1½ Rupees per day, and was kind in sending Mrs. Page tea &c. and sold us some cloth for a change of clothes: They now commenced building what they called forts; several prows were converted into gun-boats, and their conversation was generally about fighting white men. On the 29th of July we saw our boat burnt for the iron work. On the 5th of August an English schooner was reported to have anchored in the Roads. All our lascars were sent out of the way and closely guarded, and the entire force of Borneo went to the river's entrance, as we feared, to cut her off. On the 9th Pangaran Ensof returned and told us the schooner had come to trade, but on being questioned he admitted she had demanded us, but the Sultan had decided not to let us go, until his prows and the money arrived from Singapore, should 10 ships be sent. Many of the Malays had told us that if their people were detained by the English Government, they would murder every European they could get hold of and that the Sultan now regretted that he did not kill us in the first instance. Pangaran Ensof had expressed himself much pleased at the manner in which the Sultan had acted, and informed me the prows Mr. Gill went in were dismantled; and blockaded by pirates. He desired me to write to Singapore, and he would send the letter by one of his prows, to say that we were determined not to leave until a ship was sent for us, as we feared the pirates, and that the schooner, which now proved to be the Rosalia, K. Y. S. nobly sent by Mr. Brooke from Serawak for us, was too small—I advised him to persuade the Sultan to let us depart in the prow, as we did not fear pirates, and he might send a person with us to settle accounts, but I positively refused to write, as the Singapore authorities would now certainly know our situation. He asked us if I had written to Mr. Gill for ships of war, but he observed, "I don't care whether you have or not, as it will be the worse for yourselves, as our forts are now all ready and we don't fear them. On the 25th 18 of the crew that were in the cutter arrived from Maludu, which place they reached two days after we lost sight of them, 9 of that party died from eating oysters and green mangoes on landing, and 19 are still near Maludu, which with those who were in the long boat, accounts for all that were on board the Sultana. They brought a report of an European lady being near there, whose husband along with the officers of the ship were killed by the Rajah 15 years since. She attempted to destroy herself at their death, but was prevented by the Rajah, by whom, she is said to have a family. She begged the lascars to inform the English of her wretched situation, but as they only saw her they learnt no further particulars. On the 2nd of September, we heard that 7 ships were in the Roads, and 2 steam vessels "like mountains." All their forces were dispatched to the forts, and it was told that it was all my fault as I had sent for them—Extra guards were placed over us, and they said if a Malay was killed it would be bad for me. On the 3d a boat arrived from the H. C. Steam Vessel Diana, with Pangaran Ensof, who ordered me immediately to go to the vessel as the Captain wanted to see me alone—I positively refused to leave without the rest of our party, and after a good deal of palaver we started from Borneo, accompanied by Pangaran Ensof, and arrived on board the Diana 2 hours afterwards. We found her the only vessel, and that she had been sent by the Singapore authorities. She was at anchor within gun shot of their absurd and harmless forts, and to the gallant manner in which Captain Conington stood up the river I entirely attribute his success. We heard to our very deep regret, that the prow Messrs Gill and the De Souzas went in was not forth-coming, altho' a gun boat had been sent by the Singapore authorities in search of her. Captain Conington with much difficulty procured all the people that arrived in Borneo in the long boat, and 9 of those that came from Maludu, so there are now in Borneo 9 of the Sultana's crew. Messrs Zicharek & Co. have sent a brig in search of the prow, and to their exertions we are particularly indebted. We have received the most generous kindness from Captain Conington and all on board the Diana.

CALCUTTA.

From the India Gazette, September.

We understand that the Proserpine, Iron Steamer, which arrived from England about two months ago, has undergone very extensive alterations to make her fit for a war steamer. She has been armed with two pivot guns traversing on circles, which we are told reflect great credit upon the arsenal. The steamer will proceed during next week to the Tenasserim Coast, and look in at Maulmain, to see if His Goldenfotied Majesty requires to be taught what powerful guns can do when they are worked as fitted on board of the vessel just named.

BY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

Head-Quarters, Calcutta, 16th August, 1841.—The following orders issued by Major General Sir Hugh Gough, K. C. B. commanding the eastern expedition, are with the sanction of Government, confirmed:

Dated the 14th March, 1841.—Appointing Brave Captain A. G. Moorhead, of Her Majesty's 28th foot, to continue to act as Sub-Assistant Commissary General; directing Color Sergeant A. Baxter of the same regiment, to resume his appointment as Deputy Provost Marshal; and re-appointing Sergeant R. Dickson an Acting Staff Sergeant in the Commissariat department.

Dated the 1st May, 1841.—Placing the services of Captain W. Caine, of the 26th Cameronians, at the disposal of Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary in China, for the Magistracy of Hongkong.

(From Fort St. George Gazette, August 20.)

Head-Quarters, Ship Marion Off the Bocca Tigrie, June 6, 1841.

MY LORD.—My public despatch to the Governor General will communicate the operations of this Force before Canton from the 24th, May to the 1st, of June, but I cannot permit that despatch to go forward without conveying to your Lordship, as head of the Government of Madras, the high commendation of the gallantry and exemplary conduct of that portion of the Madras Army, which forms a part of this Force.

The practice of the two Companies of the Madras Artillery was most creditable, and their indefatigable exertions in getting the Guns and Ammunition to the heights called for my best thanks. I feel it a duty to assure your Lordship that Captain Anstruther and every Officer, Non commissioned Officer and Lascar most creditably did their duty.

To Captain Cotton, Senior Engineer Officer, my best thanks are due, and it has afforded me no small gratification to record these sentiments in my public despatch, as also the expression of my thanks to every Officer of Engineers present, from whom I received the most ready assistance. The two Companies of Sappers merited and received my warmest approval.

I feel peculiar pleasure in bringing to your Lordship's notice the spirited and steady conduct of the three Companies of the 37th M. N. I. under Captain Duff. It fell to the lot of one Company under Lieutenant Hadfield to display these qualities in the most praiseworthy manner. Having become disengaged and unable to rejoin his Corps during a violent thunder-storm, he was surrounded by some thousand Chinese Militia, and maintained his ground, although from the heavy fall of rain the men's arms would not go off, until reinforced by two Companies of the Royal Marines with the persuasive, silent locks.

Lieut. Hadfield speaks very highly of the cheerful assistance he received from Lieut. Devereux and Ensign Berkeley, the latter of whom I regret to say was severely wounded. This Company had two Sepoys killed, 1 officer, 1 Havildar, 9 Sepoys and 1 Bhictie wounded.

I have &c.

STEAMER ENTERPRISE.—The H. C. Steamer Enterprise, Capt. C. F. West, arrived on Sunday; she touched at Manipatnam on the 20th, which by express hawk would probably just leave time for Captain Barlow of H. M. Ship Atwood, to reach Bombay in time for the Steamer of the 1st September. Captain Barlow, it will be remembered is bearer of the Admiralty despatches from China. The destination of the Enterprise has been changed, she will receive this day 230 boxes of treasure and then proceed to Bombay, probably leaving this evening. —Spectator, August 26.

HER MAJESTY'S SHIP SULPHUR, Macao.

Gentlemen,

It has already become my painful duty to cause two British vessels in the Canton River, to haul down pendents which they had presumed to wear.

As the flag, ensign, or pendants, are objects, equally deserving of attention, and a negligence in one case may be presumed on, as undue partiality.

I beg to direct the attention of the Owners, or consignees of vessels, frequenting this Port, to the consequences to which they will, inevitably, become liable, under chap. 13, art. 11, 4 William IV) should any of the Guard boats, in obedience to this act, bring to me any such seizures; and to refer them to chap. 89, art. 24, 4 and 5th William IV for the punishment to which I should become liable, by failing to forward the same.

At all times alive to the mercantile interests of my countrymen, and their respectability; which is never lessened by a due obedience, and respect, to the laws,

I have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servt.

EDWARD BELCHER,

Capt. and Senior Officer, Macao.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 13th Nov., 1841.

By the Ariel arrived from the coast yesterday, we have no later dates from Chusan than those brought by the Danville. From Amoy letters of 4th November have been received; everything until then had proceeded quietly there, but Capt. Smith had been threatened that on the next day, the 5th, freships would be sent down against his squadron, now consisting of the Druid, Nimrod, Pylades and Algerine. We doubt not that the gallant Captain will keep a good look out, and if the Chinese make the attempt, that their freships at Amoy will be as harmless as they have been everywhere else. Provisions continued plentiful at Amoy. The Minerva transport had got on shore, but came off without injury. Nothing whatever had been heard at Amoy regarding the crew of the Nerbudda.

H. M. S. Larne from Chusan is expected every moment at Hongkong, and we doubt not will bring us many of the particulars of the military operations there, and the neighborhood, of which we are still in want. We regret to hear that several cases of Cholera had occurred at Chusan and Ningpo, which may perhaps have been brought on by the immoderate use of Samsheew. Nothing is yet known concerning the next movements of H. M. Plenipotentiary, and whether any more extensive operations are contemplated. The Ariel has we understand brought down despatches from the Plenipotentiary for the Indian Government.

We have recopied Capt. Belcher's letter to the Commercial Community from last week's paper, and annexed extracts from acts of parliament referring to the subject. We recommend these papers to the attention particularly of our readers in the merchant service, who will see from them that the hoisting of any pendant, or of any flag resembling any used on board H. Majesty's ships, will subject them to heavy fines.

Per Wanderer from Calcutta we have received the India Gazette to 10th September, and made some extracts, which will be found in the usual place.

On Tuesday last, a Sing-song or theatrical representation was given near the temple on the inner harbour not far from the village of Mong-ha. As usual on such occasions, bamboo houses or boxes had been erected for the accommodation of spectators, who had thronged in greater numbers than usual to share in the amusement. The strength of the building was however unfortunately not able to support their accumulated weight, and in its fall some 5 men were killed, and about 80 more or less severely injured.

Several vessels have been taken up by the authorities at Hongkong for the temporary accommodation of the troops arrived in the Tartar and Earl of Hardwicke, and expected per Carnatic, no barracks having yet been built at Hongkong. We are happy to learn that the troops have during the passage enjoyed, and arrived in, excellent health, only one man on board of each of the two ships having been lost; namely one by fever, and the other by being accidentally knocked overboard.

The Chinese in and near Canton continue busily employed repairing old, and building new fortifications. Several new forts have been built on salt-junk river, near Napier's and Howqua's fort, and the hills at the back at Canton are covered with new forts. Fortunately for the Canton authorities, the British and other foreign trade now carried on at Canton, furnishes them with the means to pay for these extraordinary expenses. We stated last week that if the vessels now at Whampoa all left with Cargoes, the duty and charges on the exported Tea alone would amount to no less than £250,000 Dollars, and that the greatest part of this sum would find its way into the government coffers. The experience of the week has shown that we were perfectly correct in what we then stated, for about a week since the Hongmerchants were called into the City and had, it is said, a interview with the new Imperial Commissioner, Tih-se hun-poo, which lasted the greater part of the day, and on their return it was ascertained that they had been obliged to contribute one million of dollars towards the necessities of the state. This million will be very near the amount of brokerage and other charges on the exported Tea, and the remaining 250,000 £ have gone to the Hoppo direct for duties. Had the tea-trade not furnished them with the means, we doubt very much if the Hongmerchants would have been able to raise this new squeeze, and however wealthy a province Canton may be, we do not think that such an extraordinary supply could easily have been obtained by other means of taxation, exhausted as we may suppose the state-treasury to be, not only by the many and extraordinary expenses, the war has rendered necessary during a period of two years, but also by the ransom paid for the City of Canton. We repeat that we do not see any wisdom in a policy by which the enemy is provided with the means of prolonging the struggle, and the sooner a less ambiguous conduct is pursued towards him, the better.

The losses of the Chinese at Amoy are detailed to some extent in a memorial to the emperor by Yen Pih-tow, governor of Fukkeen and Chikkeen, who asks for 3,000,000 taels of silver (or about 4,333,000 dollars) for immediate use. Keang Keyun of Kin-mun (or Quemoy,) the governor says, fell into the water and died, in endeavoring to drive back the assailants, as they were landing. He was the commander-in-chief of the naval forces, the admiral being to the northward and wind-bound. Four other officers are reported, by the governor, as having fallen in the action; their names are Ling Che, Hwa Kwoking, Yang Shanke, and Le Keming—one a colonel, and the others of the rank of ensign. Wang Shetain, Natanchoo, and Yang Tingkeang, were among the wounded; the first a major, the second and third 1st-colonels. Among the soldiers, the killed and wounded were very many.—Chinese Repository for October.

From the Extracts from the Peking Gazette which have been kindly made for us, our readers will find that Paou-pang, the Comptroller, has been sentenced to banishment for life to Ele, and that he is not to be executed. This comparatively lenient punishment makes us hope that the sentence of death pronounced against Keeshen will also be commuted into milder punishment. Lin's banishment to Tartary has not been of long duration; he has been recalled, and ordered to superintend the repairs of the banks of the Yellow River, which has lately by over-flowing destroyed the Capital of Honan. The office of superintending these repairs is, we believe, in rank, equal to a provincial government, but far below it in emolument.

We have copied from the Register the following account of the capture of some pirates near Hongkong. No less than 57 of these are now in jail, most of whom have been sentenced to a severe flogging, and to three years working upon the roads. Against some however, although the presumption of their guilt is great, there exists no evidence, and it is feared they will get off free. The Pirates which infest these seas have been guilty of the most enormous cruelties towards their captured countrymen, killing and mutilating many, and we are glad to learn that the authorities at Hongkong are actively engaged in suppressing so great an evil, in their immediate neighbourhood at least.

CAPTURE OF A PIRATE.—On the 29th instant, captain Thomson, of the transport Fyff Salm, having received private information, that a Chinese pirate boat, with a prize, had been seen in a small bay, on the Kowloon side of Hongkong harbour. Immediately proceeded, accompanied by lieutenant Miller and ensign Duprier of her majesty's Cameronians. In the long boat in search of her, and from the description of her position, given by a Chinese, whom they took to point her out, kept close in shore, and on rounding the point of the bay, came suddenly in full sight of her, lying under the lee quarter of the salt junk, she had taken. Immediately she perceived the boat making towards her, she ran up an opium smuggler's flag, and as the boat neared her, seeing the officers armed, endeavoured to cast off the painter, but the boat was put alongside, and boarded before they had time sufficiently to recover from their panic to fire a shot, although they had two four pounders, and two gingalls on deck, one of each loaded with grape: they had also a great variety of match locks, double swords, and dirks, and quantities of cartridges and grape made up. The large junk was immediately got under weigh, the pirate taken in tow, all brought safe to Hongkong, and the prisoners lodged in jail. After part of the prisoners were put under hatches in the junk, four more were discovered, who had buried themselves in the salt, making in all eighteen: two of the junk's people had been hurt in the affray on the pirates first taking her.

It is surprising, that the pirates, being daring enough to approach so near the fleet, allowed themselves to be taken by so few as three English officers and a boat's crew of lascars.—Canton Register, 9th November.

From the Peking Gazette.

ROBBERIES AT PEKING.—One of the Censors, Lew Tain, memorializes the Emperor in relation to the great number of daring Robbers who are prowling about within the imperial city and in the regions round about. He states that the robbers inure themselves out of all observation during the day, and at night sally forth and commit sad depredations. His Majesty is annoyed at this state of things, and says he shall hold the different officers of the five departments of the city responsible for putting an end to such practices, proclaiming that if they do not arrest the thieves he will forthwith have them arrested.

DEFICIENCY IN THE REVENUE.—The Gazettees state the deficiency in the annual income of the Revenue for the current year to amount to one hundred and forty thousand Taels including all the Province. The refusal of the people to pay is stated as the cause of this deficiency. The Emperor orders the officers to exert themselves to the utmost in collecting taxes and to arrest all who refuse to pay in future.

A PROMOTION.—An officer named Lew Tse, who has charge of the department of Yeu ping in Canton province, but bordering upon Fokeen, succeeded in arresting a gang of fourteen murderers and handing them over to the Governor at Canton city. The Governor memorialized the Emperor on the subject, and His Majesty awards promotion to Lew Tse for his official faithfulness.

H. E. YANG FANG.—Yang fang having arrived at Canton reported himself to the Court as being in ill health and consequently unable to carry out the designs for which he was sent. The Emperor orders him to wait until he recovers and then earnestly to set about the accomplishment of the purposes of his mission.

THE NEW MAYOR OF CANTON.—The former Mayor of Canton (Kwang chow foo) having resigned, Ke king the Governor recommends Yu Paou shun as an individual every way worthy to fill the office. The Emperor accepts the recommendation, and accordingly appoints Yu Paou shun to be Mayor of Canton City.

BARBARIAN WAR SHIPS.—A statesman Na Ne king gib, a Manchow, recommends to the court that as the barbarian war ships have all withdrawn from Canton Province, it is unnecessary to detain the troops there any longer, but suggests that they all be ordered to return to their respective encampments in the various Provinces. To this His Majesty assents and issues his orders accordingly.

SMUGGLERS.—Eight high military officers of Keang nan Province have succeeded in seizing a number of smugglers, and they are officially ordered to repair to the Capital to be rewarded with promotion for their faithfulness.

IMPERIAL TOMBS AND TEMPLES.—The Mayor of Peking represents to the Emperor that many of the imperial tombs and temples are in a dilapidated state, and greatly need repairs, owing to heavy and continued winds and rain. The Emperor orders the necessary repairs to be attended to.

AMOY.—Two high military officers who had charge of the two principal encampments at Amoy, had constantly represented to the Governor of Fokeen that both of the said encampments contained their full complement of troops; and they bribed other parties to make the same representation. The Governor finding out that these encampments were really seriously lacking in numbers and efficiency, memorializes the Emperor that the two commanders Kaou-shang-tse and Hen Tse-hway be disgraced.

MOUNTED BANDITS.—In Shantung Province great complaints are made against a certain band of robbers who, mounted upon fleet horses, have been guilty of daring deeds of theft in the district of Chowheen. The Lieut. Governor represents to the Court that these rogues have become thus bold through the sheer laxness of the district magistrates, and recommends that every one of them be disgraced.

KESHEN.—The Emperor and his Grand Council seem to be really puzzled to know what to do with this statesman. His Majesty again orders that he be brought up before the council that his crimes may be fully determined upon, and the proper punishment definitely pointed out.

FOKEEN PROVINCE.—The Governor of this Province, for some misdemeanor not stated in the Gazettees has been disgraced two degrees but allowed to retain his office.

ELEPOO.—This high minister being sent to Che-keang Province last year to arrange the barbarian affairs, utterly failed in carrying out the designs of His Majesty by delaying his destructive operations against the barbarians. He has accordingly, by imperial order, been summoned before a special council, who have sat in deliberation upon his conduct; and at their recommendation the Emperor disgraces him from all his official dignities, and banishes him to the cold country. The sentence is to be carried into immediate effect.

TEENTSI.—The Governor of Che-le Province (Peking) represents to the Emperor that substantial and well constructed forts have been erected at Teentsin, mouth of the Peiho, and that they are all mounted with superior cannon, and in a thorough state of preparedness. He also assures the Emperor that at the same place there is at present collected a very large force of well disciplined and able bodied troops both foot and horse highly skilled in the use of the sabre, musketry, cannon, and the bow and arrow; all ready to commence a campaign of certain and glorious victory. There is no intimation given that these preparations have been made in view of a probable invasion by the English.

PAOUCHUNG.—Paouchung is to be banished to the cold country for the part he played in the 'Chubeen Treaty,' and at other times. The Lieut. Governor of Shan tung who recommended Paouchung to Keshen is ordered to appear at Peking to stand his trial before the Board of Punishments, and the Heen officer of Shan-tung with whom Paouchung lodged is disgraced in obedience to the imperial will.

E le poo.—Another Gazettee states that the council before whom E le poo was tried, found him guilty of imbecility and tardiness in arranging the affairs connected with the barbarians at Chusan &c., and the Emperor confirms the sentence of official disgrace and banishment.

NEW TEMPLE AT TEENTSI.—In addition to the forts, a splendid new temple has been erected at Teent sin by imperial bounty, and the Governor of the Province respectfully notifies its completion. The Emperor contributes the usual tablets and inscriptions.

INCREASE OF CRIME.—The Gazettees plainly demonstrate a fearful increase of robbery, plundering, bribery, smuggling, and official delinquencies. The Board of Punishments seem to be actively and constantly employed in the trial of faithless officers, although many are unjustly accused.

On the other hand very many officers of different grades have been promoted, a majority of them for arresting the lawless and guilty.

IMPERIAL EDICT.

Peking Gazette, 7th moon, 23th day. (September 10th). Received the following Imperial Edict.

In this case Paou-pang (the comprador) is the criminal, who in a confused, disorderly manner bought opium for others—he acted as a broker. And he intrigued with and bribed the linguists to get himself recommended to the barbarian ships; moreover, he accompanied Keshen to Canton.

Now, as according to the evidence before the great officers of the royal kindred, it is proved he was united in friendly and confidential intercourse with the outside nations, the law is that he be banished.—I therefore order that Paou-pang be sent to E-le, and be delivered over as a slave to the military; and even on days of great delivery, he is not to be released.*

Chau Tse-yung, the Cheshen of Wei been, in the province of Shantung, said that he is intimately acquainted with Paou-pang, and yet, knowing that he did not rest contented in his original occupation, still he did not inflict on him dismissal, but still retained him in employment, and recommended him (to Keshen) for a linguist, a fault of which he cannot refuse (the allegation).

I order Chau Tse-yung to be immediately deprived of his official rank, and it is not necessary again to refer him to the proper board for punishment; if the said dismissed officer has left any unfinished or undecided matters in his office, I order the fooyuen to examine into and manage them.

Ts Fungso, the fooyuen of Shantung, having listened to the recommendation of Chau Tse-yung, that Paou-pang should be appointed linguist to the barbarian ships: this is also unreasonable. I order that he be delivered over to the proper board for punishment.—Respect this.

Canton Register, 9th Nov. By J. S., Ed. C. R.

We have been favored by a friend, an eyewitness, with the following interesting paper, which from its length we are unable to give entire in this issue, and therefore reserve the other half for next week.

REMINISCENCES OF AMOY.

The fleet departing on the 31st August from Hongkong, made at first little progress. Calms and the slow sailing of some transports detained the ships near the Lemmas. A fine breeze however sprung up shortly afterwards; it was right aft and the 36 vessels under the guidance of the line of battle ships and the frigates, forming three lines, reached on the 25th Chapel Island (Lam-tai) the landmark for Amoy. We were now in sight of the barren coast, which has a more forbidding aspect than anything we are accustomed to see near Canton, but the place of our destination was still hid from our eyes.

The harbour or rather bay of Amoy is flanked by several islands, on two of which the Mandarins with their customary precaution had erected batteries. When therefore the Modeste and one of the steamers had approached within range of gunshot, the Celestials as they are wont to do gave her a sample of hard iron, which was returned; but the steamer that enjoyed the same honor, slighted the compliment and silently paddled away.

Before we enter upon the capture of Amoy, we must give a slight description of the state of politics that were swaying the minds of the rulers at that time. The success obtained, according to the reports of the Mandarins, over two barbarian men of war, last year, inspired the garrison with the most boyant hopes. To stimulate and perpetuate the patriotism, several officers had been richly rewarded, and their names were emblazoned with high encomiums in all streets and corners. Two heads of some natives accused of high treason were moreover stuck up on the sea shore, to serve as a warning for the conspirators not to combine with the barbarian invaders. The supreme Government in fact was so apprehensive, that the natives would side with the foreigners, that no means were left untried to confirm their wavering loyalty, and riches and butions were promised to them, if they would exert themselves in defending their fatherland. The governor general Yen himself gave a sacred pledge to fulfil the engagement to the very letter, but still the natives read the proclamation and grinned, being well aware that the whole was mere verbiage, and nothing else.

The erection of more fortifications was the next measure. Amoy possesses a citadel, but this can not protect the harbour, nor secure the town along the beach, against bombardment. And as it is the general opinion, that walls and guns are a sure safeguard to a place, the ingenuous set to work and built a very extensive line of fortifications, consisting of long granite walls, of about eight feet in thickness, the largest of which was overlaid by a thick coating of sods to prevent the balls from splitting the rock. The principal works were on the island of Amoy, the longest battery being about a mile in length; there were some small ones on the Tinghae side, and the island of Kolangssze, abreast the town of Amoy, had two more. Only the latter could have prevented a vessel from entering the inner harbour, for she could with a leading wind steer free of gun shot from all the others. The construction was considered superior to what we were accustomed to behold at Canton. In the large embrasures there were iron guns of middling size to the number of 32, only a very few being as large as those at Wantong. By some means or the other, the admiral had forgotten to cast the brass guns, for which the copper had been received, and he had established a foundry for iron pieces only.

The greater part of the forts were ready at the beginning of the year. The provincial treasury had furnished for this purpose the largest sums, whilst the people of Amoy had been obliged to make up the remainder with voluntary contributions, after a great deal of murmuring. When however every body rejoiced at the wonderful progress of the works, behold, there came an imperial edict, intimating that the barbarians might be managed without having recourse to fire and sword, and that they would be by and by tranquilized by some other means. This was after the surrender of Chusan, when the Court was confident, that all the difficulties might be removed by diplomacy. But when Canton had been taken, and six millions of ransom money paid, the news reached Amoy within a very short time, and as it had been ascertained, that the forces would from there proceed to Fokeen, new preparations were immediately set on foot, to beat the barbarians off. Yen, an experienced statesman and warrior, and on that account raised to the dignity of Governor of Fokeen and Chekeang, came himself to the spot, to superintend the armaments, and the formation of a camp, and neither experience nor labour were spared to render the place impregnable.

Admiral Tow, a Heangshan man, well acquainted with the coming of the barbarians, went still further in his valour, and actually constructed a number of two deckers to encounter them boldly in the open sea. The merchants were requested to add to the fleet by the present of their own junks, and several came forward to enrich the imperial navy, for which they received a battalion and a nominal rank. New patriotic gifts were moreover levied upon the grudging shopkeepers, and the mandarins made a very handsome sum by peculation from the public treasure.

Their earnest desire was therefore to prolong the war to an indefinite period; for, what with building of forts and raising of cannon, and with long bills and drawing large sums, even a corporal might be enabled to lay by a handsome sum. The people were in the mean while called upon to suggest plans for the destruction of the Barbarian robbers, the honorable epithet under which the English are constantly mentioned. Many of you, the edict said, have been in foreign countries, you know the character and the doings of this race, and therefore have the means of assisting your government with salutary advice. If your plans are apposite and succeed, you will be raised to high rank in your country, and your name will be immortalized. In another document, Yen calls upon the water braves to assemble in flocks, and take service, under the Admiral, there being at that time a very great scarcity of soldiers, who always abound in time of need. As the bounty was very liberal, and the allowance of rice considerable, thousands came forward to serve in the war-junks. The intrepid Tow was delighted with their zeal, and associatingly remarked, that though the vessels of the English robbers were large, yet as a sparrow could perch with impunity on the back of a cow, they might as well manage to take these huge craft and kill the whole crew outright. A civilian who was well versed in naval affairs, had heard, that the poorer classes in Chaoouhou district, when going out to fish, were in the habit of harnessing large fish (whales?) to their boats and thus could resist the influence of wind and waves. They might therefore be very properly employed in capturing the English men of war, for, with such finny allies they were invincible. The plan was very good and worthy of the highest consideration. In our humble opinion you might purposely construct a pond for whales, and have them regularly trained for their duty, and whenever a vessel was to leave, just fix a hawser in their body, fasten a bridle in their jaws, and attach them with some chain cable at the tail to the ships heads, and then let them perform the duty of tugs; this would indeed render all the complicated operation of steam engines unnecessary, and save a good many coals. But enough of this wonderful proposal, which no doubt will astonish all our contemporaries.

In accordance to the general custom, rewards were held out for capturing men of war, and the courage of the good people was screwed up to the pitch. And now every thing was ready for the reception of the Barbarians, they were confidently expected every day, and army and navy were on the look out. Yen had concentrated all the disposable forces of the Province, and collected a corps of more than 10,000 men, whom with the peculiar wisdom of Chinese tacticians he had divided into small detachments, but there were in and about Amoy 3,600 men, according to the muster roll. Every body was filled with sanguine anticipation, the sailor and soldier hoped to engage the Barbarians, and a certain victory as in the former two instances was expected, yet no Barbarian came. And so it happened, that hope deferred made the grantees all repent of their former haste, and Yen declared in a proclamation, that the English had been wheedled into compliance, and perusing all the documents of Yihshan and his splendid memorials to his sovereign, of which he had obtained correct copies, he naturally concluded, that the war was at an end. The water braves, who had shewn a most voracious appetite, eating the rations of two ordinary men and moreover proved themselves very feeble were forthwith dismissed. Being however a disorderly body, they created a great deal of disturbance in Amoy, and the Keunminfoo had to issue another edict for their dispersion.

This happened about a month before the arrival of our ships. The passage having been so very quick, no previous information of their approach had reached Amoy. The first news were sent in by a fishing boat, the crew of which stated, that many Barbarian vessels had been seen outside. Unfortunately the Admiral was absent; he had left several days ago, to cruise against pirates or perhaps to intercept the hostile fleet, and put the vice admiral of Kinmun in charge of the forces. This was indeed a great blow to all celestial hopes, but the governor immediately made himself commander in chief, placing the latter officer in the principal battery. There had been a fast ordered for the next day, on account of the great prevailing drought, and the Keunminfoo was to go in procession to the temples. But as soon as he perceived, that the long entertained fears were now realized, he immediately issued an edict promising rewards for every head of a white and black man that might be brought to him, and stimulating the people to fight for the preservation of their lives and property.

Towards the evening of the 25th, the Commandant of the Northeastly fort sent in a paper stating, that 30 ships and three steamers had arrived in the offing of Tsingau, an island at the entrance. As these vessels were however awed by the tremendous fire kept up by the Celestials, they had anchored for the night. The latter was perfectly true. A fresh breeze was blowing when the English came all to an anchor. The night passed quietly on board the ships, whilst there was bustle and consternation on shore.

Early in the morning the British commanders reconnoitred, when a Chinaman who had been previously living at Singapore, came on board the Wellesley, to inquire, what all these vessels had for sale. He had been sent by the Keun min foo, and rather trembled in the execution of his commission. As there was an earnest desire to prevent the effusion of blood, if possible, the city was summoned, to surrender, and the letter sent on shore by this emissary. The document was opened and read by every one, but produced not the slightest effect.

About noon a breeze having sprung up, the men of war advanced to the combat, preceded and accompanied by the shell throwing and skirmishing steamers. The line of battleships having been laid abreast the largest fortifications, both the Blonde as well as Druid advanced to the attack of the forts of Kolangssze, the Modeste proceeding up the town and the other vessels taking each separately their stations. The long Battery, which was as strong as any at Canton, held out for more than two hours, and as soon as the fire slackened on the part of the English vessels, some one or other brave man stepped forward to load and fire one of the guns of the fort. And so the battering might have gone on for a long while, for the walls were impenetrable, if a party of marines and sailors had not been landed. The troops had in the mean while been put on shore by the steamers, and were going to take the Chinese garrison in flank, when the latter wisely resolved not to allow them the chance, and ran away very unimpaired. At one of the outer forts where only a very small party opposed them, the garrison returned several times to the charge, but were repeatedly beaten off. In the centre all was confusion and flight. One of the mates however venturing too rashly into the camp, was pierced by an arrow that went through the thick flesh of his leg, and another sailor shot through his back with a matchlock; but these were all the casualties that occurred, with the addition of the scorching of one or two men, and the loss of five soldiers by the swamping of a boat in tow of one of the steamers.

To our great astonishment, the first to leave were the Mandarins. Governor Yen, having been at an eminence a spectator of the fight, ran away as early as three o'clock in the afternoon, and carried with him most of his household furniture. He was followed by the Keunminfoo and Taoutae with all their underlings, and thenceforth there seemed to be a tacit understanding that every body should cut and run. Shway lung, the second in command of the large battery, however thought differently. He was a colonel, and remained to the last at his gun. When he saw our gallant tars making rapidly for him, he tried at first to escape, but was shot into the leg. Then he drew his sword and wished to commit suicide, when a soldier sprang forward and arrested his arm. The sailors approaching, the latter ran away as fast as he could, whilst the Colonel, seeing no alternative but captivity, severed with his sword his head from the body, and fell a bloody corpse in the road. The Commander-in-chief gave all up for lost, when he espied the brave British troops advancing and walked boldly into the water and drowned himself. The next day his body was thrown upon the beach, a hideous mass of flesh. Another Mandarin blew out his brains, rather than surrender; several others being the hindmost were shot by the pursuers, and one, a corporal who had been wounded in his arm, received a reprieve. Having been brought up by the sailors and put on board a man of war, he shewed very great unconcern at what had happened. I have been a soldier, he said, but now I have finished my career. Upon all questions that were put to him, he gave a straightforward answer, being quite indifferent about betraying the strongholds of his nation to the Barbarians. He had his arm taken off with stoical apathy, and began to recover, when after a few days he grew quite outrageous in his conduct and forced his benefactors to send him on shore.

The batteries fired very high, and only a few shot struck. One sailor had his arm taken off by a ball, and another died of concussion of the brain, on account of his having looked out of the port, whilst a thirty two pounder was being fired.

The vessels proceeding towards the Kolangssze batteries, were at first saluted by the Tinghae fort, the shot of which however fell short. The Blonde, on going abreast the Chinese junks, got aground, and in this state, she landed the marines and the 26th Regiment. Every thing in the power of the Chinese was done to sink the boats, but the balls flew over them. On landing, the garrison tried to roll stones upon the assailants, which the latter carefully avoided. They made then a charge with their long spears before the fort, and being well received by musket fire, they at once were thrown into disorder, and the war cry was, «auve qui peut!» And thereupon these brave men began to run, without further reflection, and those who were not killed, either saved themselves by swimming, or jumped on board of some native boats. On the part of the English not one was wounded. About 5 o'clock all the forts were either evacuated or in possession of the British. The Chinese had been studious to erect massive walls, but never thought of fortifying the rear, so that any force might have at their pleasure marched up to the very back of the gunners and shot the artillerymen, without their being able to offer resistance. The fortifications moreover were so extensive, and the guns so numerous, that an army of 10,000 men would scarcely have been sufficient to defend them properly. As it was, the soldiers were not adequate to work the cannon, and a dispatch dated the evening before, and addressed to the governor, announced the intention of the Mandarins of pressing the village braves into their service.

Besides the cannon, there were plenty of bows and arrows found scattered about. The vanquished had retired over the barren hills which divide the island of Amoy in two parts. Whilst they were climbing up the rugged rocks, they were a good deal annoyed by the numerous shot that whistled about their ears. Most of them however escaped, and towards evening not one official down to the lowest police runner was anywhere visible.

On the following day, our troops took possession of the Citadel, a small fortress of about one mile in circumference. Nobody knew what had become of the governor; and there were some dark surmises, that he had committed suicide. No certain intelligence however could be obtained, and the people merely guessed that he had likely run away to Chinchew. As for the other mandarins they were lost beyond all hope, and the brave army was totally disbanded.

Under such circumstances, it was by no means a wonder, that the people began to laugh at their own officers; to whom they have by no means any good will, as they had been very severely squeezed. The rabble, which is here very numerous, got more over the upperhand, and all order and control were totally at an end. As a great part of the people hereabouts have visited the India Archipelago, they are well conversant with foreigners, and did not shew any symptoms of fear. The solitude that reigned throughout the houses, and the sacking of many buildings, sufficiently gave them an idea of the horrors of war, which can never be too much deplored. But they reasoned very correctly by saying, we have nothing to do with the present quarrel, our mandarins have rejected peace and let them now bear the consequences. If you wish to be our rulers, treat us as your people, but not as your enemies. We understand the nature of your government from the establishment of your dominion at Singapore, and to similar way we are willing to bow. These sentiments were received by many, in the sincerity of their hearts, though unheeded for the time being.

H. M. SQUADRON TO THE NORTHWARD.

ACT No. XVIII. of 1841.

An act for consolidating and amending the enactments concerning the exportation of military stores.
I. It is hereby enacted, that arms, ammunition and military stores (with the exception of arms in the possession of individuals for private use) shall not be exceeding 500 rupees, and such gunpowder shall become forfeited on the award of the officers authorized to grant licenses as aforesaid or the collector of customs.

III. And it is hereby enacted, that it shall be lawful for any of the Governments aforesaid, to allow at any

CALCUTTA.
THE CALLOPE.—We are told that the Callope frigate, which has just arrived here, is going into dock, and that she is so infested with rats as to render it absolutely necessary to smoke her. Government are anxious to have every thing done to the vessel with the utmost expedition, as she is required for immediate service.
India Gazette 10th Sept.

NEW SOUTH WALES.
The population of Sydney on the 1st January, 1838, had reached nearly 20,000 souls; and there is little doubt that by this time it is not less than 30,000. A considerable portion of these are emancipists—most of them once assigned convicts—who contrive to succeed better in the capital than in the rural districts. The number of convicts imported, from the year 1830 to 1838, amounted to 30,212; and of these 10,149 had become free by servitude, and 1,100 by pardon. The last official returns that we have seen are those of the 1st January, 1838. At that period the population of New South Wales consisted of—males, 55,539; females, 21, 557; total 77,096. Of these there were—free males, 30,285; free females, 18,980; total, 49,265. Convict males, 25,254; convict females, 2,577; total, 27,831.
But we know that, in 1839, the population exceeded 114,000, and in 1840 was nearly 130,000.

As the population of the whole colony by the census taken in 1835 was only 39,797, it would appear to have nearly doubled itself in three years. At the end of 1837 it was 77,096, and at the middle of 1840 is supposed to have exceeded 130,000;—it therefore continues pretty nearly to do so; and the revenue appears to keep pace with it. The ordinary revenue was—at the end of 1837,

It appears remarkable that among the free settlers there should be so great a disparity between the sexes as eleven men to four women; but in these are included all the emancipists, about a third of the whole. In the convicts, the disproportion appears to be as twelve men to one woman. The consequence of this many well be imagined, and the fact points out most strongly the necessity of sending out as many female convicts as the home government have in custody, instead of shutting them up in jails and penitentiaries in England, at an enormous expense, from whence they generally come out more debased than when they entered: whereas transportation has not only saved crowds from misery, and not a few from the gallows, but has actually converted thousands into wealthy citizens, and many of them into good moral and religious subjects. For it is due to the colonists to say, that neither care nor expense have been spared in establishing schools and procuring schoolmasters, not only in the capital, but in every town and parish, to instruct the children of both sexes on the Mudra system, and with due attention to the principles of religion and morality. In 1838 the number of males in the schools was 1396; females, 1072; total, 2468.
The expense about 10,000*l.* Separate schools for Roman Catholics—number of scholars, both sexes, about 900.

There is besides in Sydney a special class of schools for youths of parents in better circumstances, wherein they receive a classical education—King's School, 105; Sydney College, 125; Australian College, 70; in all 300 scholars.

The state of trade will convey some idea of the progressive prosperity of Australia. The amount of the value of Imports in 1837 was £1,182,222 Increase in one year
" 1838... 1,506,803 £324,581.
" 1839... 1,679,390 Increase £172,587.
Exports in 1837... £ 747,570 Increase in one year
" 1838... 774,770 £27,194.
Exports in 1839, with the produce of the fisheries, were £948,776.

The fisheries, too, were on the increase, but we shall have to speak of them hereafter—
In 1838 the value of the black whale oil alone exported was..... £ 37,669 Bone..... 11,567
Sperm..... 65,047

Total value..... £114,293
Six Germans from one of the heat vine districts on the Rhine—married men with their wives and fifteen children —arrived at Sydney in 1806, and were sent to an estate in the country. These vine-dressers have successfully proceeded in the cultivation of a vineyard previously managed by three or four Greeks transported to Sydney for piracy. The Germans have extended the vineyards, and in 1840 had made 3,500 gallons of good wine; so that there is now every promise of New South Wales adding wines to her exports. Some idea may be formed of the increasing prosperity of our Australian colonies by the fact that, at this moment, there are advertised in the "Packet List" twenty-six vessels, chiefly from the Thames, and in "Lloyd's List" no less than forty-five vessels, all from the Thames, preparing for these crusades.

CANTON PRESS.
Macao, 20th Nov., 1841.

H. M. S. Lorne from Chusan arrived here on the 13th, and proceeded again on the 15th to Bombay, with Capt. Harry Evves, charged with despatches for the Admiralty—Lieut. Gabbet, Madras Artillery, charged by Sir. Hugh Gough with despatches for the Governor General, also arrived here per the Lorne and proceeded to Calcutta in the Arlet.

The news received during the week from the north add little to that we were previously in possession and reported in the two last numbers of the Canton Press.
The threat of an attack on Capt. Smith's squadron by fire rafts at Amoy, has, as was to have been expected, not been carried into effect, and everything remains quiet there as well as at Ningpo, Chinhae, and Chusan. It is said that Her Majesty's Ple-ni-potentiary has demanded the sum of 8 millions of Dollars as ransom for the town of Ningpo, and for the nonmolestation of Hang-chow-foo the capital, and other towns of that Province. Up to the last accounts no reply had however been received from the Chinese authorities, although a channel of communication had, after some difficulty, been opened with them. The booty which at Chinhae and Ningpo has fallen into the hands of the English, is very considerable, and a respectable amount of prize-money will reward the exertions of the Army and Navy. The most valuable part of the capture is probably an immense quantity of cash, the low metal currency of the country, of which no less, it is supposed, than a million dollars worth has been found. Of Sycee and Dollars the quantity hitherto discovered has, we believe, not been very great, but it is stated at such different amounts that we may probably be far wrong in mentioning either. A considerable quantity was found concealed in hollow logs of wood of which it is supposed a great porportion must have been carried away by the Chinese before the discovery was made. The article next in value, if not equal to the cash, is an immense quantity of Copper found stored at Chin-hae, and intended to be converted into cannon. The quantity has by some been estimated at 600 tons, but is probably much greater. It was being shipped into the transports, and its quality is said to be very good. A large number of very heavy pieces of brass and copper ordnance have likewise fallen into the hands of the captors, and are also of great value. The quantity of saltpetre is very considerable. Besides this the immense granaries at Ningpo were well filled, and we are told that the sale of this paddy brought about $12,000 each day. It was selling to the poor, who were allowed to fill a bag of about 9 cwt for one dollar. That at such cheap rate the demand was great, may easily be imagined. A great many naval stores have also been found, such as planks, spars, coil-rope, etc, which from their bulk, however, are of little value, and will probably have to be destroyed.

The movements of the British forces would of course greatly depend upon the issue of negotiations with the provincial authorities of Chekeang; should these object to the terms offered them, it is supposed the capital Hang-chow-foo will be taken.

Instructions have been sent by the Larne to the senior officer commanding on this station, to detain all Junks laden with valuable cargoes, and to obstruct the coasting trade as much as possible; the trade between Formosa and China also is to be interrupted, and in fact, the Chinese trade to be harassed as much as practicable. An exception is however made in favor of Junks going to or coming from British settlements in the Straits and Hongkong, and such other Chinese vessels as may be provided with passes from any of the officers commanding on the several stations. We have not heard whether any Junks have, in consequence of these orders, already been detained. The present is not the season when many junks, engaged in foreign trade, may be found on the high seas.

We are glad to see that at length steps are likely to be taken to put an end to the half measures which have obtained so long, and it is only when the Chinese are made aware that war is made in earnest, and when they shall begin to feel the distress thereby occasioned, that we can hope to see them come forward, ready sincerely to treat for peace. The trade of Canton and Whampoa is however, for the present, not to be interfered with, and we think it therefore not unlikely that a great porportion of the teas now there, may be shipped off, before the Chinese authorities will put a stop to the trade, which it is not improbable they may be inclined to do when they learn of the seizure of vessels belonging to their people, even in the neighborhood of Canton. The squadron here has been reinforced by return from Amoy of the Nimrod.

Our latest accounts from Canton are of the 16th. Everything remained quiet, and teas were being shipped off without interruption. But the high prices which we mentioned a fortnight since as being paid for Congous have not been maintained, and those then valued at 35 T., may now be had for 31 T. The scarcity of money is very great; the circulating medium, consisting of Spanish pillar dollars, and which for some time past has been barely sufficient, was rendered much more scarce by the shipment of a large sum to India of the Canton ransom money, and is growing less every day by the destruction of these coins by the Chinese fashion of stamping them, while the deficiency can no longer be supplied by importation of the Spanish dollar, and those of the American Republics have not yet obtained currency here.

We have had the pleasure of seeing several officers who were present at the capture of Chusan and Chin-hae, and have gleaned from them, as well as from some letters we have seen and received, a few more particulars of those affairs. The fortifications at Tinghae were on a great scale, and several of them erected with considerable engineering skill. A joss house particularly had been made a very strong position, and a long battery had been erected to guard the coast, but was not quite finished, many of its embrasures being unfurnished with cannon. The forces, as is already known, were landed on the Island of Chusan on the 1st October, and after partial fighting during about five hours, the City of Tinghae was again taken. In several instances the Chinese displayed considerable courage, but it is very probable that the effort would have been terminated in much shorter time, had not rains previous rendered the road, on which the soldiers had to march towards the battery, nearly impracticable. The causeway leading towards it was so much covered with mud, that it was frequently undistinguishable from the surrounding swamps, and the soldiers, losing it, sunk to over their ankles into a heavy tenacious clay, impeding their march, during which many had to leave their shoes behind. Of this circumstance the Chinese took advantage, and kept up a fire from the hills as well as from the batteries, without however doing much damage. In some instances there was hand to hand fighting. The loss of the Chinese is estimated at about 1500, while that of the English did not exceed four or five, including the death of Ensign Jewell of the 55th, who had only lately been promoted from the ranks, and who was shot by a musket ball. It was observed at Chusan that the Chinese had made great progress in the art of casting guns, many of them being cast on the English model. Their powder however is very bad, and renders a very large charge necessary, which filling the greater part of the gun, causes many of them to burst.

The fortifications at Chin-hae had apparently not been strengthened with the same care as those at Tinghae, they being nearly the same now as they were last year. The troops, whilst the ships kept up a fire on the forts, were landed on the 10th October, at some distance from them in order to take several fortifications commanding the forts in the rear. The 49th had a march of about 5 miles; and took several positions of the enemy, on heights, from the last of which they were able to turn the enemy's guns upon him, and a detachment came upon the undefended rear of the forts before the enemy was aware of it. From the heights the British opened a most destructive fire upon their garrison, who endeavored to escape by leaping into the water. The slaughter of the Chinese was dreadful, and their dead have probably much exceeded those on Chusan. A great many fine brass guns were here found, likewise the 18 pounder cannonades of the Kilo lost last year in the Yang tse-kiang, and after the model of which a great many other guns of various calibre had been cast. It was observed that not only were the guns recently made of much better workmanship than heretofore, but there was great improvement observable in the carriages, which from formerly being altogether useless and contemptible, were now as well made as if they had been of English manufacture. One gun was found in one of the positions on the hills, on a pivot, worked with the greatest ease, and with which aim could be taken with the greatest accuracy, and it was tested upon the garrison in the forts below, who soon found their own weapons in the hands of the enemy to be much more destructive than when wielded by themselves. The fire from the ships had caused considerable damage to the town of Chin-hae, and we are sorry to hear that a good many of its peaceable inhabitants were found killed or wounded, when next day, the 11th, it was taken possession of. Unfortunately the disasters of war do not fall upon the guilty or contending parties alone; frequently by far the greater part of the miseries occasioned by it are suffered by the peaceable people.

Ningpo, as before said, was entered without any resistance whatever on the 13th. The river is sufficiently deep even for line of battle-ships to ascend it as far as that city. At first the thieves, who prowled about with great daring in bands of 200 and 300 men, were very troublesome, and to disperse them, the soldiery were on several occasions sent, when a few of them were killed, which is the only loss of life caused by the taking of Ningpo.

The country beyond Ningpo is described as remarkably beautiful. A party in the Steamers Phlegathon and Sesotris who proceeded as far as Ynyou, had an opportunity of seeing it, and we have heard them say, that no country can surpass it in cultivation and fertility.

The Autumnus from Manila spoke the Medusa, steamer, on the 11th November to the northward of Cape Bolina, bound for China. The Medusa is, we believe, one of the small iron steamers, originally intended for the navigation of the Indies. She draws only 3 feet water, we are told, and will therefore be a very valuable acquisition to our force. She had put into Manila, we suppose in want of coals, and left there probably on the 6th or 7th. Although probably by this time at Hongkong, her arrival there is not yet reported.

We have been requested to state that the subscriptions collected by Lieut. Crawford, R. N. Agent for transports, and Capt. Fawcett, of the Asia, for the benefit of the widow and children of Captain Stead of the Pantonjee Bomanjee, murdered early this year at Chin-hae by the Chinese, amount in all to 647 £ and 3 s. Rupees, which sum has been paid into the hands of Messrs Jardine Matheson & Co. namely £ 64. 16. 8 in Navy bills, at 4s 6d and 399. 75. in dollars. Lieut. Crawford's list of subscriptions is deposited at the Canton Press Office.

From documents found at Chin-hae it appears that Capt. Stead was only severely wounded, not murdered at Kitow point, as was generally supposed. He was, as already related formerly, when on shore amusing himself with shooting, set upon by a mob of soldiers and people, wounded, and carried to Chin-hae, where he was executed by order of the authorities, and his body actually cut to pieces. Some Chinese who witnessed this atrocious murder state that they saw three fingers lopped from off the hand of the living man, and that he died only after being literally cut to pieces. The examination of Capt. Stead was found at Chin-hae, in which he gives a true account of himself, stating to be Captain of a transport laden with stores for the Admiral, that his ship was owned by Messrs. Siqueres, that he was 32 years old, had a wife and three children, etc. The report of the Chin-hae authorities, relating the capture of one and escape of another barbarian (seaman Cosner) and the execution of the former, as well as the Imperial reply, approving of the execution, and reproving the Chinese authorities for not having likewise killed the other barbarian, have also been found, as well as the reply from Chin-hae stating in excuse the other Englishman's escape. It will be seen from this that prisoners falling into the hands of Chinese have but little chance of their lives, but that in all probability they will be deprived of them under the greatest tortures. At Chusan we are told a stone tablet was found erected in a conspicuous place containing the Emperor's orders for the execution, by a slow and ignominious death, of whatever English barbarians should fall into the hands of the Chinese there. We have since had to record the deaths of Mr. Wainwright and a seaman, who however, were fortunate enough to escape a more cruel death, by being killed on the spot by musket shots, during the treacherous attack made on them, when they came to receive the provisions that had been promised them. This as previously stated, happened on the same spot nearly as Capt. Stead's disaster, but was speedily avenged by the Steamer Phlegathon, from which a party of men were landed, when the inhabitants of the village escaped, with the exception of two or three whose flight was arrested by shot, but their houses, 75 in number, were burnt.

From Manila we learn that accounts have been received of a dangerous insurrection having broken out in the island of Luzon, in a place of the name of Tayabas, not much more than about 60 miles to the southward of Manila. An Indian Curate has there raised the standard, and the district Alcalde, a Spaniard, has been murdered, while the native troops, disregarding their European officers, have joined the insurgents. Some forces, under the command of General Oran have been sent from Manila, who, it is hoped, will be able to restore tranquillity.

H. M. S. Suphay, surveying vessel, Captain Belcher, will, we understand, leave this, on her voyage home, in a day or two.

The Ariel has not been chartered, as has been stated, at Chusan for the conveyance of Government despatches to Calcutta, although Lieut. Gabbett, who is charged with them, from Sir Hugh Gough, has here taken his passage in that vessel for Calcutta.

The following naval appointments have been made:

REMINISCENCES OF AMOY.

Amoy with its suburbs is a very long city. The outermost eastern point is called Howtoosa, and consists of several nice buildings and temples. Adjacent to it are the granaries—a double row of very spacious buildings in which at our arrival about 82,000 shih of Formosa paddy, for the use of the troops and navy, were stored up. As soon as the populace perceived, that the Mandarins had withdrawn, several thousands of them immediately set to work to pillage the public property. Whilst crowds came over the rugged mountains, a dense mass of poor people streamed forth from the town, and the roads were covered with carriers. Thus passed about three days, when the depredations were discovered, and a party of soldiers sent to put down the plunder. The scene that presented itself can not better be compared, than to a large anthill. About a thousand Chinese were filling their sacks as speedily as they could, whilst double the number were on their way homewards. After the most arduous exertions on the part of the military, the space was finally cleared, and another detachment which had been called upon to cooperate, came too late to participate in this immense labour. It was however very soon found out, that only one granary had retained the half of its contents, and another a few shih, the remainder were all empty. Thus perished the magazines of the Amoy Government. Not only was the grain carried away, but all other military stores shared the same fate. Considering the matter maturely, it was the general opinion, that the little which had been preserved might as well be given to the poor; and thus a paper to that effect was speedily stuck up, and not a grain remained, wherewith to console the mandarins. The loss thus suffered by Government could not have been less than 150,000 Taels.

These granaries are at the eastern part of the suburbs called Amoy kang, and about 1 mile farther on is the Keun min foo's office, or Hae hong as he is called here. This was an immense range of buildings, so large and spacious; as to furnish quarters for the whole 55th regiment. Behind, amidst the rocks, are grottoes and graves, and a number of out-houses. Here a part of the treasury was found. This was packed up in wooden cylinders that opened like a box, each of them had a lock with a paper over it notifying from whence the silver had been obtained; some were already broken open, and there remained only a small sum. The papers and records found in the various offices were so numerous, than when thrown out to clear the apartments, they formed a complete hill.

From thence led a well paved road through a gateway, in a building adjacent to which the artillery was posted, into the lower part of the town, crossing various temples. None of these however could be compared with those in Tienghsue. The streets of the second suburb are mean and narrow, and the approach to the citadel is marked by nothing but the walls, nor are these in any way peculiar. Entering the south gate, the first remarkable building is the Chungkeun's office, which was kept by the sappers and miners. Here also was found a part of the treasure forwarded from Fuh chow for the payment of the troops. A very curious edict marked the political wisdom of the Mandarins. After having complained most bitterly about the scarcity of the silver, they conjured the natives never to expend a single ounce of sycee, but to keep it carefully stored up in their coffers, to avoid its exportation and the consequent decrease in the value of cash. There was moreover a very strong prohibition against the equalisation of the foreign dollar with the Chinese bullion, in which nefarious practice several natives had made themselves conspicuous. So rich were the contents of this document, that it is indeed deserving a place in M. Culloch's commercial dictionary.

The Admiral's office is the largest and comprises a very considerable space belonging to the citadel. To a stranger it is a complete labyrinth of houses and dwellings, and more than one regiment might have found here barracks. The 18th and Staff took up their quarters in its halls, and the books as well as papers shared the same fate as at the Hae hong. There were a few houses, a garden, some pleasure houses, a parade ground, and other interesting places, and every corner was clean and neat. By the imprudence of a soldier, some fire fell amongst the papers during the second night of the occupation, and one whole wing was burnt down. A private found the silver opium pipe of the high functionary, a curious trinket belonging to a man, who so determinately has attacked the opium vessels. Close to the admiralty was a most charming retreat of the retired commandant of Wan choo. What Chinese art could do, and ingenuity invent, was here most dexterously collected to give to the whole the appearance of the abode of fairies. There were the tanks, the gold fish, the firs and larch trees growing out of the artificial rock, the caverns and rocky passes, the flowers of the field and an artificial desert. The buildings were in harmony with these formations, and so also the furniture, so that a man might have dreamed away his life in its enclosure. As it was, every living being had fled, the library with its multitude of worm eaten volumes remained, and the owners had left many of their nicknacks behind. The vice Admiral of Formosa, a titular guardian and duke of the Empire, had also the house of his family close to the above mentioned office, but this was a mean building, when compared with the military school. It ought to be remarked, that every thing one meets on the island is either solid rock or sand. The former has been hewn out, and betwixt its fissures splendid and wide spreading trees are planted, that give a beautiful aspect to this otherwise barren scenery. The very buildings are moreover constructed with such ingenuity that they heighten considerably the pleasure one feels in beholding them, and the conviction after minute examination is, that they have been laid out in order to create a lasting effect on the spectator. There are a few smaller dwellings equally worthy of notice, besides five arsenals which were filled with military stores, two of them however had been plundered by the natives. There was a great deal of gunpowder, and still more saltpetre in the admiral's office, which will, we fear, be applied to the ignoble use of cooling wine. Outside the citadel there is the Taou tai's office, a large building, though not remarkable for its elegance. Close to it was a foundry, and a quantity of copper was found in one of the outhouses with some treasure. In the town, there is the Hop-po's office, another elegant row of houses, where the governor resided for the time being. The models of the new war junks were found at the entrance, and it was the intention of Yen to equip the Chinese navy in a new fashion. His household gods were left behind, and they indeed deserved this slight, for having been unable to protect their master. One amongst them was a female with a child in her arms. In another house the image of a saint was found, and amongst the curiosities worthy of our notice, a Koran with a Chinese translation, in a Mandarin's dwelling. All the effects had been carefully removed from the Governor's dwelling, and this is a sufficient proof, that his flight was premeditated. The Hop-po's house contained very little gear, the most precious effects having been in good time transported to a place of security. Nor so however the timber and junks in the public wharfs. There were found excellent planks, several vessels on the stocks, and a large quantity of first rate spars with a whole flotilla destined to burn our vessels. The best war junks were destroyed by fire, the foundry in the immediate neighbourhood burnt down to the ground, and the fortifications experienced nearly the same fate as the Bogue forts, by being partly blown up, a task by no means very easy.

On the first night of occupation there was an alarm of an attack upon the head quarters, and the soldiers had actually to turn out. On more minute inquiry it was found out, that the robbers had occasioned this fracas, and that some of the disbanded soldiers had joined them. Papers were distributed in the streets, assuring the natives, that the quarrel was solely with the Mandarins; and not with the people at large, a declaration which had a soothing effect. The second morning after the occupation, the heads of the principal houses were called together to confer about the most eligible measures for ensuring the public tranquillity, and a stop was put to the depredations of the lawless, with a very strong hand. The greatest evil however was the native robbers, who crowded from every direction into the city. By far the major part came in boats, and attacked the inhabitants during the night. To meet these marauders with sufficient spirit, the natives collected great quantity of stones upon the tops of the houses, and mixing them with glass, showered them down upon the thieves as soon as they approached. Thus was a constant warfare carried on from the roofs, and the neighbours uniting in protecting each other, assisted the attacked in throwing down missiles upon the desperadoes. The country about Amoy being excessively barren, very populous, and the means of subsistence scanty, the number of desperate thieves exceeds all belief, and the place was literally filled with these wretches.

To drive them fairly out of Amoy, a committee of public safety was forthwith to be established. The candidates were indeed numerous enough, but when it came to the point to adopt one single resolution, they most carefully kept back, partly from fear of involving themselves with their own government, partly from apprehending troubles. No disturbance of any consequence however took place, and the warehouses in the town were never abandoned by their owners. The citadel and the Amoy Kang fared worst, since most of the inhabitants had abandoned their houses, and thus indirectly invited plunderers, who did not fail to avail themselves of such a favorable opportunity.

The town is not remarkable for any splendid buildings, the streets are on the contrary lined with low and narrow houses and the shops by no means inviting. An exception to this general remark are the row of merchant's dwellings, some of which are nearly as large as any of the Hongas at Canton. They contained a great deal of property, principally Straits produce, British Longcloth and Nanking raw Cotton. A very great number of junks were lying close to the warehouses, and one arrived whilst we were there, from Singapore with a Macao Portuguese pilot. Another from Siam came just in the very midst of the battle, and was exposed for a considerable time to the fire of one of the forts. The others were Formosan traders. The merchants showed far greater acquaintance with European ideas and manners, than we are even accustomed to see at Canton. Whenever a place in the Indian archipelago was mentioned to them, they were on the qui vive, and could enumerate its productions and describe the government. But the name of Singapore invariably produced a grateful smile, and sundry remarks in favor of the English nation. No duty is paid there, and the Mandarins do not squeeze, and property is nevertheless safe, such were their sagacious comments. Here however we have to pay a heavy contribution to our magistrates, and they can after all not protect us, but run away at the first appearance of danger. The cowardly behaviour of the officers of every grade has indeed left a lasting impression upon the minds of the natives, who are a set of freethinkers in politics. That not one should have remained, that the Governor should have been the first to abscond, that the very constables should have escaped, when their aid was most wanted, are facts not so easily to be reconciled to the boasting language of these magnates. Their credit is for ever lost, and their edicts will be henceforth nothing but waste paper.

Amongst the anomalies one meets at Amoy, is a founding house. The natives are very much given to the horrible crime of killing their female offspring, to prevent the encumbrance of their education, and the difficulty of providing a future husband for them. Now this is an excellent institution, and is moreover well supported. Yet near this very house is a small tank covered with duckweed, where a number of newborn babes were found sowed up in mats and drowned! What can describe the horror of the most callous foreigner on beholding such wickedness!

Several religious tracts were stuck up in the streets, and amongst other remarkable things was a prescription against dysentery, published by a man who had by the use of it been radically recovered from this malady, and therefore published it for the benefit of the world. The benevolent societies established in this place, are well deserving our notice. They have a number of houses throughout the town, where poor wretches are gratuitously provided with medicines and receive a pittance, and a coffin when they die; and this is considered the greatest benefit which can be conferred upon our neighbours, and far more recommendable than even saving a man from starvation.

There is a great deal of public spirit amongst the citizens. They have several halls of assembly and frequently convokes meetings to deliberate about the common weal. On these occasions they also deliver speeches, or read essays, such to the edification of the hearers. They seem to enjoy greater liberties, than the inhabitants of the inland cities; but though they have wealth and shrewdness, Amoy can bear no comparison with Singapore. The latter is a splendid place when compared with the native town of the most wealthy and enterprising of its inhabitants. No doubt the Chinese Government warps the minds of its subjects, and keeps them seemingly in a state of poverty.

In the neighbourhood of Amoy are three cities: which equally claim the attention of the victors. Tancoo, nearly to the north of Amoy, is the principal place of their district. The Mandarin had retired upon this town, but soon left it. Kin man is on the north eastern island, and the rendezvous of a vice admiral. There is an arsenal and a number of docks for junks with a small military garrison. Chang-chew is a large city south west of Amoy. It has 160 000 inhabitants, including the suburbs, and is only about 12 miles from its harbour. A vessel was sent to find the way to this place. It is protected by a solitary outwork and situated four miles up a river. As soon as the military espied her, they came out in a disorderly manner, whether with the intention of an attack, or merely with the view of enjoying the sight of a steamboat could never be ascertained. The city and suburbs stretch out for about six miles in a marshy ground, and are surrounded by flourishing villages and rich ricefields.

There was but a short interruption to the peace of the good city of Amoy. A guard was placed in the midst of the town at the Kwato temple to be at hand in the hour of danger; but so soon as the patrols reached the place whence the turmoil of an engagement resounded, the thieves were discovered to be in full flight. So long as the rice of the granaries lasted, little fear from outrages of the mob could be entertained, but as soon as they were emptied, the respectable citizens began to apprehend real dangers. Still they refused to adopt effective measures for their safety, and their meeting ended all in smoke. Bullocks were freely brought in and disposed both to the army as well as navy, the butchers continued to sell pork, and in the most frequented parts of the town there was neither robbery nor an interruption to business. But no rice shop was open and the more distant parts of the city were deserted. Still there was not such total abandonment as at Chusan, and the confidence in our protection was much greater. With Chinese ingenuity the natives demanded as a panacea for all evils a strong edict against robbers, and one of their actually wrote a document as a model, in order to put a stop to their depredations. Things were in this state, when it was resolved to advance in the Citadel, and to proceed to the north. In one or two instances the marauders had grown bold and parties of the soldiers were sent out against them. A few rounds dispersed them and no resistance was ever made. The natives helped themselves very freely to the arms in the arsenal, and they are likely to fight against their rulers, if the latter adopt any harsh measures. The powder of one arsenal was nearly entirely stolen, and the remainder either drowned or used for blowing up the fortifications. This work however proceeded very slowly, and when the troops embarked on the 4th September a great many walls were still standing.

Amoy is one of the most ancient Emporiums of China, and has been famous through all the dynasties on account of its great trade. The harbour is indeed excellent, and the junks can lie close to the warehouses, and unload their cargoes. But it has never been more than a depot, and as such carried on an extensive commerce with the Indian Archipelago, Formosa, and the northern parts of China.

When compared with Hongkong, the latter has one single advantage over it, its vicinity to Canton; but is in every other respect inferior to Amoy. The Dutch took once possession of the Island, in a fit of spleen against the Mantchoos, their faithless allies, but kept it for a short time only. It was long the stronghold of Koxinga the pirate, and maintained its independence against the Tartars to the last. The population is very fluctuating, and constantly moving about all maritime China for the sake of commerce. The connexions with the Indian Archipelago have left such indelible traces, that even in the common parlance of the common people, there occur many Malay words mixed up with the Chinese.

The occupation of Kolangsan, naturally places Amoy at the mercy of the British troops, but it is very doubtful whether as long as the war continues, under such circumstances, any trade can spring up. Whatever may however be the conditions of peace, we must never lose sight of this empirium, and endeavour by all means in our power to obtain a footing. The principal produce that would be in constant demand is Cotton, part of which is now brought from Canton and Keangnan. The latter is of far superior, silky quality to the Bombay, and fetches one third more of the price. The goods procurable would be camphor, sugar candy, umbrells, coarse China ware, Ank-je teas, Formosa hemp, and grass cloth.

Amoy being considered impregnable, its capture will be a sad blow to Chinese pride, but the Viceroy may pluck up courage and assure his master, that after a total defeat, he drove the barbarians from the town, and did not allow a single individual to loiter. The temporary possession of Kolangsan he permitted from sheer compassion, lest these unhappy strangers, without a home or an inch of ground to place their foot upon, should fall into despair. Who will, gaily even if he chooses to address his sovereign in this manner?

IMMIGRATION FROM EUROPE TO NEW YORK—Immigration from Europe this year bids fair to outstrip every past year. According to the returns at the Custom House, the movement stands as follows—PASSENGERS ARRIVED IN NEW YORK.

From 1st Jan. to 31st March, 1841.....2,616
From 1st April to 21th May, 1841.....11,636

Total, 14,252

A great portion of this number consists of substantial men, with their families from all parts of Europe. On an average they bring with them probably about $100 each in property—principally in money, and sometimes hard money. This alone would give an aggregate of $1,425,200 added to the currency and capital of the republic.

Again, every human being, according to his age, ready made, costs as much to rear—which, for a full grown, healthy man, is estimated at $1000 average. A sober Irishman is worth $1000—fair to middling, $800; a Scotchman of the first quality is worth $1200—a German, the same—Swiss, the same. The value of Englishmen varies—first quality is worth $1500; middling, $1000; the worst quality, which are too numerous, would only fetch $500. The average value of all immigrants, deducting 10 per cent for the vagabonds, who go to the poor house, may be safely put at $1000 each—making an import, during the present year, equal to $14,252,000. The whole import may be stated thus—Physical value of 14,252 in.....$14,252,000
Property in cash, &c.....3,425,200

Aggregate value of import.....$15,710,200
Here then is nearly $16,000,000 of property in live stock and trimmings, already imported this year. We may estimate the whole year's import fully at fifty millions—a thing not to be sneered at in a new country.—New York Herald.

PROCLAMATION.

The city of Tinian, the capital of the Chusan islands and its dependencies, having been again taken possession of by the combined forces of Her Britannic Majesty, in conformity with the Royal commands to that effect which Her Majesty has been pleased to issue through Her Majesty's high ministers; it is hereby made known to the inhabitants of the said city of Tinian and its dependencies, that the British Government has resolved to retain the said city and islands and their dependencies, until the demands, which the undersigned Plenipotentiary, &c., has been directed to make from the Imperial Government of China, shall be not only acceded to, but carried into full effect.

The inhabitants are therefore given to understand, that years may probably elapse before the said city, &c., will be restored to the emperor's authority. In the meantime, a military government will be formed, to protect the well disposed and quiet, and to punish the ill-disposed and refractory. Such regulations as may become necessary, from time to time, will be notified to the people by proclamations; and all classes are hereby invited to resume their usual trades and occupations, under the assurance of being fostered and protected, as long as they conduct themselves as orderly and obedient subjects to the government, under which they are living.

That the people may have every facility to obtain redress of any wrongs committed against them, and to convey their representations to the Government, Capt. Dennis, one of the officers of the Queen of England's forces, has been appointed a military magistrate.

God save the Queen of England.

GENERAL MEMORANDUM.

Wellesley, at Amoy, 31st August, 1841.

Rear Admiral Sir W. Parker arrived, with much satisfaction; the precision with which the ships of the squadron took their stations in the positions, on the 26th instant; and he began to convey to the Captains, Officers, Seamen, and Royal Marines, and also those of the Indian Navy, his approbation and best thanks for the excellent and practice, gallantry, and good conduct which they exhibited on that occasion.

(Signed) W. PARKER, Rear-admiral.

To the respective Captains, Commanders, and Commanding Officers of H. M. Ships and Vessels, and of the Indian Navy.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head Quarters, ship Marion,
Amoy harbour, Sept. 5, 1841.

Mayor-General Sir Hugh Gough has again derived the highest gratification from the gallant and soldier-like conduct of the Troops, at the capture of the batteries, heights, city, and citadel, of Amoy, and of the strongly fortified Island of Koolang su, in co-operation with H. M.'s ships.

Although the resistance upon them was more feeble than the Major General anticipated, he has the proud conviction, that the noble emulation and eager spirit, with which the several corps (including two detachments of Royal Marines) proceeded to the attack, together with their patient endurance of fatigue would equally have enabled him to carry all before him; had the enemy made more active use of the great advantages of his position.

3. Sir Hugh Gough has no less satisfaction in noticing the conduct of the Troops on shore, amid temptations of an ordinary nature,—shops on all sides abounding with liquor, and houses full of valuable property, abandoned in many cases by their owners, and already broken open by the populace.—A few instances alone of misconduct called for the Major General's disapprobation, and for the most part sobriety and regularity have been maintained.

4. It is also highly to the credit of the Troops, that upon a sudden order to re-embark, after eight days on shore, all the Regiments paraded in perfect order, and embarked with as much regularity, and as rapidly as the Major-General could have expected, had the most ample time been given for preparation, without one solitary instance of inebriety, and without leaving even one follower behind.

5. The Major General, therefore, feels it but justice thus to record his sentiments, and to beg Commanding Officers of Corps, and the Heads of departments, to accept his thanks, and to convey them to the Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and soldiers, under their respective commands.

6. Sir Hugh Gough has much pleasure in expressing his sense of obligation to Captain Gifford of the Royal Navy, for his valuable services and judicious arrangements at the disembarkation and embarkation of the Troops.

By order. (Signed) ARMING S. H. MOUNTAIN,
Lieut. Col. Dep. Adj. General; Expeditionary Force.

GENERAL MEMORANDUM.

Wellesley, at the anchorage of Just in the way, 9th Oct. 1841.

The following positions are to be taken by the ships of the squadron in the attack on Chinshue, and for covering the landing of the troops on the right bank of the river.

When the signal No. 470 for anchoring with springs on the cables is made, the Wellesley will place herself about one north of the Citadel (or Joshua's hill) as close in as she can be carried without risk of her taking the ground at low water.

The Blenheim to the east of her, the Blonde to the southward and westward of the Wellesley, and the Moderate to the northward and westward of the Blonde, as near to the Chinese positions as their respective draughts of water will admit of with safety to the ships, and taking care not to obstruct the fire of each other.

The object of this division of the ships will be to drive the Chinese out of the Citadel with shells and shot (if well within range of the latter), and to prevent reinforcements being sent up to it from the city of Chinshue, also to open a landing place if practicable for the Seamen and Marines at the foot of the hill on the west side, where a battery has been constructed, and the landing places staked to this point; and for the purpose of driving the Chinese from the walls of the eastern part of the city, the fire of the Blonde and Moderate should be mainly directed.

The seamen and Marines must be held ready to assault the citadel whenever the signal shall be made for disembarking them, which will probably be on the rocks on the north side of the hill, or at the point already referred to.

Transports are to be anchored to the eastward of the triangles; the Cruiser, Columbine and Hentich to take positions off the creek, inside those islands, for covering the landing of the troops. The Cruiser to be as far advanced to the westward and entrance of the harbor as may be practicable, without being exposed to the fire of the batteries in the harbor.

The Sesostria to anchor off the north side of Passage island to shell the citadel and battery on the eastern end, and if possible to flank the batteries on the right bank of the river.

The Queen to place herself inside the Triangles, as far advanced as may be practicable for bursting shell in the encampment of the Chinese towards the fortified hill, and to clear the southeast part of the Citadel hill; should the Chinese be driven on that side by the fire of the ships to the northward; also to shell the batteries on the town side which defends the entrance of the harbor. The Pilegethon and Nemesis to proceed to support the Queen (on receiving directions to do so from commanders Gifford or Clarke,) as soon as all the troops are landed; and a strict lookout is to be kept for the recall of either of the steamers, and to repeat any signals made by the ship to the northward.

Whenever the surrender of the citadel, or the advance of the troops, causes the Chinese to give way from their batteries in the harbor, or that they can be approached with advantage, the Cruiser, Columbine and Hentich are to proceed inside, and commander Gifford will take care always to have one vessel in a position to keep up the communication with the general.

The foregoing outline will be sufficient to apprise the respective captains and officers of the contemplated operations, but the duration of the fire of the ships, and any alterations of their position, must of course be governed by their discretion to meet any change of circumstances.

The following number of seamen and marines are to form the landing party under the command of Captain Herbert of the Blenheim, and to take with them one day's provision with a proper proportion of officers.

Marines the same as detailed in my memo. of the 25th of September.

The marines from the Cruiser and Columbine are to be sent this evening to the Wellesley by one of the small steamers.

GENERAL MEMORANDUM.

H. M. S. Moderate at Ningpo, 14th October, 1841.

The commander in chief has witnessed with the highest gratification, the gallantry and excellent conduct which has been further manifested by the Captains, Officers, seamen, and marines of Her Majesty's squadron and those of the Indian Navy under his command, in the capture of the citadel and city of Chinshue, and the occupation of Ningpo on the 10th and 13th instants.

He noticed with great satisfaction the admirable precision of the fire from the ships and steam vessels against the citadel, and the ardour with which the party of officers, seamen and Royal Marines, headed by captains Herbert and Bourchier of the Blenheim and Blonde, disembarked and advanced to the assault over a steep and difficult ascent; he is no less pleased with the regularity and dispatch with which his Excellency Lieutenant-General Sir Hugh Gough and the troops were landed on the right bank of the river; taken under the direction of captain Gifford of the Cruiser and with the proceedings of the ships and steam vessels stationed in that direction. And he is to convey to every individual of the squadron present his entire approbation of their conduct and exertions.

Lt. Somerville, agent, and the masters of the transports which accompanied the expedition from Chusan, are also entitled to the Rear Admiral's approbation and thanks, for the promptitude with which their ships were got under sail when the signal was given, and the attention with which the prescribed positions were taken up at the anchorage off Chinshue, as well as the desire which they have throughout manifested to forward the public service upon all occasions.

Sir W. Parker feels assured that every person in the squadron must participate with him in admiration of the gallantry with which the strong positions of the Chinese were all carried by the British troops on shore.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 27th Nov., 1841.

By the Salopian and British Isle, from Singapore the 5th Nov., the important intelligence of the probability of a war with Burmah has been received. Unfortunately, the Ardesoor having left a day before the Salopian, most of the papers and letters have been forwarded by the Clipper, and we are without later papers from Singapore than the 7th October. We have been however kindly favored with the loan of a letter from Singapore, dated the 2d November, from which we make the following extract.

"The Steamer Forbes arrived here on the 29th October from Calcutta and Penang, and by her we have received letters from the former place to the 11th of the month. She was sent to order the two iron steamers which it was expected would be here from Bombay, to Maulmein. She left again on the evening of the 31st for Penang, to embark some of the Rifle Corps for Maulmein, and from thence to proceed to Calcutta with despatches. The Diana steamer left this morning for Penang and Maulmein. The Ala, 18 gun brig, arrived here on the 29th of Oct. from England and the Cape, and would have proceeded on to China, but at the recommendation, as we understand, of the local government, her Captain altered her destination, and sailed for Maulmein on the 31st. The Britomart is here from Port Essington; her destination was China, to meet the Admiral, but we cannot learn whether it will be altered. She is, we believe, a surveying vessel. H. M. S. Cornwallis left the Cape three days before the Ala, but was to come round Acheen head, and may therefore very likely keep out some time longer, and be obliged to take the Palawan passage to China. The Indian Government are sending troops to Maulmein. It is generally supposed to act on the defensive, not apparently liking the approach of Tharawaddie so near our settlement. It is reported that he has with him all the Royal family, and a very large body of armed followers, some accounts say 100, and others, 300,000 men. When the Ganges steamer left Rangoon, they were not 80 miles distant. The King's 60th, and two or three native Regiments were to embark as soon as possible for Maulmein in the steamers India (chartered by Government) and Ganges, H. M. S. Calliope and transports Roberts, Larkins, Thetis, and Elizabeth Atkin. The general opinion seems to be that there will be no fighting, but that the mere demonstration of our forces will be sufficient to overawe Tharawaddie, who supposes that we have not a single ship of war or regiment to spare, and has all the will to turn us out of the Tenasserim provinces. The Esperanza left Calcutta for Singapore and China on the 3d. The John Cooper, Urgent and Canopus had also left, and the Water Witch and Regina were to leave before the holidays."

From the great activity of the Indian Government to shew an imposing front to the King of Ava, we suppose that it must have received decisive intelligence of his hostile intentions. From Calcutta, Madras and Bombay (from the latter, we hear 3 Queen's Regiments) troops are being assembled for immediate shipment to Maulmein, and the large force of steamers now in the Indian waters will prodigiously quicken these movements, so that a very few days after any hostile movements have been made by Tharawaddie, a sufficient number of troops will arrive at Maulmein to oppose him. Besides, the great disadvantages under which the English carried on the first Burmese war, do no longer exist. The establishment at Maulmein offers the greatest facilities for the reception and concentration of the forces; the country which then was but little known, has now been explored; and, more than all, the many steamers now at command of the Government, enable them to send their troops into the heart of the country, without the Burmese being able to molest their advance; and the steamers, after a course of upwards of five hundred miles upon the Irrawaddy, may cast anchor before Ava and Amarapura, the ancient and the modern capitals of the Empire. Another circumstance which cannot fail to be of service to the English is, that Tharawaddie has chosen to assume his threatening attitude, just as the rainy season is over; the troops will therefore not be exposed to sickness which in the first war carried off such great numbers. It remains to be seen whether this demonstration of his Burmese majesty is owing to Chinese policy, which would naturally be employed in causing this diversion to the British forces; this is very probable, although, ever since his accession the feelings and reported acts of Tharawaddie have been anything but friendly to the English, from whom he is anxious to recover the provinces the empire lost in the last war. Whatever influence, however, may have caused this present hostility, it will probably cost Burmah dear, and will be of very little use to the son of Heaven, who may soon see good reason to be astonished that the war with his friends the Burmese, does by no means slacken the hostilities carrying on his own coast. In the north of India the Gorkhas are just now at war with the Tibetans, and have taken possession of a large part of their territory, wherefore it is not probable that the Nepalese may be influenced by the Chinese to turn their arms against the English Government.

From extracts kindly made for us from the Peking Gazette it will be seen that the Emperor Taou-kuang is already 61 years old, during 20 of which he has sat on the throne of China.

The Arus, arrived from the coast yesterday does not bring any news from Amoy or Chusan, but she reports having seen a big of war enter Amoy, which, it is supposed, may be the Pelican, from England, and lately from Singapore, which she must have left before the news of the Burmese war had reached there. From Hongkong we heard it said last night, that the Pelican had arrived there, as likewise a steamer, supposed to be the Medusa; we hope this report may prove true, some uneasiness having been felt on her account, she having left Manila on the 5th, and having last been seen on the 11th to the northward of Cape Bolina. H. M. Schooner Starling, Commander Kellett, left during the week on a cruise to the northward, to intercept Chinese junks, and to obstruct the Chinese coasting trade as much as possible. H. M. S. Atarad, commander Pearce, went into the Broadway the day before yesterday, to capture Chinese vessels there. We have not yet however heard that in this immediate neighbourhood any junks have been molested, although several of large size were a day or two since, seen in the roads here.

The Belle Alliance, Frankfield, Turkey, and Cornwallis have all been taken up by the British authorities, and the former has already sailed, on the same day as the Medusa for Chusan.

We hear that the Atalanta Steamer with Capt. Elliot, and Sir Gordon Bremer on board, arrived at Bombay on the 25th or 26th of September, in time for the 1st of October mail.

In Canton everything by the last advices was proceeding quietly, although the shipping off of teas proceeded but slowly, owing to the daily increasing scarcity of dollars, and the reluctance of Hongmerchants to receive Sycee or even Republican dollars instead. The prices we mentioned last week, as about 4 Taels lower than before, continued the same; but all sorts of imports were in little demand, and to effect sales, even lower prices than former ones had to be submitted to. The influence of Hongmerchants has prevailed at the Customhouse, and for some time no permits to export teas to Macao have been granted; an increased activity is consequently observable in the smuggling boats.

In an extra last Saturday we published the Public Notices of Sir Henry, which will be found reprinted into our columns of this day. We have likewise copied a number of documents from the Hongkong Gazette of 23d November, still printed and published at Macao. We suppose the Public must be thankful for being at all put in possession of this information, otherwise we think it has a right to quarrel with receiving it so tardily; for the documents in question must have arrived here on the 12th or 13th, and it was eleven days before they saw the light. Surely, had they been sent for publication to any of the two English Newspapers in Macao, the Public would have known their contents a full week earlier. But this was not to be—the Hongkong Gazette, dated from that settlement, but published and printed here, had the preference, and as that paper appears at irregular intervals of between two and six weeks, it is but natural such delays should occur. But, as the Spaniards say, "cosas de palacio, van despacio," and our complaints may therefore continue to be unattended to, and the public continue to suffer for the whims or convenience of those in office. We have frequently alluded to the inconveniences arising from the extremely injudicious Post Office Regulations made by the Deputy Governor of Hongkong. These had at last become so great, that even Mr. Johnston must have felt the injury he inflicted on merchants; and we hear that some arrangements are now made for Post office packets, if directed to the Postmaster of Hongkong, to be opened here. Why such packets are now to be opened by other hands, than the clerk's at the Superintendent's office, is a mystery not easily understood, but such is the new arrangement.

The quantity of Opium to be brought forward by Government for next year's sale, is estimated at about 20,000 Chests. In consequence of advices received in Calcutta per Waterwitch prices for Patna had advanced to 750 and for Benares to 740 Rupees.

The Arindur steamer parted company from the Medusa between Singapore and Manila, and from want of coals put back for the former place, and will therefore be able to obey the orders of proceeding to Maulmein.

To the amount as stated in the last Canton Press, collected for the widow and children of Capt. Stead, late of the Pesanteje Bamarje, transport the sum of $2,115 should be added, collected by Captain Fawcett, of the ship Asia, and paid to Messrs Lindsay & Co., and by them remitted in bills to their London agents in favour of Mrs. Stead.—Canton Register, 23rd November.

The following account of an outrage committed upon an American citizen, and an American boat crew, by the Chinese authorities near Canton we have copied from the Register. If the circumstances contained in it are true, and we see no reason for doubt, it would appear that the apprehensions we have so frequently expressed for the safety of British subjects in Canton are by no means unfounded, if they cannot move between Whampoa and Canton without risk of being made prisoners, and possibly detained for an indefinite period or even sent up to Peking; for with them their nationality would not, like in the case of Mr. Edwards, procure their release. It will be slight consolation indeed to him, should any Englishman by such means fall into the hands of the Chinese, to know that the outrage upon him is sure to be revenged by his countrymen; we know from sad experience how difficult it is to obtain the liberation of any British subjects that have been made prisoners, no matter how, by the Chinese, who we suspect would not be ill pleased to be able to parade a number of them at Peking, to celebrate some imaginary triumph over the barbarians, and probably to execute the rebel to vindicate the insulted majesty of the throne. We therefore repeat our caution to all the British now at Canton, not to trust too much to the apparent peaceable disposition of the Canton authorities, who continue to be busily employed in fortifying the country all round, and in obstructing effectually all the passages of the river between Whampoa and Canton.

From the Canton Register of 23d November.

ALFRED P. EDWARDS, ESQ., SUPERCARGO OF THE U. S. SHIP HANNIBAL.
Communicated.

On the morning of the 17th November, Alfred P. Edwards, esq., supercargo of the American ship Hannibal, of New York, left Whampoa in one of the ship's boats for Canton, and when off the east side of the island of Honam, near round fort, the boat was stopped by a party of Chinese soldiers and ordered to the shore; immediately on reaching the shore the military rushed upon the boat, secured Mr. Edwards and boat's crew, bound their hands behind them and put chains around their necks, taking from Mr. Edwards his watch, papers &c., with the summary process of emptying the pockets by cutting them off; they were then conducted to prison surrounded by a military force of several hundred men, with drawn swords, spears, &c.; while thus detained in prison bound and chained, they placed over Mr. Edwards a guard of three men with spears and drawn swords; after remaining in this situation for about three hours they were then taken across the island by an escort of forty soldiers to each individual, and were then put into separate boats and taken over the river to the city of Canton to the residence of the mayor, being led through the streets by the chains which were placed around their necks, followed and shouted at by the populace as they passed, receiving the treatment of the vilest condemned criminals; after remaining in close confinement for several hours they were taken separately before the mandarin and examined, still bound and chained; on Mr. Edwards representing his true character as an American, he was released from his chain and on unbinding his hands, they fell perfectly paralyzed to his stupor to the cruel manner of the binding; it was some time before the circulation of the blood was restored. The mandarin then expressed their sorrow at the detention, saying it was a mistake, as they supposed them to be Englishmen; after suffering every insult and degradation they were set at liberty because they were not Englishmen. From this it is manifestly will learn what they have to expect under similar circumstances.

Mr. Edwards is now at the factory in Canton suffering severely from the effect of this cruel and unprovoked insult. Mr. Edwards is a gentleman advanced in life and of the highest respectability, and has frequently visited Canton in the capacity which he now fills.

MANILA.

Since last week we mentioned that accounts had been received of an insurrection having broken out in the island of Luzon arrivals from Manila have put us in possession of further particulars, and of the suppression of the rebellion. An Indian Curate, of the name of Apolinario de la Cruz raised the standard of rebellion and independence in the township of Tayabas, rather more than 60 miles to the southward of Manila, and great numbers of natives, Tagalese Indians, soon joined him. The Alcalde or Governor of the district, collected together the municipal militia of the town, and the "resguardo de ventura" a sort of petty revenue officers appointed to watch against smuggling of tobacco and spirits, with whom to oppose the curate, but they joined the insurgents, and the governor was killed. On hearing of these disorders, a force was immediately (on the 27th Oct.) despatched by the Captain General Oraf, under command of Colonel Huet (not Oran as stated in our last) who succeeded after a bloody battle, to disperse and capture many of the insurgents and Apolinario and ringleaders fell a victim to his hands and were shot. We have translated below the Captain General's Public Notice on the subject, which have been kindly lent us. The object of the insurrection seems to have been the throwing off the Spanish Government, and it is said that Apolinario's confession before execution, and the papers found in his house, implicate many others on the island, and that several persons have in consequence been arrested in Manila. The native Clergy of Manila have great influence over their countrymen, who are generally suspected of disaffection to the government, and a flag was taken from the rebels upon which were the words "Death to the Whites." Judging from the severity with which this rebellion was suppressed, we suppose it must have been considered as very serious by the Manila Government, and it is said that of the captives every fifth man has been shot. Such severity, to call it by no other name, may be necessary to restore quiet, but it reminds us of the bloody scenes so lately and frequently enacted during the civil wars of Spain; and for the barbarities there in cold blood of prisoners on whatever side taken, the plea of necessity did not exist.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

Apolinario de la Cruz, ex-lay brother of the convent of San Juan de Dios, of this capital, conceived the project of founding a brotherhood under the denomination of San Jo-6; and having been refused the competent permission by the ecclesiastical authority, he dared to put himself at the head of a numerous band of armed men in the neighbourhood of Tayabas and to resist the public force of that Province, commanded by its governor, who fell a victim to his devotion to, and determination in sustaining, the public order. As soon as this scandalous attempt came to my knowledge, I ordered a column of all arms under command of the Senior Lieut. Col. Don Joaquin Huet, to march and to chastise him; and, authorised by me, the Colonel on his arrival at Lucban offered pardon to all who would present themselves within the period of two days, excepting only Apolinario and other ringleaders; this paternal invitation not having produced any effect, he was, at the end of the prescribed term, obliged to have recourse to arms, and under date of yesterday, at 2 o'clock in the morning, he informs me from the enemy's camp of Alitao, and from the house before occupied by the rebel Apolinario, to have fought the rebels, killing 240 of their men, taking prisoners 248 women, recapturing 3 gingalls of which the enemy had possessed themselves at the time of the death of the late governor, and obtained possession of the papers of the aforesaid Apolinario, promising to give me the details of the action as soon as possible. All which is communicated to the public for its information and satisfaction.

Manila, 2d Nov., 1841, at 8 o'clock at night.

ORAA'

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

Among the various details relative to the complete triumph obtained by the troops under his command in the action of the 1st instant, Senior Lieut. Col. Don Joaquin Huet, commander of the column acting against the rebels, gives me the satisfactory intelligence, that the ringleader ex-lay-brother Apolinario de la Cruz, had at 10 o'clock on the morning of the 2d instant been seized by the officers of justice of Sariaya, in the river of Calachache, and that he was to be conducted to Taybas, which intelligence is confirmed by the governor of that Province, Don Ysidro Vital.

I hasten to communicate this to the Public for its satisfaction.

Manila, 4th November, 1841, at 11 A. M.

ORAA'

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

According to despatches received from the Lieut. Col. commanding the column of operations, the rebel Apolinario de la Cruz was shot on the 4th of this month, after having received spiritual consolation, in the town of Tayabas, and on the 5th the ringleaders Dionisio de los Reyes, and Gregorio Miguel de Jesus, of the same town, and Francisco Espinosa de la Cruz of Sariaya, suffered the same punishment. Which is published for general information.

Manila, 9th November, 1841.

ORAA'

From the Peking Gazette.

DESCRIPTIVE RECOMMENDATIONS.—The Emperor strongly censures many high officers for recommending individuals for places of official responsibility who turn out to be altogether unworthy; and he strictly enjoins on all who recommend others to adhere to full and honest truth touching every point.

REVENUE DEPAULTERS.—An officer of Chekeang, named Kinchoo, has defrauded the Government of considerable revenue, and the Emperor commands that he be arraigned before the Board of Punishment in order that the strictest investigations may be instituted upon his conduct.

GOVERNMENT GRANARIES.—An officer respectfully memorializes the Court that a vast portion of the Rice which has been deposited in the public Granaries has been found upon examination to be of an uncleaned and inferior sort. He recommends that a system of scrutiny be adopted in order that no grain shall be stored in the granaries but such as is of full weight and entirely free from dampness and dirt.

A Peking Bandit.—A year or two ago a famous robber named Kowtung was arrested within the walls of Peking and sentenced to transportation for life. He recently succeeded in escaping, and returning to the Capital, called together a formidable band of marauders and committed extensive robberies in the imperial city. The officers have at length been able to arrest him a second time, and memorialize the Emperor that his trial and condemnation may speedily take place.

ORIGIN OF MUGGERS AT TIENTSIN.—A native opium trader has been arrested at the mouth of the Peiho. He positively refuses to disclose his name or accomplices, and has been sent to Peking and delivered over to the Board of Punishment.

GOVERNMENT GRAIN JUNKS ROTTEN.—A case which has created much interest in, that one of the government rice laden junks has been entirely plundered of its contents by some daring fellows in the Peking department. Searching examinations were forthwith put on foot, and the rice was found exhibited for sale in one of the Peking rice stores. And what may seem particularly strange to a foreigner who knows anything of Chinese criminal policy, is that the rice was taken back by the government officers without arresting the parties who had the rice exposed for sale. The robbers could not be found.

FORTIFICATION OF SHANTUNG.—An official messenger is to be despatched to Shantung Province to superintend the erection and equipment of Forts at different points, and all necessary measures are to be carried into effect with the utmost speed and efficiency.

INDIGNATION IN CHE KEANG.—The Lieutenant Governor of Che Keang has represented to the Court the damages done by the inundations of the Chae tung. The Emperor has deputed an officer to oversee the repairs and appropriate for such purposes five thousand two hundred and twenty Taels.

MILITARY EXPENDITURE IN FUKEN.—The army disbursements in Foken have already exceeded one million five hundred thousand Taels. The Emperor has ordered a high fiscal agent to audit the accounts of the Treasurer, and to report whether or not the money has been honestly laid out.

THE SIXTY FIRST BIRTH DAY OF THE TAOWANG EMPEROR.—His Imperial Majesty was sixty one years old on the tenth day of the eighth moon of the present year, being September 24th 1841. He previously proclaimed that he did not wish the officials in the various Provinces to trouble the natives about attending to many ceremonies on that day and occasion.

No Gazettes have come to hand under two or three months old, and consequently there is but little in them of general interest.

CIRCULAR.

TO HER BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S SUBJECTS IN CHINA.

Her Britannic Majesty's Plenipotentiary in China has the utmost satisfaction in announcing for general information that the City of Tinghsa, the capital of the Chusan group of Islands, was yesterday reoccupied by H. M. forces. During the 8 months that have elapsed, since this Island was evacuated by H. M. forces in February, 1841, the Chinese Government appears to have exerted itself greatly to strengthen the defences; the whole surface of the City is now one continued line of fortifications, extended for nearly two miles, and redoubts and entrenched camps have been thrown up in every direction. The Chinese troops made a better attempt at resistance than they have hitherto done, but nothing could withstand the intrepid valor and discipline of H. M. combined forces; and in less than two hours the batteries were cleared, the city encircled, and the enemy flying in all directions. Great quantities of ordnance, (amongst which are about 40 pieces of brass cannon) other arms and military stores of every description, besides magazines of gunpowder and large granaries of rice have been found and from a variety of concurrent circumstances it is evident that the Chinese authorities had no conception that the place could be taken in such rapid and gallant style.

Arrangements will be made immediately for establishing a provisional government, and H. M. Plenipotentiary deems it advisable, after what has already happened, to intimate to H. M. Subjects and all others, that under no circumstances will Tinghai, and its dependencies be restored to the Chinese Government, until the whole of the demands of England are not only complied with, but carried into full effect.

[God save the Queen.]

Dated on board H. M. S. Blenheim, in Chusan harbour, this 24 day of October, 1841.

HENRY POTTINGER,
Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary.

CIRCULAR.

To H. B. M. SUBJECTS IN CHINA.

Her B. M. Plenipotentiary in China has the renewed extreme gratification of announcing for general information the farther brilliant and important successes of H. M. combined naval and land forces in the reduction and occupation on the 10th and 13th instants respectively of the Cities of Chinshai and Ningpo.

The City of Chinshai is situated at the mouth of Taha or Ningpo river, and was covered so strongly by its citadel (a fort built on a lofty headland jutting into the sea) and a number of heavy batteries and outworks on each bank of the estuary that the Imperial Commissioner, Yu keen, who had come especially to defend it, and the other civil and military Chinese authorities appear from their proclamations to have flattered themselves, even after their past and recent experience of the power of the British arms, that the place could not be taken; but they were, as on all previous occasions, speedily undeceived, and altho' the Chinese troops displayed considerable bravery, and in many individual instances would neither retreat nor surrender, (though deserted by their officers and comrades) the main bodies were driven from one rallying spot to another, and at length routed and entirely dispersed, whilst the forts and works were demolished or rendered utterly untenable by the overwhelming and beautiful practice of the squadron.

It is reported that a great many of the Chinese officers of rank have fallen with a large number of men but no precise information has yet been obtained on this point. The Imperial Commissioner is stated to have attempted to drown himself immediately after the battle, and to have since died at a short distance inland from the effects of that attempt, or some other unexplained cause.

About one hundred and fifty pieces of brass ordnance exclusive of iron cannon, many hundred gingalls and wall pieces, of various calibre, and some thousand matchlocks and other warlike weapons were captured, besides which several extensive magazines of gunpowder have been blown up or otherwise destroyed.

It affords H. M. Plenipotentiary the highest additional satisfaction to add that this achievement has been happily effected, with a much smaller loss on our side than could have been almost hoped for; there being only five killed, and about 30 wounded of all arms of H. M. forces.

The necessary arrangements having been made and reconnoissances had during the 11th and 13th inst., the squadron named in the margin,* carrying the troops, marines, and extra seamen from the ships left behind, moved on the 13th up the river to Ningpo, the Chinese soldiers having positively refused to face our troops again, in consequence of which the civil mandarins and all the military officers fled from the City, about 2 hours before the squadron reached it. The City was therefore peacefully occupied by the troops under H. E. Sir H. Gough K. C. B. and the ships moored in the river within 100 yards of the walls.

[God save the Queen.]

Dated on board the Steam Frigate Queen, in the river of Ningpo the 18th day of October, 1841.

BURMAH.

The last accounts from Maulmais are of a serious cast. The proposed journey of Tharawaddy to Rangoon, with a rabble army of some say of seventy thousand men, has occasioned some little doubts of his pacific intentions. The town of Martaban, opposite the British settlement at Moulmein, has been fortified with a new stockade, the jungle around it cleared, and the old wall repaired. There is also a story current, that the Emperor of China has written to Tharawaddy to ask his aid against some white sea monster which was ravaging his coasts. Putting all these circumstances together,—the army of seventy thousand men moving on Rangoon, the fortification of Martaban, and the reported measure from China, there appears sufficient cause for the English authorities to be on their guard against surprise.
The greatest activity, we learn, prevails among the troops at Moulmein, who are employed in continual exercises and keep up an incessant rattle of musquetry. H. M.
Ship Childers is exercising her great guns; gun boats have been manned and trained for action, and every thing wears the appearance of that armed peace, which Mr Thiers recommended last year to the king of the French. The Proserpine steamer has been despatched with stores and ammunition, and the Ganges the old half crazy Ganges, is, we hear, to be fitted up with some big guns and sent to the same destination. Government appears to be acting upon the politic maxim, that the best way to avoid war is to be prepared for it.

We doubt not however that Tharawaddy's intentions are still pacific. His royal "progress," the first he has made since he obtained the throne, is to be accompanied with all that barbaric pomp, which may serve to strike the weak minds of his lords & subjects with awe and admiration. The fortification of Martaban may be explained by its being a frontier town, which he intends to visit, and by the repugnance he must feel, from his own dear bought experience, to come within range of English shot, without the protection of an intermediate stockade. We still think there is nothing in the transactions which have aroused the vigilance of the Moulmein authorities, which indicate hostilities. The King is much more afraid of us than we can be of him.—Yet, without great caution, a war may be kindled between the "countries," contrary to the wishes of both Governments. Any aggression on the part of his officers would lead to a peremptory demand of explanation; and if that explanation was delayed, our own sense of dignity would prick us up to a war. There may also be some fiery and warlike spirits at Moulmein, who would like nothing better than a war. Some act of indiscretion on the part of our own officials may lead to reprisals; and reprisals to open hostility. Great care and attention will be necessary to prevent any unexpected outbreak on either part, which may lead to the horrors of war.

We do not see how we can demand of Tharawaddy any explanation of these warlike preparations, without precipitating ourselves into a war. It is much to be feared that any envoy we might send for this purpose would ill brook the salutatory forms of reception at the Burmese Court; and be too apt to interpret any delay to which he might be subject, as an unequivocal proof of the hostile disposition of the king. We could not second time overlook any indignity which might be cast on our Minister, more especially when a large Burmese army was assembled near our frontiers. We must in the present case therefore trust for peace to Tharawad-dy's experience of the misfortunes of war, and to our own preparedness to meet any aggression, and to pour our troops through Arracan on the valley of the Irrawaddy at the shortest notice.—Friend of India, Sept. 9.

Bombay Gazette.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 4th Dec. 1841.

This week has been altogether void of news. The Advertiser has not yet come in, and we have therefore nothing to add to what we last week stated, regarding the Burmese war. We have however taken from the Friend of India some remarks on Burmese affairs from which it will be seen that even then reports had been received in Calcutta of the Chinese government having attempted to excite hostilities at Burmah against the English.

However.—It seems that the commercial community now generally begins to give more attention to Hongkong than hitherto, and great activity in building godowns and private houses has of late been observed there, while many merchants have during the week gone over, with a view, we believe, of commencing building. The public buildings are several of them completed, and the construction of others is urged on with spirit, so that we suppose this island which was eight or nine months back inhabited by none but poor Chinese fishermen, will soon boast of a stately town. A practicable brailroad has been cut across the island to Tytan-bay, and a road fit for carriages is already several miles long, whilst a great number of workmen are employed upon it to complete it. The Chinese population is daily increasing, and its orderly behaviour, although they may be supposed not to be one of the most respectable classes of society, shows little room for the interference of the Police. The harbor is well supplied at cheap rates, and workmen and artisans as well as the materials for building are plentiful. There are on the island several quarries of fine granite, which the Chinese work at cheap prices, so that granite stones for building of foundations or even houses may be had at very moderate prices. Concerning the climate of Hongkong, opinions have varied considerably, nor do they now seem to be altogether reconciled, for while some of the residents there have enjoyed health without interruption, many others have had attacks of fever and ague. There are however many causes to induce sickness, independent of the climate. Waiting for the completion of their houses, people have been obliged to live in matsheds, or bamboo houses, in which the sudden changes of temperature, so frequent here in the latter part of the year, would be more severely felt; others have gone to live in their new houses before they were dry, and the more than usual exposure, to the sun of the Europeans residing there may also have had its share in producing sickness. According to all accounts the situation of Tytan-bay is more healthy than that of the new town of Hongkong, but we have as yet not had sufficient experience with certainty to judge of either. The piracies committed in the neighbourhood of Hongkong continue to give uneasiness to the native population, and the efforts of the British authorities to put them down, have hitherto been but partially successful. Independent of the occupation which the Chinese derive from foreign trade and building, and the supplies of provisions, a considerable trade in salt has already sprung up, and we are informed that many parts of the surrounding country are now supplied with salt from Hongkong, which the Chinese have made a depot for that article.

The present war seems to be most fatal to all governors of the Provinces that have yet been attacked. Tang Tze-ching, Governor of Canton during our imprisonment there, after being permitted when unseated by Lin to hold the government of Fookien for a while, bewails the losses of his country and his own in exile at Eie, whither Lin, his successor in Canton, likewise accompanied him in disgrace. The active talents of that minister, and his influence have however already caused his recall, and with the rank of Vice-roy, the troublesome and reasonable duty of containing the Yellow river within its banks has been entrusted to him. Khe-shen, Vice-Roy of Pechelee and High Imperial Commissioner, has after having been dragged in chains from the southern to the northern extremity of the Empire, and lost an immense fortune, has been condemned to death, but if we are to believe reports now current, has been pardoned, and is on his way to Chekeang, again to try what negotiations may do, although we suppose he will find the present Plenipotentiary not so easy to manage as the last, and much of his diplomatic talent is therefore likely to be expended in vain. Eleepor, Governor of Chekeang, has, as will be seen from an Edict we publish below, been condemned to banishment at Eie, for having permitted the barbarians to leave Chusan alive, early this year. But the most tropical fate of all has befallen his successor in office, Yu-keen, already known to our readers from translations of several of his reports and proclamations, to have been a most uncompromising enemy to the English. This unfortunate man, finding all his efforts to repel the English at Chinshoo of no avail, and so doubt vexed and humiliated at finding his performance fall so far short of his promises, attempted to drown himself, but was saved by some of his soldiers who fled with him first to Ningpo and then continued their flight on foot to beyond the town of Yu-yaou, where Yu-keen expired. His body was conveyed to Hang-chow-foo, where it received all the honor and ceremonial due to the rank he held. These particulars we gather from a translation of a report from the Lieut. Governor of Che-keang, contained in the Canton Register Extra of 30th November; the principal facts were however previously made known in Sir Henry Pottinger's Notification.

Already, therefore, have five Vice-roys either been sent to banishment or lost their lives; we have not yet heard what will be done to the Governor of Fookien who allowed Amoy to be taken, and who had expended such large sums on its fortifications; it is probable that he may be ordered to keep his brother-Governors company in exile at Amoy. One thing strikes us as very remarkable, namely, that the ransoming of the City of Canton should not have caused the Imperial displeasure to fall upon Ke-keang the Governor, and Yih-shan the Tartar General; but Yih-shan probably has great influence at Court and managed to represent matters in a light much more favorable than true; the old Kwang-chow-foo was the only officer of note who lost office, and he resigned from dread of his personal unpopularity, and was not deposed by his superiors.

By the arrival of the Psyche from the coast, we learn that Sir Henry Pottinger and Admiral Sir William Parker were both at Chusan on the 23rd November. No other news whatever has been received from the north, but from the presence of these officers at Chusan it is supposed that the report, brought by Chinese during the week of the capture of the City of Hang-chow-foo, Capital of Chekeang Province, is without foundation. H. M. S. Cruiser was to leave Chusan immediately for the southward, so that we may hourly receive intelligence by her. From Amoy no news has been received.

Trade is proceeding as usual in Canton, although upon unfavorable terms. By foreign sales of manufactures upon an unwilling market, their prices are even lower now than before, and Cotton also shows a tendency to decline. Teas are about the same as last week, but it is observed that this year's crop is generally of an inferior quality. Large quantities of green Teas are now being prepared in Macao for the American market; a considerable portion of these sorts of teas, as indeed of many others, being now shipped from here instead of from Canton. The scarcity of the circulating medium daily increases, and Silver silver is at par, whilst Mexican dollars are of extremely difficult sale at 4 @ 5 per cent discount. We were, we learn, misinformed last week, when partially attributing the present scarcity of Pillar dollars to the shipment of the ransom money of Canton, to Calcutta. The dollars then received were mostly kept here for the use of the expedition; and a considerable portion of them must have again been circulated. The chief reason for this sudden diminution of these dollars may probably be sought in the present troubled state of the country, when Spanish dollars, as generally more current than sycee, and, besides, easily concealed, are eagerly sought after in the provinces of Canton. Fookien and Che-keang, by the people. Another reason, which would however not act with quite so sudden effect, is the nearly total cessation of supply of these sort of dollars, and their rapid destruction in the hands of the Chinese, from their habit of stamping them; a measure resorted to by them, as bills of exchange are endorsed by us, holding those who stamp upon them, responsible for the goodness of the metal.

We have received a note from Captain Smoult, stating that, to obviate misrepresentation, he will shortly bring before the Public a correct account of the circumstances attending the loss of the Verbind. Capt. Smoult may freely avail himself of our column for this purpose, and the public certainly expect to be made acquainted with circumstances, the imperfect knowledge of which, may have given birth to, perhaps, unjust inferences.

H. M. S. Albatross has been in the Broadway during the whole of the past week, with the intention of stopping Chinese junk; we have not yet heard with what success.

Two vessels lately arrived from Singapore, and suspected of having guns and ammunition on board, were boarded by Officers from H. M. S. Albatross, and although reports of their seizure were current here, we understand they have not been molested, from which we infer that their papers and cargoes were in order.

We have been kindly favored with the translation of the Lieut. Governor's report regarding the proceedings of the English at Fookien. The paper is interesting as showing the view the Chinese take of these things; and although we may refuse belief to the charge brought against them of the abduction of a bride, it is singular that the Foo-yuen should himself bear testimony to the impartial administration of justice by Capt. Smith.

THE ENGLISH AT AMOY.

Law the Lieut. Governor having made thorough investigations in relation to the affairs of the barbarians in Fookien province, arranges the particulars in due order, and offers them up for your Majesty's lightning glance.

I have found by examination that H. E. Yau, the Governor, had issued orders to all his subordinates to make ready large and small vessels and to plan an attack upon the enemy. I afterwards understood that a spy made known the intelligence to the said barbarians, and they having put themselves in a state of preparedness our plan was therefore stopped in the midst of its execution. I also understood that other schemes were devised, the secrecy of which could not be penetrated, and therefore no inquiries could be instituted with regard to them. After this it was understood that Lieut. Governor E. (of Canton) received the Imperial commands to repair to Fookien to arrange affairs, but still matters continued to remain in a state of stagnation, and at present the officers have decided to keep the troops in their present position and wait the arrival of the Imperial commission, when they will again proceed to join battle. At the present time, however, in each position the marine veterans and recruits are still continued to be drilled and practised, and all other matters remain just as they were without the slightest movement, and I am not yet able to report.

II. It is ascertained, upon examination, that the barbarian ships at Hongkong are as formerly seven in number, and these do they make extensive sales of Opium. I understand that when one vessel has finished her sales of the drug, and leaves, another one comes to sell; thus incessant are their going and coming. The said rebels have not seized upon any but the above territory (of Hongkong) with designs of carrying on their trade, nor do they create disturbance among the people, neither have they started up any other measures whatever. I have also understood that the said rebels, perceiving Amoy to be as warm as Canton, say they design passing the year there.

III. Upon investigation I have discovered that every passage boat plying between Amoy and Chang-chow has been ordered by the said rebels to hoist the English flag, and then they will be allowed to enter and depart. The said boat people are really unwilling to assent to this arrangement, and they also dare not go again to Amoy. I have understood that recently, while eight grass boats belonging to our people were watering the port, they were seized by the said rebellious barbarians and burned up with fire.

IV. It is ascertained that the barbarians at Hongkong have covertly caused five traitorous native Chinese to secrete themselves at the three places of Amoy, Tung-an, and Chang-chow, and stay to search for intelligence concerning our officers and troops, and for each month's use they give them five hundred dollars, therefore it is impossible for the said rebels not to be made acquainted with our movements.

V. I have understood that when the villagers near Koo-lang-soo had received a bride, and were passing along the road with her in a wedding sedan chair, the said rebels laid hold of it and the men also; I heard that they desired to take the bride and forcibly detain her, giving to the bridegroom a hundred foreign dollars and ordering him to procure another wife. The bride's relations sorrowing interceded for her, but they refused to give her up, and they then petitioned at the residence of the said rebels' false mandarin Captain, whereupon she was returned, and camlets and other articles were also given to them.

Vl. It is understood that our ships of war which were seized by the barbarians have not yet been burned but as formerly lay anchored off Hae cho-bill. On the nineteenth the villagers near secretly proceeded with intent stealthily to set them adrift, designing to deliver them to the officers and obtain rewards. They, however, did not suppose that they were closely watched by the barbarians, who sent their boats in pursuit and opening their great guns, killed three of the people and recovered the said vessels all back again.

THE hereditary prince Hoahin, and the high minister Jinsow and others, kneeling respectfully lay their report before the throne:

In obedience to the imperial will, having assembled together to sit in judgment upon the affairs submitted to our deliberation, and having previously received the imperial instructions to institute an investigation in relation to Elepoo, who formerly held the office of governor of the two Keang provinces (Kéangnan, i. e. Kéangsoo and Ganhuay and Kéangse), in obedience thereto, we have had him brought before us in council assembled, and have ascertained by investigation the clear import of every circumstance; and Elepoo, bowing to the ground and knocking his head, through alarm and fear lost all command of himself. It appears that Elepoo received an imperial commission, last year, to examine into and arrange the affairs of the barbarians in Ché-keang; and after he had arrived in the province he employed skillful spies, summoned together the bravest of the militia, collected provisions, selected the most abled-bodied of the troops, and laid many plans for advancing upon and exterminating the enemy. Afterwards, he earnestly desired to order the said barbarians to repair to Canton, there to wait until affairs could be examined into and arranged. To gain renown he concluded to offer them presents, and to order persons to proceed to them and clearly explain his commands, and at the same time to spy out their real strength. He deemed it proper to dispatch Changke, a person of his household whom he had promoted six degrees, with an official messenger, Chin Chekang, over the sea [to Tinghai] to offer bullocks and sheep and various articles as presents, in return for which the said barbarians presented foreign broadcloths and various commodities. Elepoo feared to make an absolute refusal of the whole of the said articles, which would have struck the barbarians with suspicion and dread. But instead of being thus affected, they acted deceptively with regard to the time of their proceeding to Canton, and Elepoo under these circumstances received their presents. In reply to a memorial, touching the above, the imperial will was received, strongly enjoining that the articles be sent back. Elepoo in obedience thereto, forthwith took the various kinds of presents, and ordered Chin Chekang to go and give them back to the barbarians, who would not receive them.

During the second month of the present year, the barbarians wishing to deliver back Chusan, Changke and Chin Chekang were sent to take one barbarian man and one woman to proceed and make known the strict injunction, that when the city had been given up then all the barbarians should be delivered. The presents which they had previously made were all sent back, and having received them, they set sail for Canton. But Elepoo did not, in obedience to the imperial will, forthwith advance and slaughter, and make an immediate and thorough extermination of them. The whole of his proceedings being improper and really marked by imbecility, and being unworthy to bear so high an office, he earnestly besought that his crimes might be visited with heavy punishment. We, the ministers, having taken into consideration from first to last the whole of the evidence which he in person has laid before us, respectfully memorialize that in relation thereto the sacred commands may be recorded.

Respecting the above case of Elepoo, the imperial commissioner and high minister, his management of the barbarian affairs in Chékeang, and his not being able at once to recover Tinghai, the imperial will was repeatedly transmitted that he should proceed to exterminate the enemy; but on every occasion he delayed and idly looked about him, and through excessive timidity did not go forward, and thus for every purpose he proved himself weak and useless. We therefore jointly solicit the imperial will, that Elepoo may be forthwith disgraced from the office he formerly held as governor of the two Keang provinces, and be sent to Ele, that by strenuous exertions he may make amends for his offences.

Changke and the official messenger Chin Chekang, who formerly proceeded to the barbarian ships, as we have found by examination, only acted in obedience to Elepoo, and accordingly we acquit them of crime. Let Chin Chekang return to his military station, and let Changke be released.

That when your majesty's ministers, have adjudged of the cases brought before us in council assembled, we now reverently report to the court, that the imperial will may be received and recorded.

The imperial reply. His majesty's commands have been received as follows:

"In consequence of Elepoo having unsatisfactorily managed the military affairs of Chékeang, our imperial will was delivered to the princes and high ministers to adjudge the crimes of which he was guilty, and it appears that prince Jinchow and others, in council assembled, have now reported upon the above case. Elepoo, holding the office of high imperial commissioner for the arrangement of affairs in Chékeang, was unable forthwith to recover the captured territories. The imperial will was repeatedly transmitted to him, that he should advance and slaughter the enemy, yet on every occasion he delayed and idly gazed about, really proving himself to be imbecile and worthless. Let him be forthwith disgraced from the office he formerly held as governor of the two Keang provinces, and let him be sent to Ele, that by strenuous exertions he may make amends for his crimes, and be a warning to others. Respect this."

DIED.—Yesterday morning, Major FRANCISCO DE MELLO D'ESGA, appointed Governor of Timor. The funeral took place in the afternoon yesterday, H. E. the Governor of Macao as Chief mourner, followed by his staff, accompanied the remains to their last resting place at Sm. Paulo, from the church of Sm. Francisco. A great proportion of the garrison of Macao, accompanied by the band playing the funeral march, attended, and the body was consigned to the grave with the customary military honors.

BURMAH.
From the Calcutta Englishman, of 4th, 6th and 7th October.

In addition to the immediate reinforcement which we mentioned yesterday as to proceed to Maulmein, we learn that the Madras Government have been ordered to send another native regiment thither, and the Rifle Company of the 21th regiment which is now at Penang will also join the augmented force. This fulness of preparation is most commendable, and as, if there be actual hostilities, the Barrackpore troops can be soon sent down in steamers (or even in transports speedily at this season) there is not any fear of a mischance to us at the outset.

There was a great competition amongst the Shipping Agents and Merchants at the Bankahall yesterday owing to the advertisements inviting tenders of ships to proceed to Maulmein. The Roberts, Viscount Melbourne, Argyle, and several other crack ships have been ordered to be immediately surveyed, and some of them will probably be taken up to-day.

We trust great care will be taken in the matter of surveying, and that no false notions of economy will induce the surveyors to try the packing system resorted to when ships were taken up to convey the 55th to China. It is not forgotten that one ship had to return and disburthen herself of some thirty or forty men, their baggage, stores, &c., at no little cost to the Government, and no small annoyance to every one on board.

After our paper went to press yesterday, we received letters from Maulmein, from one of which, dated 28th September, we extract the following:—

The Steamer Ganges returned from Rangoon on Sunday last, with very important and authentic intelligence of the King of Ava being within twelve hours journey of Rangoon. The whole of his family and Army are along with him, and indeed every thing he is possessed of; he cannot have at the least calculation less than 15 or 18,000 bear, large and small. The Prince of Prome with the deposed King is in advance of the King, and the Prince of P'khan one day's journey in rear. Every soul, man, woman and child, belonging to the royal family as also the officers of Government and their followers are all in the train. There is only the old Rangoon Woonghee left in Ava, but his principal wife and son are with the King as hostages. The general opinion is that this does not look very hostile, for if their intentions were warlike, it is considered very unlikely they would bring down the whole of their families and baggage. A splendid new Palace, Wharf and Pavilion have been erected at Rangoon for the King's reception, which is expected in the course of the week. The inhabitants of Rangoon appear very quiet, but the European merchants are in a dreadful state of alarm, and were it not for the considerable amount of property they have on their hands, they would gladly have left in the Steamer for Maulmein. A very convincing proof of the probability of a War in the course of the ensuing cold season, is there is no one in the Tenasserim Provinces, who can form a better opinion of the policy and intentions of the Court of Ava than Messrs Speirs, Brown and Biden, who are, I believe, impressed with the firm belief that Tharrawaddie is determined to attempt to recover the Tenasserim Provinces,—a measure certainly not very difficult in the present defenceless state of our military position in which the Government will now not sanction any alteration or improvement to be made in strengthening our post as they consider the gun-boats a sufficient protection against any force the Burmese may attack us with!!! Captain Halstead piloted the Prosperpine up the Salween a few days ago; he had not gone half a dozen miles beyond Martaban, when he stuck the Steamer in the mud and did not get her off until next flood-tide. R has just called and confirmed what I have written above regarding the Rangoon news; he says the people are not at all anxious for a War and have petitioned the King to that effect; so if we go to War, it will be a very unpopular one. All the official authorities here think we are certain of having a skirmish soon with the Burmese, and I believe the Brigadier has written by this opportunity to Government, recommending the 50th Foot to be immediately sent down. The Julia is to be launched to-morrow afternoon. The City of London from London arrived the day before yesterday with Mr. Mule on board.

The Colonel Burney and the Ganges from Rangoon have brought intelligence to the middle of September. It appears that the news of the capture of Canton and of the extraction of six millions of dollars from the pockets of the Chinese (which news reached Rangoon by the Tchangshie, Head-ley) had astonished and alarmed Tharrawaddie a little, and preliminary steps were immediately taken by him for a retrograde movement. Nevertheless 'His Majesty' had laid an embargo on the export of timber, upon the pretext of requiring it for the purpose of building a flotilla, and it was not without difficulty, and a remonstrance with the Governor of Rangoon, that three vessels then loading for Calcutta, were allowed to continue their shipments. We are pressed for room to-day, but to-morrow we will give copious extracts from the letters of our intelligent correspondent.

Since writing the above, we have received by the Ganges a proof ship of the Mythian Chronicle of a late date in September, containing the following items:—

(From the Moulmein Chronicle, September 29.)
The H. C. Steamer Ganges returned on Sunday last from Rangoon, and reports that great preparations were making for receiving the King, whose approach had been more rapid than had generally been expected. The Ganges left Rangoon on Saturday, when it was known that the king was at Sarawah some seventy or eighty miles above Rangoon, but it was uncertain how long His Majesty intended to remain at that place. Some said, he would be there in ten days, whilst others looked for his being at Rangoon before the full of the moon, or about today. It was expected that on Sunday, the advanced guard, under the command of the prince of Prome, would arrive at Rangoon. The rear guard is said to be under the command of the prince of Pakkan. The new landing place, erected at Rangoon expressly for the king, is reported to be a very elegant structure, divided off into three pavilions, the centre one red and the two others green. The whole length of the bridge has a richly carved balustrade, and the work altogether does great credit to the governor by whom, and at whose expense it is said to have been erected in honor of His Majesty. The king's landing at Rangoon will certainly prove a spectacle well worth witnessing. The whole pomp and circumstance of the kingdom will be concentrated in that one spot, and doubtless His Majesty will, on that day, feel proud of being at the same time the Monarch of so great a host and the object of its admiration and homage.

—On Thursday last the H. C. Steamer Proserpine was despatched up the Salween, having on board Capt. McLeod and Cpt. Halstead of H. M. B. Childers. She also had in tow several gun-boats, manned with lascars and a detachment of the Ta laing Corps, who are to be stationed at several villages on this side of the river. The Proserpine, we learn, grounded on a sand-bank a few miles above the town of Martaban. We believe she remained a night on it and floated off again the next morning without sustaining the slightest damage. Her presence up the river will have the effect, we trust, of repressing the petty depredations of our friends over the way, and giving confidence to our people on the bank of the river.

—The Burmese holidays have commenced, and last, we believe, for ten days. We hear that a good show of men and boats will be made this year, and we are glad of it, as it will convince our neighbours that we care little for all the rumours and threats of attack on this place which have now been current for some months. Our people are very happy and comfortable where they are, and have no desire to partake of the 'bhong' so much talked and boasted of by their late rulers. They have had no palaces or stockades to build here and are thankful for it.

A gentleman lately come down from up the country, reports that the Kayahs of the Yoonseien are crossing over to our side in great numbers. In consequence of the cruelties and exactions to which they are subjected from the Burmese Authorities. He also states, that a considerable Shan force had moved down from Zimay for the purpose of assisting the Kayahs in their dispute with the Burmese, but returned in consequence of the Burmese force, which marched from Bilong, having returned to that place without executing the duty with which it was entrusted. We are somewhat puzzled to distinguish these Kayahs from each other, and to know what tribe it is that appears to have thrown off the Burmese of Bilong, and what tribes have taken refuge in our territories. Our own Kayahs are said to be in some alarm at the doings on the Burmese side, and at the threats held out against them if they continue subject to the English, but we have not heard of any disposition having been evinced among them to seek the benefits of Burmese rule, and to contribute, with far more kicks than halpence, towards the erection of the stockade, with which labour the silly old man at Martaban is harassing his people.

A correspondent at Moulmein writes to us.—
I avail myself of the first opportunity to let you know the state of affairs here, though I have no news of any consequence to communicate. The Burmese continue to throw up stockades, and erect batteries on the Martaban side, and report says that the troops there are receiving daily reinforcements. Captain Halsted of H. M. B. Childers, returned on the 18th from a trip that he had made accompanied by the Political Agent, in a canoe up the river, having reached a distance of about 50 miles. He observed a great many stockades and warlike preparations, but received no molestation in the prosecution of the journey. Captain Halsted, I believe, entertains a very strong idea that all this means mischief, and is very wisely taking all precautions in case of an outbreak, but opinions are very much divided on the subject. The ladies too are in great tribulation, and are all very anxious to be removed to a place of safety. The H. C. War Steamer Proserpine arrived here on the 18th and will be despatched immediately, with two of the gun boats in tow to some anchorage up the river as an advanced guard, and to watch the movements of the Burmese, for which she is eminently qualified by her light draught of water. The Steamer Ganges arrived here yesterday with stores and the remainder of the Volunteers per H. M. Childers. It is not known what stay she will make. There is a report that some poor fishermen, belonging to our side were taken a few days ago by Burmese, and under the plea of their being spies were all immediately put to death. A French ship of about 400 tons came up the river on the 18th. Having received some damage after leaving Pondicherry, she returned there, purchased a quantity of copper, and was despatched to the place by her owners to be dry docked and recoppered. She expects to remain here for five months.

In my next I hope to have some news of greater interest to send, as we are all very anxious to have a brush with Tarrawadie.

22nd Sept.—I open this as the vessel does not sail so soon as was expected, to say that the Commissioner and Capt. McLeod are going up the river to-morrow morning in the Proserpine to take the advanced guard of gun boats to their station. They say that the Governor of Beeling, is at Martaban, and that he said openly in the Court House that he hopes to live yet to drive the English out of the provinces. He was a suborned old rascal in the last war.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE NATIVES.

The intercourse between the Natives and Settlers increases simultaneously with the augmentation of Colonists, and the former are becoming daily more conversant with the manners and customs of the latter, as well as more accurate to the value of their service either in labor or in supplying the various wants of the settlers with vegetable, firewood, &c.

To the Colony, the Natives will be of most important service, provided they are treated with judgment and with honesty by the Settlers.

But while on the one hand there is a line of conduct incumbent on the "Pakeha," so on the other it is just and proper that the "Maori" should perform, as far as his knowledge extends, his civil duties. The Aborigines are now British Subjects, entitled to equal rights and immunities, therefore, are, or ought to be, liable to, and incur the same penalties and punishment for any non-observance or infraction of the Law.

When the Natives were first brought under British Sovereignty every allowance was naturally made for any breach on the rules and enactments which are indispensable for the relations of society, and good order of the whole community.

That they are apt and intelligent enough, and have very little need of protectors as far as regards their individual interest in transactions, no one can deny, who has had much intercourse with them; and studied their characters; consequently, they will become either very useful and instrumental in the future operations of the Settlers, or they will become useful, designing, vicious characters, extremely troublesome to the whole Colony.

To teach them the moral obligations of members of civilized society, in the honest duty of the Government; and we seriously think that no time should now be lost for their instruction in those common, yet most important, duties, which are the very basis of social life.

Prevention is better than cure;—and although it is an axiom in English Jurisprudence, that every member of a community is bound to know the Law with its penalties, and that the plea of ignorance will be of no avail, yet we consider that the Natives ought to be made fully acquainted with the punishments to which they will be subject for any dereliction from honesty, sobriety, and breach of faith.

They should be taught, and made fully to understand; that while they are protected in their rights, persons, and property, against the dishonest and faithless practices of Pakehas, they themselves are bound, and will be made to fulfil, the Law with the same strictness and impartiality.

It may be said that all we advance is very true and that it is but justice to the Natives, and would certainly be very much for the benefit of the Colony, but that it is similar to many other duties and acts incumbent on Government—which is a sort of multitude, and what is every one's business is nobody's business.

However, we consider this branch of public duty belongs to the Protector, who should also be Instructor, of the Aborigines.

Under the former character his duties must be very light, and in the Estimates for the ensuing year, we find the Salaries and Appendages of this Department no small sum in the "General Estimate," and much more, we conceive than a Missionary received in days of yore. Under the head of Aborigines, which is rather an anomalous item, when it is considered that not one of the Aborigines participate in the vote, there is, for

Allowance for six Natives, (dingy and servants)..... £120 0 0

Total..... £220 0 0

Be the Chief Protector and his Staff, the Natives should have the Laws explained, and we think it would be a judicious and useful auxiliary to have published and circulated a concise digest and explanation of those duties and penalties to which from their previous ignorance and natural propensities, they are most likely to be subjected.

The Natives are anxious to learn the language of the Settlers, as well as to assimilate themselves in their manners, and a small pamphlet, such as we have described, in English and Maori, would tend very much to the instruction, as well as benefit, of both; for neither could then plead ignorance of their mutual obligations, nor justly complain of the punishment consequent on any breach of these moralities and laws so essential for their mutual comfort and happiness.—New Zealand Herald.—Sydney Gazette.

THE UNITED STATES.

(From the English Chronicle, 2d Aug.)

We are anxious to direct public attention to an official paper issued by the legislature of the United States. This paper in its multifarious bearings, may prove to be not without its influence on the final issue even, of the McLeod affair. But our present purpose is, to seize upon the statement of certain facts and the expression of certain opinions on the part of American authorities in connection with question of a more extensive though not morally speaking, of a more important character than McLeod's most unwarrantable imprisonment. It is a "Report of a Committee on Naval Affairs" which we publish in another column of this day's English Chronicle.

It has long since become a little remark that when Fulton launched his first experimental barque, propelled by steam power, on the inland waters of the new world;—or when the genius of James Watt first gave to the machinery which that power was to set in motion, those principles of simplicity, and of concentration and economy of forces, which may be said, in their further development and extension, in these days, to have almost subdued the combined resistance of the winds and the waves,—neither the one, nor the other of those great men, in the moments of his most enthusiastic confidence, anticipated a title of the capacities or applications to which the magnificent results of his labours, speculative and practical, were one day to be appropriated. On Saturday we devoted a passing notice to the bird-like speed with which the mail packet, the Britannia (steamer) had fitted across the vast Atlantic in less than ten days. We are, now, to consider the facts which the American "report" incidentally brings before us as to the daily increasing importance of this "steam power"—not alone in the peaceful, the noble and beneficent occupations of commerce,—but in the more terrible, and disastrous mission of war! That war should be (as it is) that scourge and penalty of all human institutions, the recurring visitations of which, under our present imperfect institutions and demoralised nature, seem to be inevitable, must be matter for the deepest regret, not to say for self-abasement, to every well regulated mind. It is a necessity, whether positive or contingent, of which the improved spirit of modern European policy has been successful in its efforts to control at least the frequent visitation. Each of such visitations, now-a-days, is followed by one of two very dissimilar results. It seems to impress the winners, in a dreadful game, with a strong sense of the profligate hazards they have run for the acquisition of a stake more or less disproportionate to that which they have set against it; and to infuse into the losers either a desperate energy to retrieve by any means, their evil fortunes; or it inspires in the victor nations which carry him to unheard of excesses of cruelty towards nations, decimated, as it were, by families; and plunges the vanquished in a base and apathetic acquiescence in their role, the guilt and infamy of which are sure to be published by all refinements of that very despotism which their own supineness renders irremediable.

In the contemplation of a catastrophe so fatal, it is at least a consolatory feeling that we, ourselves, no far as human foresight and timely preparation are concerned, are in a condition which bespeaks some vigilance and wield of that steam power which is applicable to warlike service, perhaps already, the most formidable, and a rapidly-increasing equipment.

That an earlier vigilance might have been exercised, on the part of the naval administration of this country, with excellent and proportionally increased effect we believe to be true. We believe it to be equally certain that with still more efficient results, the powerful steam armament which we have already organised, either in our navy, as war steamers,—or in our mercantile marine, as packets capable of immediate adaptation to the same species of service,—might have been much ex-

London. But we hail with satisfaction any evidence of the wisdom of the Executive in attaining to that stage of preparation at which they are allowed, by a high political authority to have arrived; and we are quite ready to anticipate that the opportune publication of the document before us will not fail to urge them to increased and untiring energy in still further strengthening our position in this respect. It must never be forgotten that with the development of the theory of steam navigation, and the vast improvement which late years have witnessed in that branch of naval architecture to which it is applicable, security from invasion became extinct to every maritime coast in the world, whether insular or continental. Where the draught of war transports for example, carrying hundreds of troops, was, only during the last war so many feet that the shores of bays and the mouths and the inner waters of rivers were in numerous instances, impracticable for a descent; steamers carrying as many troops, and with a draught of little more than many inches, can now run over shallows, and work through creeks which have been for ages regarded as unassailable defenses against hostile disembarkations.

The American committee, after enologising a report, which has been made to them by the Naval Secretary insisting on the national importance of the Federal Government sitting out immediately a home squadron for the purposes at once of protecting their coasts and making the American seamen acquainted with the capabilities of the harbours and roads upon its line for the purposes of defence, &c., of which squadron steamers of war (to be built) should form a part. They describe in emphatic terms the wretched state of the existing defences along the whole of that line, remarking that what forts there are which are under repair will require some years to be put in a proper state; they deplore the extreme inadequacy of the funds which have been from time to time voted for setting them in better order. They represent that "None of them are properly garrisoned, and some have not a man to keep their gates closed. These fortresses have cost immense sums of money, and if well supplied with guns and garrisons would afford but partial protection to a few points on our sea coast, and to our armed squadrons in time of war. They would not defend us against armed steamers of an enemy, who might pass them in the night or avoid them by entering harbours where there are no fortifications. This last remark is peculiarly applicable to the southern coast, where there are numerous harbours on the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico, and not a fort from Charles to Mobile in a condition to fire a gun. In the event of a war with France or Great Britain, the fortification at Pensacola, and perhaps others, might be seized and held by the enemy, or any of our unprotected harbours might be entered by fleets of armed steamers, loaded with black troops from the West Indies, to annoy and plunder the country. The northern portion of the Atlantic coast, where such vast sums have been expended to place it in a state of defence, would by no means be secure against the rapid movements of such an enemy. The harbour of New York itself might be entered through the inlet of Amboy and State Island Sound, and the fortifications in all the narrows entirely avoided. The city might be sacked or laid under contribution before a sufficient force could be collected to prevent the approach or escape of so formidable an enemy; and it is seriously to be feared that there is not a harbour on the whole coast, however well defended against the sailing ships of an enemy, that these steamers might not enter by avoiding the forts or passing them in the night. If this is true, it must be perceived that not only our commerce, but our cities with all their wealth, would be at the mercy of an enemy employing a force so rapid and certain in its movement."

We hope that this intelligence will have its due weight, not with those reckless and incendiary leaders to whom we alluded on Saturday, for they seem beyond the reach of all wholesome counsel, but with the sober and dispassionate community of one of the noblest states, and the very finest, the wealthiest and perhaps, after all, the most enlightened city of the Union.

The most important features of the report, however, are its recognition of the prodigious efforts that have been made by Great Britain, and not less by France, to "change the naval armament from the common sailing vessels of war to armed steamers," and its careful review of the steamer force already formed, and that which is in course of active formation by this country. In what is stated by the committee, in invoking the attention of the legislature to the steps which have been already adopted by Great Britain, there is, we fear, a latent desire to excite the jealousy of the southern states (whose commercial relations and interests are usually presumed to render them favourable to a close connection with us,) against the possible application of the offensive means we undoubtedly possess, and their easy extension if it should be unhappily required, by the ready adaption of our mail packets to all the purposes of war vessels. In this spirit they advert to the efforts we are said to be now making to keep afloat and actively employed on our northern coast, and in the West Indies, a large number of steamers of the largest class, many of them with their guns on board, and the others, in all things ready to receive them. They advert in the most pointed manner, and in great detail to those steamers of the largest classes (450 and 500 horse power) now engaged in the packet service between Great Britain and various points on the seaboard of the United States, and if possible with still more apprehensive jealousy to other 14 steamers, contracted for by our Admiralty, with the "Royal Mail steam-packet Company of London," for the packet service of the coasts of America, Mexico, and other territories, on the coasts of the Pacific as well as of the Atlantic. The completed additional establishment of British steamers to run to St. John's, New Brunswick, constituting "a total force of 25 or 30 steam ships, applicable to war purposes built to carry heavy weight of metal, and, by special agreement with the company of proprietors and post-office contractors, to be at the disposal of the British Government whenever required"—is another point earnestly dwelt upon, and carefully discussed.

We refer the reader to the document itself for the terms in which that old bugbear is renewed, (common to Cuba, and to the French West India Islands as well as to the Union,)—of our contemplating the excitement some day, of a furious insurrectionary war by the black slaves of the southern states against the planters their owners. We shall only add to this article two extracts from the report which is an expressive though concise summary of their not exaggerated estimate of the value of the force we have accumulated, in the event,—the disastrous event—which, for the common interests, and the permanent happiness of two great nations we heartily deprecate,—of a war between them.

"In the event of a declaration of war by Great Britain against the United States, as she will of course possess the information necessary to enable her to concentrate her forces, all the steamers in the West India mail service can be collected at any point on the southern coast by the time the declaration would be communicated to the President. These employed on the northern line to New York and Boston may commence hostilities before the last preparation can be made to meet them. Depots of Coals are to be established at Halifax, and at several ports in the West Indies, from whence those fleets can be supplied, and the prediction made some years since by an intelligent and experienced British officer, 'that their sailing ships of war would become coal carriers to their steamers,' will be fulfilled."

And the Secretary "very justly remarks" that "Had a war with Great Britain been the result, as was, at one time, generally feared of the subjects of difficulty now in a course of adjustment between that power and the United States, not only would our trade have been liable to great interruption, and our merchants to great losses abroad, but a naval force, comparatively small, might, on our very shores, have seized our merchant ships and insulted our flag without means of resistance or immediate retaliation being at the command of Government."

Our own ardent hope is that the United States Government by a calm and dignified and dispassionate policy,—unswayed by party demonstrations or factional demands, will yet forbear from any course of proceeding towards Great Britain which may ever give to this report any interest more painful than that of a statistical document of great accuracy. If it once allow the clamour of unbridled prejudice and national antipathies, on the part of a few noisy demagogues to impel it to acts of violence and bloodshed, such as at this moment they are endeavoring to force it upon,—as surely as it will have them recapitulated the powers of its injured antagonist to inflict the penalty, so certainly will it have ensured its visitation. But we shall yet rely upon a sense of justice stronger than the appetite of vengeance;—a sense of national dignity and self-respect more powerful than the influences of a cabal, or the agitations of a club,—and a sense of the interests of humanity, in the sustained amity and mutual confidence of two mighty nations, more vigorous than either.

Overland News.

From the London Mail, 6th September.

H. M. S. Merilbe, from Chiba, arrived at Spithead, on the 7th and H. M. S. Samarang, from China, on the 14th August.

An iron steamer, the Pluto, at present at Portsmouth, is about to proceed to China.

On the night of the 15th August, a collision took place in the Channel, between the Fernon, bound for the East Indies, and the Norway bark Olsen, from Christiansand to Nantes, by which the latter vessel was sunk, and the other so much injured as to be compelled to return to Portsmouth. Fortunately no lives were lost. The Olsen is stated to be insured, and the loss is supposed to be at least £2000.

On the 3d of September a splendid steam frigate, the Messina, was launched from the yard of Messrs Fletcher. She is the property of the East India Company.—A beautiful iron steamer, the Cairo, was launched on the same day from the yard of Messrs Ditchburn and More, Blackwall. She is built for the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation company, and is intended to run upon the Nile in conjunction with the Lotus (now on the station), for the convenience of passengers to India overland. The Cairo will accommodate one hundred passengers. She will be fitted with Penn and Co.'s engines, and start for Alexandria in about a fortnight. A vessel precisely similar in every respect is being constructed for the Pacha of Egypt.

The two large steamers, the Hindustan and Bombay, intended for India, building for the Peninsular and Oriental Steam company, are progressing rapidly. The Procurator, building at Glasgow, is a remarkably fine vessel; but she is not yet ready for launching, and as it will take some time to fit her engines, the probability is she will not leave this country before the beginning of the next year.

RESIGNATION OF MINISTERS.—LORDS.

August 30.—Viscount Melbourne said—My lords, I consider it my duty to acquaint your lordships that in consequence of the vote which was come to by the other house of Parliament, on Saturday morning last, which was precisely similar in terms to a vote come to by your lordships at an earlier period of the week, I have, on the part of my colleagues and myself, tendered to her Majesty the resignation of the offices we hold, which resignation her Majesty has been graciously pleased to accept, and we now continue to hold those offices only till our successors are appointed.

Her Majesty's seconchment, whatever may have been promulgated to the contrary, is not expected to take place before quite the middle or the end of October.

On the 26th the bells and guns in the metropolis announced the birth day of Prince Albert who has now completed his 32nd year. Windsor was illuminated in the evening and in London the theatre, the Club House, and several of the Royal tradesmen's were illuminated.

On the 7th ult. was promulgated the appointment, made at a Court of East India Directors on the 28th July, of Sir William Hay Macnaghten, to be Governor of the presidency of Bombay.

The Court of Directors of the East India Company, under date August 18th, give notice that the rate of exchange at which they will receive cash for bills on Bengal from this date and until further notice, will be 1s. 11d., the Company's rupee, and for bills on Madras and Bombay 1s. 11½d., the Company's rupee.

RESIGNATION OF MINISTERS.

Aug. 30.—Lord J. Russell rose to address the house, which was extremely crowded, and the most profound silence instantly prevailed. The noble lord, who appeared to speak under the influence of suppressed feeling, and who was at times quite inaudible in the gallery, said—I have now, sir, to state to the house that, after the division of Friday night, her Majesty's ministers thought in their duty at once to advise the answer which has just been communicated to the house, and humbly to tender their resignations to her Majesty, to enable her Majesty to form a new administration. Her Majesty was graciously pleased to accept their resignations; and we, therefore, now only hold office until other ministers shall be appointed to the offices which we respectively filled. It was our duty, as we believed, to propose the measures which were proposed in the late Parliament in reference to the trade and commerce of the country, and which we thought essential to its interests. Upon being defeated with regard to one of these measures, we advised her Majesty, as soon as the business of the session would permit it, to resort to a dissolution of Parliament. That dissolution having taken place, and the new Parliament being assembled on the earliest possible opportunity, we advised her Majesty to submit to them the consideration of measures of the same nature, and to ask for the opinion of Parliament in reference to these matters. It has pleased the House of Commons by a large majority to address her Majesty, stating that her Ministers did not enjoy the confidence of Parliament and the country. This decision left us no other part to perform than that of resigning our offices. I will not use any arguments to show why we think we were justified in prolonging the struggle until the present hour; but I say that it was our conviction that our duty to the sovereign whose confidence we enjoyed—that our persuasion of the necessity of the measure which we advised, and our notions of the interests of the pro-

ple of this country—rendered it incumbent on us to continue that struggle to the present moment. Having briefly reviewed the administration of Lords Grey and Melbourne, and the policy of their governments his lordship concluded thus.—Sir, this House has decided, at the very commencement of the session, that it will take measures for directing the attention of the executive to the measures alluded to in her Majesty's speech. I can only say, that although that decision may call upon us to give our opposition to measures to which we cannot give our approval, I am sure that in all the future exaltations of the House, I shall be ever ready to give that advice to the House which I think will best promote its objects, which will tend to secure to it the affections of the people of the United Kingdom, and conduce to the welfare and prosperity of the great empire of which this House is the centre and representative. I can assure the House that I shall follow that course, and in whatever circumstances I am placed I shall express to it my conscientious convictions on the measures proposed, whether they be the acts of the ministers of the day, or of those who are opposed to them. I shall be always ready to give such an opinion as I think may tend to the permanent improvement of our institutions,—never, as I observed on another occasion—never defending abuses as if they were institutions, and on the other hand never being ready to sacrifice institutions as if they were abuses. I have only further to say, with regard to those in this House, with whom I have conducted public affairs for many years, whether they have been my supporters or my opponents, I wish personally to express a hope that in all our future relations there may be no feeling of personal bitterness between us (cheers); if our resignation tends to the future welfare and prosperity of the country, I shall always look back with satisfaction to this day as that in which that event occurred. I now, sir, move that the House at its rising do adjourn to the 6th September.

The noble Lord resumed his seat amidst loud cheering. Lord Stanley said: The circumstances which have been announced by the noble lord will, I am sure, convince the House of the propriety of no honorable member entering into a discussion upon the long train of transactions which led to the differences between the two great parties in this House and ultimately to the resignation of Her Majesty's ministers. But I am sure I should do injustice to the feelings of the House, in reference to the noble lord who has just sat down, if I did not express from this side of the House what I am sure I felt by every member here—a cordial participation in the concluding sentiment of the noble lord, that whatever may have been our political differences during these great contests, no sentiments of personal bitterness can have been engendered in the mind of any one of them. It was my good fortune for some time to have the honour of acting politically in accordance with the noble lord; it has been my misfortune for some years conscientiously to have differed from the course which the noble lord has seen it his duty to take; but as I feel it my duty to claim for myself and for every gentleman who has thought it his duty to oppose him; a belief on the part of the House that we have acted on conscientious motives and no others, so I fully give to the noble lord credit for being influenced by no other consideration but that sense of duty which to a man of his high honour must be paramount to every other feeling. No one can have regarded with any sentiment but one of high admiration, the distinguished zeal and perseverance, and the ability and talent with which, whether in the immediate and peculiar duties of his own department, or in conducting the public business in this House, the noble lord has performed his very arduous and difficult task. (Hear, hear, hear.)

CHANGE OF MINISTERS.

The Queen's speech was delivered on the 24th August, when the recommendations of Ministers were met by a direct vote of want of confidence, the opposition refusing to enter upon the consideration of matters of such immense importance as a revision of the duties affecting the productions of foreign countries, and of the Corn Laws, while a government was in office which possessed no influence either with parliament or the country. The debate in the House of Peers, which was very interesting, closed upon the first night with a majority against Ministers of seventy-two. That in the Commons lasted four nights, and finished on the twenty-seventh, when the amendment was adopted by a majority of ninety-one; thus sealing the fate of Lord Melbourne's Government.

Early on the 28th, a Cabinet Council was held at which it was determined Ministers should at once resign, and Lord Melbourne immediately proceeded to Windsor. In the afternoon, the Marquis of Lansdowne entertained the entire Cabinet; and a farewell dinner was given to Lord Vivian by the Royal Artillery.

Late on the 29th, Sir R. Peel received a summons from her Majesty; and having held a select meeting on the morning of the 30th, proceeded post to Windsor Castle. On his arrival at the castle, from instructions previously given at her Majesty's commands, the right honourable baronet's carriage was ordered through the grand entrance to the principal court. Immediately after Sir Robert had alighted from his carriage, he was conducted to the royal presence. After an audience of about an hour, the right honourable baronet left his castle on his return to the metropolis; and late to the evening there was a highly important meeting of the heads of the conservative party at the private residence of Sir Robert Peel, in Whitehall gardens.

Through the entire of the 31st, the chief members of the Conservative party were in frequent communication with Sir R. Peel; but it was not until a late hour that it was decided upon whom the chief offices of the Cabinet should devolve, and that a list was prepared which the Premier might submit for her Majesty's approval.

On the 1st of September Sir R. Peel proceeded to Windsor for the purpose of laying before Her Majesty for her gracious approval a list of the principal statesmen in conjunction with whom the right honourable baronet purposes to carry on the government of that country. Negotiations were carried on till the 3rd September, when her Majesty held a Privy Council at Claremont, when the late advisers delivered up the Seals and other insignia of their offices, which were delivered to their successors.

It is said that the 24th of September is the day on which Sir Robert Peel proposes to meet the parliament as minister. It is understood that the continuance of the existing poor-law for one year will be proposed, and that a vote of credit for six months will be taken. The parliament will then be prorogued, without taking any of the numerous election petitions into consideration, or attending to any other business. It is also reported that parliament will not re-assemble till February.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

PEERS.

August 19.—This being the day on which the writs for electing the new Parliament were made returnable, the two Houses met for the despatch of business, and Parliament was opened, the Lords Commissioners being the Lord Chancellor, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Marquis of Normansby, the Earl of Clarendon, and Viscount Duncannon.

The Commons having appeared at the bar, the Lord Chancellor said:—We have it in command from her Majesty to let you know that her Majesty will, as soon as the members of both houses shall be sworn, declare to you the cause of her calling this Parliament, and it being necessary that a Speaker of the House of Commons shall be first chosen, it is her Majesty's pleasure that you proceed to the choice of some proper person to be your Speaker.

The Commons withdrew.
The Lord Chancellor first took the oaths at the table by himself; and then a great many peers took the usual oaths, which was continued daily to the 24th, when the Royal Speech was delivered.

The Lords Commissioners took their places; they were the Lord Chancellor, the Marquis of Normansby, the Earl of Clarendon, Viscount Melbourne, and Viscount Duncannon. The House of Commons attended; and the Lord Chancellor read the following speech:

QUEEN'S SPEECH.

'MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN:
'We are commanded by her majesty to acquaint you that her majesty has availed herself of the earliest opportunity of resorting to your advice and assistance after the dissolution of the last Parliament.

'Her Majesty continues to receive from Foreign Powers gratifying assurances of their desire to maintain with her majesty the most friendly relations.

'Her Majesty has the satisfaction of informing you that the objects for which the Treaty of the 15th of July, 1840, was concluded between her majesty, the Emperor of Austria, the King of Prussia, the Emperor of Russia, and the Sultan, have been fully accomplished; and it is gratifying to her majesty to be enabled to state, that the temporary separation which the measures taken in the execution of that treaty created between the contracting parties and France, has now ceased.

'Her Majesty trusts that the union of the principal Powers upon all matters affecting the great interests of Europe will afford a firm security for the maintenance of peace.

'Her Majesty is glad to be able to inform you that, in consequence of the evacuation of Ghiodia by the Persian troops, her majesty has ordered her minister to the Court of Persia to return to Teheran.

'Her Majesty regrets that the negotiations between her plenipotentiaries in China and the Chinese government have not yet been brought to a satisfactory conclusion, and that it has been necessary to call into action the forces which her majesty has sent to the China coast; but her majesty still trusts that the Emperor of China will see the justice of the demands which her majesty's plenipotentiaries have been instructed to make.

'Her Majesty is happy to inform you that the differences which had arisen between Spain and Portugal, about the execution of a treaty concluded by those powers in 1835, for regulating the navigation of the Douro, have been adjusted amicably, and with honour to both parties, by the aid of her majesty's mediation.

'The debt incurred by the Legislature of Upper Canada for the purposes of public works, is a serious obstacle to further improvements which are essential to the prosperity of the united provinces. Her Majesty has authorized the Governor-General to make a communication on the subject to the Council and Assembly of Canada. Her Majesty will direct the papers to be laid before you, and trusts that your earnest attention will be directed to matters so materially affecting the welfare of Canada, and the strength of the empire.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

'We have to assure you that her majesty relies with entire confidence on your loyalty and zeal to make adequate provision for the public service, as well as for the further application of some grants by the last Parliament.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN.

'We are more especially commanded to declare to you that the extraordinary expenses which the events in Canada, China, and the Mediterranean have occasioned; and the necessity of maintaining a force adequate to the protection of our extensive possessions, have made it necessary to consider the means of increasing the public revenue. Her Majesty is anxious that this object should be effected in the manner least burthensome to her people, and it has appeared to her majesty, after full deliberation, that you may at this juncture properly direct your attention to the revision of duties affecting the productions of foreign countries. It will be for you to consider whether some of these duties are not so trifling in amount as to be unproductive to the revenue, whilst they are vexatious to commerce. You may further examine whether the principle of protection, upon which others of these duties are founded, be not carried to an extent injurious alike to the income of the state and the interests of the people.

'Her Majesty is desirous that you should consider the laws which regulate the trade in corn. It will be for you to determine whether these laws do not aggravate the natural fluctuations of supply; whether they do not embarrass trade, derange currency, and by their operation diminish the comfort and increase the privations of the great body of the community.'

'Her Majesty, feeling the deepest sympathy with those of her subjects who are now suffering from distress and want of employment, it is her earnest prayer that all your deliberations may be guided by wisdom, and may conduce to the happiness of her beloved people.'

The Commons then withdrew.

Amongst the deaths we notice the names of Theodore Hook Esq., General Gascoyne, Lieut. Colonel Molineux of the 8th Hussars.—Edward Scriven the historical painter—Vice Admiral Fellowes a Do Wager Countess of Carrick. Dean of Arinago—Sir Henry Hare, Lieut. Colonel John Taylor, W. Lister, M. P. for Bradford, Vice Admiral Sir P. Campbell and Sir T. R. M. Stanley

There is a rumour that Lord Stuart de Ruthven will succeed the Earl of Auckland as Governor General of India.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Captain Charles Elliot, R. N., to be her Majesty's Consul-General to the Republic of Texas.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

RAW SILK.—The China market has rather improved, and prices may be quoted 6l. to 1s. per lb. higher. The stock in the importer's hands is very small, and the imports for the next few months will probably be light. In Bengal there is also an improvement, and the quantity offering for sale at the present rates is very small. The arrivals this month have been only 381 bales; there is, however, a fair supply on the way. Anything good and fine sells currently and at good prices. In the Italian market there has been but little done and at rather lower quotations. The imports are rather light. In Brusses and Persians a fair business has been done; the former may be quoted 6l. to 1s. per lb. higher. The imports of long reel are extremely small. The stock on hand of Persians is rather large.

SATURDAY EVENING, Sept. 4.—The letters by the overland mail being delivered to day, confirming the accounts of 11,000,000 lb. of tea being shipped, and a probability of as much more, has caused a depression in the tea market. Company's consigns have been done at 1s 9d. per lb., and closed on Change at 1s 10d. per lb. money.

CADIZ LIGNUM.—About 1700 chests have been offered at auction, the inferior qualities of which sold from 87s to 90s; fair to good 96s to 99s; and a few lots of blue quill 103s per cwt. Nutmegs, Mace, and Cloves have been inquired for, particularly the former.

AMERICA.

It is settled that M'Leod is to be tried in another county, and the trial will take place at Utica, on 19th September. There appears to be a division of opinion in the public mind as to the correctness of the judges opinion given in the Supreme Court of New York in this case. Many contend that the question should be entirely left to the United States, and several influential papers also avow that doctrine, even in the city of New York itself.

We have news from the United States to the 7th ult. M'Leod's trial is to take place at Utica on the 19th of Sept. Since our last intelligence no new feature in the case has presented itself; the prisoner's counsel are diligently employed in preparing for the trial, and our private letters intimate that M'Leod and his legal advisors are in extreme doubt as to the result. The Canadian papers are silent on this subject, and we may conclude that nothing further can transpire until after the trial. The American people are looking with eager impatience for the finale of the Melbourne Cabinet.

It is said the Hon. Edwards Everett, of Massachusetts, has been nominated by the President as Minister in England; Colonel C. S. Todd as Minister in Russia; and the Hon. Daniel Jenifer, of Maryland, in Austria. The nominations have to be ratified by the Senate. The correspondent of the Morning Chronicle says, 'Mr. Everett will, I think, be quite a favorite in England; he is not only eminent in America as a statesman, but also as an orator and an accomplished scholar.'

An event transpired in the Southern States which, for a few days, excited intense alarm, particularly in Louisiana. It was the discovery of a plot of the negro slaves—extending from Bayou Sara to Natchez, along the Mississippi—to murder their masters. The intended massacre was fortunately prevented by an overseer on the plantation of R. J. Barrow, Esq., at Feliciana, having overheard at night the conversation of the slaves under his care and their intended plans. The ringleaders were immediately arrested.

SPAIN.

The Government has positively enounced its determination to pay off the two years interest due on the 'indemnity bonds,' now amounting to 6,000,000 reals, (60,000l.)

CANADA.

Resignation of the Governor General.—Lord Sydenham leaves Canada this month on his return to England, having resigned his office and the Queen having accepted his resignation.

Some activity was manifested on the British side of the disputed territory. Under the orders of the Governor of New Brunswick, a Mr. Perley had been investigating the state of the territory, and preparations seem to be making for resisting aggression.

CALCUTTA.

EMBARKATION OF THE 14TH MADRAS N. I.—We understand that the Larkins, Elizabeth Aindie, Stalkart, and Maria, are the ships taken up by Government to convey the 14th Madras Native Infantry to Moulinein. The distribution of men and officers in them is stated to be as follows: viz. in the Larkins, 8 officers, 310 men, and 56 camp followers; in the Elizabeth Aindie, 3 officers, 187 men, and 28 followers and in the Maria, 2 officers, 148 men and 11 followers. Colonel Williamson of the 33d M. N. I. goes down in one of the ships. The four companies of the corps which remained at Midnapore, until relieved by the wing of 8th B. N. I. are expected in a few days, and all the stores &c. of the regiment are now on their way up.—Eastern Star, 24th Oct.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Mr. Editor.—Can you tell us wherein lies the point of the joke in the last Canton Register about the Bengal Volunteers and the milk. There must be a joke in it, though it lies too deep for plain matter of fact readers: for no man would tell us seriously, that a body of veterans, picked from the best Bengal Regiments, are sickly for want of milk!

If it be no joke, however, how shameful it is that the Commissariat did not provide a sufficient number of milk Cows for them!

Macao, 9th Dec. 1841.

DOOD.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 11th Dec., 1841.

By the Waterwitch from Calcutta 29th October and Singapore 20th November, a portion of the September Overland Mail has been received, and we have made as many extracts from Calcutta and Singapore papers as our time and limits permitted. The most important feature of English news is the resignation of the ministers, and the accession to power of the Tories, Sir R. Peel being Prime Minister. The address to the Queen was lost in the house of Lords by a majority of 72, and in the Commons of 91, after which Lord John Russell and Lord Melbourne informed the two houses respectively, that the Queen had been graciously pleased to accept of their resignation of office. Among our extracts will be found the newly composed cabinet. The latest accounts from China, received in England, were to the 20th May. Teas had considerably declined, as also Silk. The hostile measures against China are likely to be vigorously pursued by the new Cabinet; Her Majesty's 35th Regiment was to embark immediately, and a steam frigate, the Philo, was also to sail for China. The greatest activity prevailed at the naval depots, 11 ships of the line having been put in commission, and ordered to be ready for sea in the shortest possible time. We regret to observe that mercantile affairs were by no means in satisfactory state, several large failures having occurred in Manchester and Liverpool. H. M. S. Cornwallis, 74, Capt. Richards, and Clio, left Singapore for China on the 16th of last month, and H. M. S. Chameleon, 11, Hunter, arrived in Singapore from Rio Janeiro, was to follow immediately. Neither the Arcturion nor the Medusa steamer had reached Singapore by the last advices, and fears must now be entertained for the safety of both. The Government of India continued shipping off troops and munitions of war to Moulinein, and so strong a force will soon be concentrated there, that it is probable, Tharawaddie will not persevere in his hostile intentions.

We just learn from Hongkong that in consequence of the seizure of Junks in Hongkong roads, when passing through them, bound for Canton, some alarm was felt by the people, that these measures would interfere with their trade to that Island. To allay this alarm, we understand that Capt. Nias, at the request of Mr. Johnston, has issued a proclamation to the people; it being by no means the intention of the British authorities, to molest any individual trading directly to or from the Settlement.

We are equally at a loss with our Correspondent Down to know what is meant by the sickness of the Bengal volunteers at Hongkong being accounted for, in part at least, by the impossibility of obtaining a sufficient supply of milk. It is an argument of our Contemporary intended to prove that the climate of Hongkong is not the cause of the sickness on the island, where during his late visit everything seems to have appeared couleur de rose to him; but, as we are well informed, and it tends to disprove the general healthiness of residents there, at that very time several government officers and others were suffering from fever and ague.

We beg to correct a statement we made last week, when speaking of the scarcity of the circulating medium. The information we then obtained, we believed we might safely trust to, but we have since been informed, upon very good authority, that about 6 or 700,000 dollars, all that was paid in that coin of the Canton ransom money, were really shipped to England per H. M. S. Conway. What led us and our informant into the mistake last week was the circumstance of the balance of the six millions having been kept here, for the purposes of the expedition; but this balance was obtained from the Chinese in bills and other securities, which have since been realised. At the time of the shipment of the above dollars, we learn that the imprudence of such a remittance was pointed out; in a memorial, to Capt. Elliot as H. M. Superintendent of Trade, to whom the already existing scarcity of the circulating coin was pointed out, which would, by such shipment, be so very sensibly diminished as to cause considerable difficulties to the trade; that a remittance of dollars to England would not yield more than 3s. 10d. at the utmost, whilst the British authorities here would have to draw at about 4s. 6d. to 4s. 10d. for their necessities; and that therefore it would be the most beneficial, politically as well as economically, to keep these dollars in this country. Capt. Elliot at the time professed his hearty concurrence in these reasons, and yet gave orders on the same day for the shipment of the dollars to England! This remittance, thus made, contrary to his own reason, is another proof, if there were wanting, how little the public interest was taken into account, when it interfered with other considerations. On this occasion the Captain of H. M. S. Conway, a cousin of the first Lord of the Admiralty and of Capt. Elliot, was to have a handsome freight home, and that the public treasury was a loser of 15 or 20,000 £ by such arrangement, was not taken into account.

By the end of last week about seven Chinese trading vessels had been seized by H. Majesty's squadron in these waters, taken to Hongkong, and condemned as lawful prizes. The cargoes of these vessels were of miscellaneous nature, and of little value with the exception of about 1400 $ found on board of one. We are well aware that war cannot possibly be carried on without inflicting injury; the object of war being so much to distress the enemy as to compel him, through the losses he suffers, and through fear of others still to suffer, to conclude peace. The more energetically therefore warlike measures are pursued, the sooner a settlement of existing differences may be looked for; nor should we be disposed to quarrel with the seizure of small or large Chinese trading vessels in these waters, if these hostile measures were carried on with an impartial hand. But while the property of the peaceful and industrious Chinese is thus made to pay the penalty of their imprudence or weakness, and whilst the Chinese people are thus harassed and injured, the Canton Government is still permitted to recruit its finances from the trade carried on at Whampoa, and to derive the means of fortifying and obstructing the river, of purchasing cannon and small arms from the money paid them by their very enemies. Surely it cannot be supposed that the t-king and destroying a few small trading craft will affect the government; and yet it is with them alone that the English have cause for quarrel. It has hitherto ever been their policy to represent to the people of China that their hostilities were directed against Mandarins only; but how can their present acts be thus understood by the people who must naturally be astonished at seeing themselves and their property the objects of attack, whilst their government is allowed to draw from the hostile strangers its accustomed duties and fees?

We hear it said that after blockade has been once removed, it cannot be lawfully renewed without a special order in council, and that to this fact the port of Canton continuing open is to be attributed. Yet, if such be the case, the late Plenipotentiary, Capt. Elliot, cannot have been aware of the existence of such international law as he most distinctly declares in his Public Notice of 10th June "that any attempt of the Chinese authorities to interfere with or obstruct, the freedom of trade or intercourse with Hongkong, will be answered with a close blockade of the Port of Canton." He therefore certainly contemplated laying on a new blockade under certain contingencies, and Sir Henry Pottinger, by referring Her Majesty's subjects to this very notice of the 10th of June in his Notification of the 12th August, seems to give his sanction to the views of his predecessor.

We believe that the Senior Officer in command of Her Majesty's naval forces here, is acting strictly according to his instructions; but we hope that the expected arrival of the Plenipotentiary at Hongkong may soon take place, and that then an end may be put to the present anomalous state of things, which cannot contribute to the honor of British arms, nor to the humiliation of the enemy.

The French ship of war l'Erigone, 46. Captain Cécille arrived here from Manila the 2d, on Tuesday the 7th instant. When she left no new disturbances among the Indians had occurred.

We have been favored with the loan of a file of Calcutta Englishman to the 9th Oct., from which we have made some extracts, relating to Burmah, which will we believe be read with interest. From Sydney we have, per Anna Isabella, received papers to the 25th October, but they are barren of intelligence of more than local interest.

Fears are entertained for the safety of the Medusa Steamer. She left Manila on the 5th and was spoken on the 11th November by the Autumnus to the northward of Cape Bolino, on her way to China, but has not since been heard of. If, as is supposed, she found herself unable to make head against the strong northerly winds prevailing in the China Sea at this season of the year, she put back for Manila, she ought to have arrived there before the French Frigate left, which she had not; and our only hope is now to hear of her arrival at Singapore, for which she may have steamed in case the violence of the wind had driven her to the leeward of Manila, before she bore up for that port. The loss of such a vessel, so very effective in the warfare in China would be severely felt, the more, as it cannot soon be supplied.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

AUGUST 19.—Earl Spencer moved the address, and went over the various grounds in the speech from the throne. In reviewing our foreign relations, his lordship expressed his satisfaction that the object of the treaty of July had been accomplished. From the exclusion of France, he at first entertained most serious apprehensions, though the whole course of events had since shewn him that he was mistaken, and that Her Majesty's ministers were right. His lordship then proceeded to state his views with respect to the principles which should govern taxation, and advertising to the recommendation in the speech from the throne, to apply the true principles of trade in such a way as to promote the true interests of the nation; his lordship proceeded to examine successively the various part of the Budget. He approved of the alteration of the land duties, which he had himself once proposed, and next alluded to the sugar duties, showing the necessity for an alteration; and that such alteration would not interfere with the noble measure for the abolition of slavery. With respect to the corn laws, the grossest misrepresentations had been spread abroad. He was himself entirely dependent upon agriculture and he could not believe that the price of corn would fall in consequence of the proposed change so as to throw thousands of acres out of cultivation. He had no hesitation in saying that the present corn laws were not protective to the farmer. The principles of free trade would become general; and though it had generally been his fate to be in a minority, he had seen majorities gradually decrease, and he felt confident that these questions of freedom of trade, and of opening an intercourse with other countries to the greatest public degree, could eventually be carried. Opening of the trade would benefit our manufacturers, and would be of great advantage to every interest in the country; but if the house persisted longer in driving capital abroad, they would find it impossible to retrace their steps; the prosperity of the manufacturing portion of the community would be destroyed, and would not return. His lordship concluded by observing, that with most of Her Majesty's ministers he had long been in the habit of acting. He felt confidence in them when they came into office. he felt sanguine as to the policy which they would pursue, and he was glad to say that he felt every confidence in them still. He must add, too, that he felt still as deeply as ever his attachment to the party to which he belonged. Earl Spencer moved an Address echoing the sentiments in the Speech from the Throne.

The Marquis of Clanricarde seconded the address in a speech which went at great length into the question of the Corn-laws, and showed, by an able analysis of the different returns, that the present law was of no benefit to agriculture.

The Earl of Ripon entered on a review of the financial policy of the government, which he contended, exhibited a want of arrangement which was quite unpardonable. Whatever might be his opinion respecting an alteration of the Timber duties the proposed changes in the sugar duties ought not to be adopted; and as for the scheme for altering the Corn-laws it was to introduce free trade and destroy protection. The question for their lordships to consider was, whether they could place confidence in a government introducing such a project. The noble lord concluded by moving an amendment to the following effect:—

"Humbly to represent to Her Majesty that we observe with great concern that the public expenditure has of late in each of several years exceeded the annual income, and that we are convinced of the necessity of adopting measures for the purpose of remedying so great an evil.

"To assure Her Majesty that we are deeply sensible of the importance of these considerations, to which Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to direct our attention in reference to the commerce and revenue of the country, and to the laws which regulate the trade in corn.

"That, in deciding the course which it may be advisable to pursue with reference to such matters, it will be our earnest desire to consult the interest and promote the welfare of all classes of Her Majesty's subjects.

"That we feel it to be our duty humbly to submit to Her Majesty that it is essential to the satisfactory result of our deliberations upon this and other matters of public concern that Her Majesty's government should possess the confidence of this house and of the country, and respectfully to represent to Her Majesty that confidence is not reposed in the present advisers of Her Majesty,

"To assure Her Majesty that in the gracious expression of H. M.'s deep sympathy with those of her subjects who are now suffering from distress and want of employment, we recognise an additional proof of Her Majesty's tender regard for the welfare of her subjects, and that we cordially join in the prayer of Her Majesty that all our deliberations may be guided by wisdom, and may conduce to the happiness of her people.

Earl Fitzwilliam replied at length to the Earl of Ripon, and said that whatever might be the result of that night's debate whatever might be the triumph of noble lords opposite, the time would come when the people of this country would gratefully acknowledge the obligations under which they stood to the Government for having had the courage to bring this great measure before them (cheers). He said, for having had the courage to do so; because, whoever observed the power of the landed interest, must be aware that any Government which ventured to place itself in opposition to them was committing an act of political suicide.

Lord Lyttelton would vote for the address, though he did not approve of the conduct of ministers on all occasions.

Lord Melbourne briefly addressed the house. He designated the speech of Lord Ripon as a sort of omnium gatherum, and said, it presses every thing into his service, as well what we have done last year as during the present; and on such a collection of heterogeneous material he founds a motion quite unprecedented, and certainly never was a motion supported on more weak grounds or more insufficient arguments. Speaking of the corn laws his lordship said, I beg of your lordships to consider what I have always looked upon as the pinch of this question, namely, that these laws have been introduced and supported by those who have a direct interest in maintaining them. They were sanctioned by two houses of legislature, one of which is entirely composed of landlords, and the minority of the other consists of the same class. I say, that is not a state of things which you should look on with complacency. I am not accustomed to speak in the language of dictation or of admonition; but I tell you it is not safe for the governing powers of a country to stand in such a situation as to be open to an imputation of so popular, so plausible, and so specious a nature as that which I have described; and I do assure your lordships that you will find it absolutely necessary to put these laws some day or other on a more reasonable and satisfactory foundation.

The Duke of Wellington said that, in point of fact, after a period of about five years, we have accumulated a debt of seven millions; and there is, moreover, a deficiency in the revenue. It was said that this debt and deficiency are to be attributed to the practice adopted by the government of creating large charges and carrying on extensive operations—of which nobody approved more than he did—but, at the same time, not making proper provision for them. In one case the whole charge has been thrown on the East India Company, and made a debt; in another, the funds of the savings bank have been called on, and their irregular measures have been adopted, in order to provide funds for carrying on plans which were intended to be controlled by Parliament. Besides failing to make due provision by a ways-and-means vote for the charges incurred on account of naval and military operations, the government have thought proper to repeal large sums in taxes, by which means they have reduced the revenue two-millions and a half, in addition to the debt which has been incurred. Now, my lords, said the duke I think all these circumstances, stated with a clearness by my noble friend which I fear I have weakened by recapitulating them, seems to me to justify the vote which he has called on your lordships to give. I have always considered the noble viscount as having rendered the greatest possible service to her Majesty. I have reason to know that her Majesty herself entertains the opinion that the noble viscount did render her the greatest possible service, in making her acquainted with the laws, policy, and customs connected with the government of this country; not only to carry on the service of the country as one of her Majesty's servants, but in giving her Majesty assistance towards making herself acquainted with the laws, policy and system of government of this country, over which she was by right destined to preside—and God long protect her in it (cheers). But I feel that the noble viscount ou— not to have embarked her Majesty in the speech which he advised her to utter in the month of June, and still less in that speech which was delivered from the throne this day (opposition cheers).

The Duke of Richmond was strongly opposed to the proposed alteration of the Corn-laws. No government professing such a change should have the support of the landed interest.

The Marquis of Lansdowne made an able speech in support of the address, and in vindication of the present government.

Lord Coventry supported the amendment; and the Marquis of Northampton the address.

Lord Brougham contended that the result of the late elections was a verdict against ministers but not against an alteration of the Corn-laws or free trade; he rejoiced, however, that they had brought forward the question of timber duties, sugar duties, and the Corn-laws; and would support the address.

The question was then put, and their lordships divided—

Aug. 27.—The Earl of Errol read at the table an answer to the address of the lords.

It gives me satisfaction to find that the House of Lords is deeply sensible of the importance of the considerations to which I directed its attention in reference to the commerce and revenue of the country, especially to the laws which regulate the trade in corn.

In advising this course, I was only actuated by an earnest desire to promote the interests and welfare of all classes of my subjects.

Being always anxious to attend to the advice of my Parliament, I will take into immediate consideration the other important matters contained in your address.

FRANCE.

In France, especially in the south, continued resistance is offered to M. Humann's re survey of the taxes through Le Conseil d'Etat has decided in favour of the legality of the census. The Municipal authorities at Lyons, Marseilles, and Bordeaux, who withdrew their opposition, had their windows smashed. At Toulouse the re-survey was again postponed, waiting the arrival of a considerable military force; and was at length completed under the muzzle of the cannon drawn up in the square. Even at Paris the resolution of the Municipality with respect to the registry of houses and windows which has now been published by the Communes, opposes a serious obstruction to the French Minister. It declares that the Commisaires of the Municipality, attended by fiscal officers as comptrollers, according to the ancient custom, shall make the registry. This is contrary to M. Humann's Order.

The statue of Napoleon was placed at the top of the column of the Grande Armée at Boulogne, on the 15th August. The fêtes which celebrated the event may be said to have commenced on the 13th with some races. On the 14th all was bustle and activity. It had been given out that the King and Marshal Soult would assist in the ceremonies; but the King did not come at all; and the Marshal only came by deputy, sending General Corbier to represent the head of the army, a great officer under Napoleon, and the discoverer of the Pass of the Berezina. Some apprehension was entertained lest the statue should not have been raised in time; for the boisterous weather which prevailed at Boulogne for some days made it a work of difficulty if not of danger to the statue itself, to raise it to its place. However, at eleven o'clock on the night of the 17th, it took its allotted station, in time to receive the homage of the multitude. Before that was achieved, it was discovered that some person, a native of England, it is assumed, had scratched on the forehead the letters 'V. P. W.' which were construed to mean 'Vaincu par Wellington.' The disgraceful act of an individual, though it created some fear that it would breed a general ill-feeling, does not seem to have marred the friendly disposition towards the English which throughout the festivities was testified in the most lively manner. The statue is the work of M. Bosio, who has executed many works of a high character. It is of bronze, and was cast in the year 1840, at Paris, by M. St. Denis; and in December last, at the solemnities of the funeral of Napoleon, it was placed on the bank of the Seine, opposite the Hotel of the Invalides. The statue is clothed in the Imperial robes, such as are to be seen in the engravings and portraits of the original, having the robe studded with stars, &c. The statue holds in one hand a sceptre surmounted by the Imperial eagle; on the head is a crown of laurel. The figure may be sixteen feet high.

SPAIN.

The widow of General Mina has accepted the office of governor of the Queen.

The Manifesto of the Spanish Government, in reply to the allocation of the Pope, has been published. The point at issue is, that the Pope claims to make ecclesiastical appointments, without recognising the Queen. The reply of the Government vindicates the ancient independence of Spain in ecclesiastical politics. This manifesto has been followed by a decree enjoining magistrates and prelates to proceed with rigor against all who may invoke, or execute, or represent as valid, the papal orders contained in the late allocations of the Court of Rome.

The Law authorising the conclusion of a loan of sixty millions of reals had received the sanction of the Regent.

The protest of Queen Christina against her removal from the guardianship of her children, and indirectly against her compulsory resignation of the regency, is said to have created a sensation in the provinces; and even at Madrid a very uneasy feeling prevails. The Government is aware of the fact that distributions of money are made at Barcelona, Valencia, Tarragona, and other places, in order to bring about a rising. The roads in Spain are becoming again infested with robbers and banditti.

The Spanish Government has withdrawn the Isla del Rey, at Port Mahon, from the possession of the French. A shock of an earthquake was felt at 8 o'clock, about half-past ten, in the night of the 7th. Similar shocks were also felt at Cadiz, Puerto de Santa Maria, Xeres de la Fontaine, Ciudad Real, and Malaga.

AMERICA.

A large fire in New York destroyed 14 houses; another at Watertown burnt the almshouse and one of its inmates. A negro has been sentenced to death in New Orleans for having assaulted a white man. Four negroes were executed at St. Louis for robbing and setting fire to a store and murdering two clerks. The bank of Jacksonville, Illinois, was broken open and robbed of 90,000 dollars. Captain G. C. Hunter and Lieut. R. C. Ashton have been dismissed from the United States army by the President for misconduct.—On dit, that several citizens of the south who had gone to India to cultivate cotton for the East India Company, and for individuals, had returned home in consequence of the extreme heat and unhealthiness of the climate. Mr. W. H. Lipscomb and three negroes were killed by lightning on a plantation in Virginia. The barque Rothschild, at New York, took off a wreck, in lat. 46. long. 88, the Captain and crew of the Dutch schooner Voorwaerd from Rotterdam to New York.

Some of the papers say that Captain Drew, who commanded the expedition that cut out the Caroline steamer was on board a steam-packet that put into Odenburgh, on the American shore of the St. Lawrence. The packet left without the circumstance being known; but had it become public, the same papers say that 'Captain Drew would most certainly have been tried for his life, and executed, according to the laws of New York.'

Copious discussion prevailed, owing to a statement affirming that a letter had been received from Rome at the Secretary of State's office stating that Mr. Reese, Roman Catholic Bishop of Michigan, having gone to Rome on ecclesiastical business, was imprisoned by his Holiness the Pope, and is now in 'durance vile' in the 'Eternal City.' The cause of imprisonment is undoubtedly connected with spiritual matters—and it is said that he refuses to resign his bishopric, though ordered by the Pope himself. Be that as it may, as Bishop Reese is a free citizen of the United States, it is contended that his released must be formally demanded and urged, unless he have offended against the temporal laws of Rome; and committed the offence within the Pope's territory.

There is quite a sensation in all parts of the Union, in consequence of an unusually aggravated case of Lynch Law in Kentucky. Two men, named May and Couch, were committed to jail in Grant county, charged with an attempt to murder a Mr. Uterback. A few days afterwards a mob of from 500 to 700 men assembled in an adjoining county, marched into Grant, broke open the prison, and notwithstanding every remonstrance, hung the accused in a neighbouring field. The entire press of the republic is very properly indignant at such a violation of law, justice, and humanity, especially as a fatal affray occurred on the same day in Kentucky, in which a man named Blackley was killed with a bow-knife. The journals called loudly for the only remedy for such crimes, namely the speedy trial and condign punishment of the offenders.

An event transpired in the Southern States which, for a few days, excited intense alarm, particularly in Louisiana. It was the discovery of a plot of the negro slaves—extending from Bayou Sara to Natchez, along the Mississippi—to murder their masters. The intended massacre was fortunately prevented by an overseer on the plantation of R. J. Barrow, Esq., at Feliciana, having overheard at night the conversation of the slaves under his care and their intended plans. The ringleaders were immediately arrested.

Fire on Lake Erie, near Buffalo, when 175 persons fell victims to the devouring elements of fire and water. Only twenty-seven survived to tell the dreadful story. On the fire breaking out, the vessel was sent round, heading to the shore, and the boats (there were three on board) were ordered to be lowered. Two of the boats were lowered, but in consequence of the heavy sea on, and the headway of the vessel, they both swamped as soon as they touched water. The condition of the passengers was awful and appalling. Some were frantic with fear and horror, others plunged headlong madly into the water, others again seized upon anything buoyant upon which they could lay hands. The small boat had been lowered. It was alongside the wheel, with three or four persons in it, when the captain jumped in, and the boat immediately dropped stern and filled with water. In this condition, the boat a mass of fierce fire, and the passengers and crew endeavouring to save themselves by swimming or supporting themselves by whatever they could reach, they were found by the Canton, at about 10 P. M.

For the last few months, about 600 stray Indians, negroes and a few whites, had made their abode near Port Leavenworth, near Arkansas and Missouri frontiers, built a fortress, and committed depredations on the Choctaw nation of Indians all of whom are under the protection of the United States. Three companies of dragoons were sent to disperse or capture these organised marauders but the intrenchments were found too strong to be taken without cannon. A company of infantry and two pieces of artillery were added to the besiegers, who began to batter the fort. The band of desperadoes defended the works for some time, but at length forced in front of their fort, and gave battle. They were charged by the dragoons, great numbers killed, and all the rest captured. A large region of the wilds of the far west was thus freed from a dangerous association.

Colonel Worth feels confident of his ability to put an end to the Florida war by the winter. 'Wild Cat,' a ferocious chief, and fifteen of his family, are said to have surrendered themselves, and consented to emigrate: Seventeen of 'San Jones's' band followed the example.

Adverse from Monte Video are important. The defeat of the Monte-Video by the Buenos-Ayres fleet is fully confirmed; and it is also that Rosas, governor of Buenos Ayres, had captured Lavalle, the insurgent chief who was betrayed by his own men. A mutiny broke out on board the Monte-Video a bark of war Ulysses, commanded by Captain Wilder an American by birth. The Monte-Video general, C. a., quelled it, but not until forty-three lives were lost on both sides. Several of the ringleaders were then tried and shot. Another mutiny broke out on board the Monte Video on brother Riverdale, which was only quelled with the loss of thirty lives—the brig having been set on fire and burnt after the affray. The Senate of Mexico have rejected a bill for a loan of 2,000,000 dollars, to carry on a campaign against Texas. Another minister has come from Texas to Vera Cruz, with the object of negotiating for a recognition of the independence of Texas by Mexico.

LATEST MONEY MARKET AND CITY INTELLIGENCE.

From the Times, September 6.

Saturday evening.—The arrival of the overland mail from India, the intelligence brought by which we were enabled exclusively to lay before the public to-day, has drawn attention once more to the much-talked of letter from Macao of the 27th April. It appears that we employed by far too gentle a term in designating it as a "hoax," which is commonly a self-inflicted wound. The deception intended to produce a laugh only at the expense of those who lend their belief to it; but when the effect comes to be that of abstracting some thousands of pounds from the pockets of one man, and transferring them to the pockets of another man, the matter then assumes a much more serious form, and can only be called fraud, or forgery, or felony, or some equally elegant term borrowed from the nomenclature of Newgate. To make the observations upon it more clear and intelligible, a copy of the fraudulent letter is enclosed:—

"Macao, April 27.

"The Chinese local Government violated the agreement made with Captain Elliot for the renewal of the trade with British subjects. We are all supposed to find that since the first instant not 1,000 chests of tea have found their way out to foreign vessels by smuggling. Until now we, at the worst, had hopes of doing something worthy of notice in that way, but the unexpected and extraordinary (for Chinese) vigilance and activity of the Mandarins and soldiers, especially those lately arrived from the north, have entirely disappointed our hopes as to that channel for the present; as are also the Americans and other neutrals, for our chiefs, of course, will not permit them to trade legitimately, when Britons are prevented. About the 15th a ship arrived from the Emperor, which contained of course, mingled with the usual bloody murder and sudden death, gasconade, &c.) orders to all his officers and others in Canton province, to destroy all teas accumulated there, also rhubarb, and all other articles necessary for English barbarians (silk is probably included); since when we have had proof that the articles are being destroyed to a great extent, probably more than one half of the crop of teas already, especially blacks, and the work is going on.

In the same chop indemnity is promised to parties. Chinese, whose goods are destroyed, and those who hunt out articles were secreted. Also, in the chop, all further political intercourse with the English is interdicted, and the lately appointed commissaire ordered to retire.

Numerous fire vessels and rafts (far more skilfully and boldly managed than last year) have been sent down the river among the shipping by which several English vessels and cargoes have been injured. But as yet no total loss. The chiefs are deliberating about moving the vessels below the second bar into the wider part of the river.

Several extensive fires have occurred at Canton during the month; Hong merchants suffer largely. I hear some of the foreign factories, injured, no doubt by incendiaries.

Ramours have just reached us that several British subjects of note were kidnapped by the Chinese during the night of the 23th; but as we hope they may prove groundless, we forbear naming the parties for the present.

Little or nothing doing south of Foochow in opium.

The point of the fabrication of this letter being fully ascertained by the arrival of the accounts from China by the overland mail from India, published this morning, those persons in the tea trade who have been made the victims of it have come to the determination of sitting the affair thoroughly, so as to discover and expose, and if possible to punish, the authors and all other persons implicated in this fraud. We believe that they do not as yet include in their suspicion the parties who first disseminated this precious piece of "intelligence," and who made loud boast at the time of the extraordinary speed with which they conveyed it to the public. The circumstance was in itself rather a suspicious one, but they are saved by the conviction that they are not clever enough for such an operation, and the worst thing at present left to their charge is ignorance or credulity, which leads them to adopt as truth the most barefaced and palpable lies. This they not only did, but persisted in it after the arrival of the news from China by way of New York, which was obviously genuine, had all but demonstrated the utter worthlessness and fraud of the Macao letter. So active were they further in this creditable vocation of theirs, that they followed up the efforts to give currency to forged news, by attempts to damage the belief of that which was really genuine, in the course of which they quoted the intelligence published in this journal relative to the punishment of Keshen which they stigmatised as untrue, but the veracity of which is now proved.

It is exceedingly amusing to compare the forged news with the true, which we have just received, and to observe how utterly contrary to it the latter is. In that respect nothing could be better contrived for a fraudulent purpose, since the writer knew, or might conjecture, that a large supply of tea was about to be sent to Europe, would make the dealers in it believe, at that very time, that the article had been placed under imperial interdict, and that the whole of the future supply, in all probability, was to be cut off. That the Emperor should destroy the tea of his own subjects, and that at his own expense, was a most splendid discovery, and evidently arose from some false reasoning, that, having destroyed the opium belonging to other people, it might appear plausible that he would be equally ready to sacrifice his own property to inconvenience the English "barbarians." The fabricator of the Macao falsehood was, however, not satisfied with simple assertion, but went into the details of the work of destruction, pointing out that black tea was an article especially doomed. Then came the destruction of rhubarb, and even a hint that silk might be demolished, so anxious was the concoctor to give his tale an appearance of exactness. All these little particulars are remarkably ludicrous, now that the arrival of the papers by the overland mail have upset the whole fabrication, involving every detail in the overthrow. There might, to be sure, be some truth in the assertion that such a small quantity of tea had found its way by smuggling, because the trade being open, there was no necessity for smuggling at all. The less than 1,000 chests that found their way into foreign ships by smuggling, according to the fraudulent letter, stand in forcible contrast with the 11,300,000 lb., which Elliot has shipped, and the additional 11,000,000 lb. expected to be shipped in June. The smugglers in all probability, amid the great abundance of tea, were entirely out of employ. "Our hopes were disappointed," said the letter, of doing anything by the way of smuggling; but luckily it is not the vigilance of the Chinese officers that prevented the use of that "channel," but the large supplies, which were continually pouring out, in defiance of that vigilance, which the letter, with most amusing exactness, ascribed especially to the mandarins and soldiers from the north. The fertile brains of the fabricator, it will be seen, contrived that several extensive fires occurred at Canton during the month, but what says the Canton Press of May 15? That everything remained quiet, and that business was transacting the same as before. Never was a fabrication so totally unfounded. Among all the assertions it might be imagined that some truth might have been stumbled on by accident, but the discrepancy has been carried out to the minutest detail, and the whole train of facts is utterly incompatible with any portion of the forgery.

It is understood that some of those interested in the trade wrote some days back to the editor of the Semaphore of Marseilles, in which journal the account first appeared. He referred them in the first instance to a house in Alexandria which happened however, not to be known to any of the merchants in London who correspond with that place. They then made a second application to the editor of the Semaphore, who replied that he declined giving up the author of the letter, but begged to assure them, at the same time, that the news it contained was "perfectly true." Perhaps, now the Indian mail has passed, this gentleman may condescend either to enlighten them further on this subject, or at least to retract this very bold assertion. With him alone, the explanation, if we are to have any, must rest. Every one is disposed to acquit the publisher of Galignani's Messenger in this matter, as he evidently copied it from the Semaphore, and exercised little or no inquiry into its authenticity.

It ought to be added, that the great partisans of this fraud who tried all they could to damage those who attacked it, have continued their efforts up to yesterday, when they presumed to doubt the news obtained from China by way of the Cape of Good Hope, and especially the important proclamation of Captain Elliot which it contained. That proclamation appears verbatim in the papers received from Canton this morning.

The accounts from Liverpool to-day state that the suspended firm of Messrs Anderson, Garrow and Co. resumed payments yesterday.

CALCUTTA.

MR. WILLIAMS AND CAPTAIN DUNBAR.

Our readers may remember a late discussion in which we took part, relative to the affray on board the Cowasjee Family in which Mr. Williams was shot by his commander Captain Dunbar. The subject had been nearly forgotten, when the Hurkar published an explanatory letter from Captain D., which went to fix his officer with unprovoked mutiny and attempted murder, and a letter was appended from the accused party as corroborating the statement. In this letter Mr. Williams stated that he forgave Captain Dunbar, which we did not hold to be exactly the sort of corroboration to satisfy common sense people. We expressed our disbelief of the version given, not founding it more on this letter than on the extravagant improbabilities disclosed by the accuser: we, however, forbore from saying it was untrue, remarking that when we saw a clear confession of his guilt from Mr. Williams, we should admit and call Mr. Williams a villain. Since we wrote last Mr. W. has returned to Calcutta, and in justice to ourselves we are bound to resume the subject. Instead of confirming Captain Dunbar's statement, Mr. Williams substantially denies the whole of it, except the injury he received, and which confined him to an hospital more than an hundred days. We are not now going to act the part of an advocate, any more than we have hitherto done: we commented on the one statement, we say what the answer is—that it is untrue—and as our judgment assists us Mr. Williams is corroborated by the following letters. The first is presumptive evidence in his favour, the prima facie case being very strong that an attentive and indefatigable officer in 1836, was not a mutineer who strove to be a murderer in 1840. Here is a testimonial from his previous Captain.

TO MR. WILLIAMS.

MY DEAR SIR,—Should this be of any service to you, I have much pleasure in stating that during the time you have been chief officer of the Cowasjee Family under my command, that your conduct was, always attentive, and indefatigable in your duty.

You have my best wishes for your future prosperity, and at any time you can refer to me, if required.

I remain, Dear Sir, yours truly,

B. W. STANLEY.

Late Commander, Cowasjee Family,
Calcutta, 28th August, 1839.

And here is one, somewhat more important, from his then (when the affair happened) and present employer!—

Calcutta, 28th December, 1840.

MR. N. WILLIAMS.

Late Chief of the Cowasjee Family.

DEAR SIR,—I have received your letter of this date, and very much regret the circumstance which led to your removal from your late employ, and I have the confidence so assert that no blame is attached to you in the disturbance alluded to, and it will indeed afford me great pleasure to hear of your speedy employment again, and should a vacancy occur in my employ I shall give you the preference.

Yours faithfully,

RUSTOMJEE COWASJEE.

And Rustomjee Cowasjee did put him into his present situation, chief officer of the Clipper Syph. We think it right to say, that we have in our possession the highest testimonials to Mr. Williams's character from his various captains during the last ten years. He may nevertheless have mutinized and attempted to commit murder on his Captain; only it is common charity to require evidence before we believe it.—Calcutta Star, September 18.

THE COMPANY'S OPIUM SALES.

We are glad to hear that a change for the better is about to take place in the Company's opium sales for the ensuing season. We have not lately heard any of those complaints which at one time were so prevalent, and the truth of some of which was established by the dismissal of one of the assistants in the Salt and Opium department, but as a general principle, we think it must be admitted, that the most open and public way of conducting the sales is the best, both for the Government and for the public. We have therefore, heard with much satisfaction, that the indefatigable Secretary of the Board, Mr. Henry Torrens, has convinced the Government that it will be for their interest to trust the sales to a public auctioneer, instead of conducting them through their own servant, Messrs Mackenzie, Lyall & Co., who have so long gratuitously afforded the use of their sale room, are in future to be the auctioneers, and we understand that the convenience of the sale attending public will be in future as much attended to by them as it has hitherto been neglected by the Board. We hear further that there was some little difficulty in persuading the Government, that it is cheaper to pay the fair remuneration for work than have it done for the honor and glory of serving them, and that this point was effected by bringing proof that since they had sent their refuse copper from the Mint to a public auction, they had gained not less than Co's Rs 22,000, over the produce of similar sales held within the Mint walls under the management of their own native establishment.—Calcutta Englishman Sept. 24.

HONG MERCHANTS DEBTS.

Macao, 29th June, 1841.

To their Excellencies

Commodore Sir J. J. Gordon Bremer, C. B. K. C. H. and Captain Charles Elliot, R. N., H. M.'s Plenipotentiaries.

Gentlemen.—We the undersigned Creditors of various Bankrupt Hong in Canton, understanding that your Excellencies are about to proceed to the Northward in furtherance of the objects of the Expedition, take the liberty of soliciting attention to a subject of deep importance.

Your Excellencies are no doubt aware, that according to the ancient regulations at the Port of Canton, the Chinese Government (thru' the Cohong, or body of Chinese Merchants alone permitted to carry on Foreign trade) is responsible for all debts incurred by say of the Hong Merchants to Foreigners.

When Hingtai, and some others of the Hong became bankrupt, application was made to the Government for settlement according to custom, but tho' the viceroy declared that the debts should be paid to the uttermost farthing the powerless position we were then in, prevented our obtaining payment of our claims otherwise than by consenting to receive instalments payable within a certain number of years terminating in 1840, and this arrangement was sanctioned by the Chinese Provincial Government.

These dividends have hitherto been paid as they fell due, and if events had not lately taken place to render the continuance of this regularity more than doubtful we should not have considered ourselves under the necessity of addressing your Excellencies.

The circumstances we allude to as seriously damaging the security of the Creditors, and their chances of ultimate payment, are—

1st. The heavy sum lately exacted at Canton, a large portion of which was notoriously, extorted from the Hong Merchants by the Chinese Authorities; and,

2nd. The proposed British settlement at Hong-Kong, the principal object of which we understand to be the emancipation of the trade from the controul of the Cohong (whose sole means of meeting their engagements being the power they have hitherto possessed of taxing, to an unlimited extent, the Foreign trade the certain consequences of these changes will be the total inability of the Cohong to make their regular payments.

We therefore, with confidence appeal to your Excellencies to make such arrangements with the imperial Government as may, in your opinion, appear most effectual to secure the prompt payment of our heavy claims.

We have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,

Your Excellencies,

Most obedt. humble servants, and others, H. M. subjects, Macao.

Gentlemen.—In reply to your letter of the 29th ulto. we have the honor to acquaint you that Her Majesty's Government has directed our particular attention to its important subject, and you may rest assured, that it shall not be lost sight of at the period of any general arrangement with the Chinese Government.

We have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

AND SHIPMATES,

AS A TRIBUTE OF

RESPECT TO HIS MEMORY.

Canton Register, 14th December.

We perform a melancholy duty in publishing the names of the officers of the squadron who have subscribed to defray the expense of erecting a monument to the memory of the late gallant and lamented Lieut. E. Fitzgerald of H. M.'s Ship Modeste, Capt. Harry Eyres. We visited the burial ground on Friday last for the purpose of viewing this monument of military desert, respect, and affection. The choice of the design and the details of the erection have been left to the vigilant care of Doctor Allan, at present of the naval hospital in Macao; and that gentleman has fulfilled his melancholy yet grateful task, well. The design of the monument is chaste, and the proportions beautiful; it is a slender square pillar on a double base, surmounted by a funeral urn, each side having been slightly channelled. It is placed close to that of Capt. Lord John Churchill, and is as pleasing to the eye of taste as any other in the cemetery.

There is a tear for all that die;

A monument o'er the humblest grave;

But nations swell the funeral cry,

And triumph weeps above the brave.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 18th Dec., 1841.

Many are apparently the causes of the sudden and almost total disappearance of chopped dollars, and taking them altogether we fear that the scarcity will continue, and that in a very short time a total revolution will be produced in the circulating medium hitherto employed in the foreign trade. The whole amount of Spanish chopped dollars formerly required and in use for the trade at Canton, is by well informed persons supposed not to have exceeded 4,000,000 dollars; the wear and tear on these by the practice of chopping, or stamping, must have been very great, and occasional shipments of them and after they had been reduced to small pieces by this practice, still more reduced their quantity, while the coinage of that dollar having ceased now just 25 years since, the imports for many years have been small, and lately ceased altogether. The ill-judged shipment by Capt. Elliot of about 700,000 of the Canton ransom money to England has reduced the already scarce currency by perhaps one fourth, while the altered circumstances of the trade have rendered an increased circulation necessary. Before Lin's appearance at Canton, the whole foreign trade was confined to Canton; in the settlement of accounts, transfers from one to the other made the scarcity of the currency less sensible; the sums which were every year sent into the two districts found their way back to Canton from the Coast in payment for Opium, and thus with occasional additions by importation, there was little difficulty experienced. But since the reopening of the trade, whilst, as already stated, the quantity has been so much diminished, and is from the stated causes daily diminishing, it is required to suffice for the trade of three places; Canton, Macao, and Hongkong. Neither of these, under the present circumstances of transition, afford the facilities Canton formerly did for the settlement of accounts; hence a greater number of Dollars is required. The great expenses of the British Government, at Hongkong and elsewhere, hitherto chiefly paid in Spanish dollars, have also diverted these into other than the accustomed channels, from whence they may but slowly, if at all, find their way back to the seats of trade.

Although the real and daily proceeding distinction of Spanish dollars and their being no longer imported, may be considered as by far the principal causes of their present scarcity, yet there are no doubt others contributing to its being so suddenly felt. The war now carrying on against the three maritime provinces of Canton, Fokien and Che-keang, and its consequent disorders, make this coin, which has long had the preference for circulation over the large and unwieldy sycee in ingots of 90 Taels weight, by far a more desirable investment, particularly for people of small means, for the purposes of hiding; and we suspect that many of the dollars are thus withdrawn from circulation; for although in the exchange of weight for weight, Sycee as being of purer standard has always in foreign commerce born a premium of from 4 to 6 per Cent, it is now of exceedingly difficult sale at par or even at a discount, and the fact that no dollars are now any longer to be obtained from the Coast for Opium, but Sycee or gold only, supports this supposition. We confess that there seems some difficulty to reconcile this opinion with the circumstance that gold is now more freely brought forward in the north than formerly; and yet it is so much easier to hide than even silver dollars. This however is the case, but it is again on the other hand in great demand here, and whilst during the four years of 1836 to 1839 inclusive, its price ranged from 23.50 to 28.75 per Tael, it is now bought up at 26.5.

It is also possible, though not perhaps very probable, that some of the large capitalists in Canton may have withdrawn large quantities of dollars on speculation; nor may we altogether lose sight of the circumstance of many of the smaller tradesmen, being in possession of small sums, the value of which they perceive, to be daily augmenting, may fear to diminish themselves of so necessary an article which they may not be able to replace at a future time. The time for the first settlement of accounts, and the Chinese New Year are also near at hand, and may have their influence.

Under these circumstances, it might be naturally expected that the Mexican coin, of equal value with the so-called Spanish dollar, would force itself into circulation; but all the attempts hitherto made, have failed. Formerly, at Canton, they were generally taken by the Chinese at about 3 per Cent discount; it is now extremely difficult there to pass them off in payment of account at even seven per Cent, and the dollars, without entering into circulation, find their way again into the hands of foreigners for re-shipment to foreign parts. However, the necessity for a circulating medium, to replace that which is every day becoming more extinct, is pressing, and however fond the Chinese may be of cherishing old prejudices, they are shrewd enough soon to find out that in real value the new dollar is equal to the old; and that point once generally established, we suppose prejudice must at length yield to necessity and reason. Foreign merchants may, we think, by exercising some degree of firmness, force upon their Chinese customers the Mexican dollar, and their use will soon familiarize them. In Chusan last year, the Bengal Rupee, although quite a new coin to them, soon found currency at its intrinsic value, and none so eager as the Chinese to possess themselves of them.

Among the extracts of the latest intelligence from England which we gave last week, our readers will have noticed the appointment of our late Plenipotentiary, Capt. Charles Elliot, to be Consul General at Tientsin. It is not likely that this new appointment was given as a reward for Capt. Elliot's services in China, nor is it in itself very valuable as an enolument, except perhaps that the salary usually paid to Consul Generals, be in this instance increased.

ed, the office probably also comprising diplomatic functions. If it is intended, as some suppose, that Capt. Elliot should proceed to Texas direct from the Mediterranean, the suspicion that the late Ministers wished, by preventing Capt. Elliot's return, to stifle enquiry as to the instructions given to him, and to remove an awkward witness, naturally arises; but, it being not at all improbable that the appointment will be annulled by the present Cabinet, this end will not be attained, and some hope is therefore left that full evidence will appear before the public what share the Ministry had in Captain Elliot's signal failure in his mission in China, what part of it may be attributed to the latter. Such disclosures might possibly shift a part of the incapacity of which Capt. Elliot is accused, to Lord Palmerston; although we have reason to believe that some of Capt. Elliot's most important measures, such as the treaty of Chuenpee, and evacuation of Hongkong were altogether contrary to the spirit of his instructions.

H. M. S. Clio arrived on Monday last from Singapore, as it was said, in a sinking state from having struck on a rock (not laid down in any chart) near the island of Potoi at the entrance to the river. We are glad however to learn that the leak was not so serious as at first represented, and that on Wednesday last the Clio was enabled to set sail for Hongkong. At the time she struck she was going at the rate of 9 knots, and her escape is therefore almost miraculous; she having only damaged her forefoot. When the news of the disaster reached here, the Governor of Macao promptly sent the harbour master to conduct the Clio to the Tyne, and Captain Cecilie, commanding the French Frigate Erigone, also kindly offered his assistance.

H. M. S. Nimrod returned from the Broadway, where she was stationed during the last two or three weeks, on Tuesday last, and the following day set sail for Hongkong, the Clio in company. The Nimrod has not made any prizes of Chinese trading vessels, we hear because most of them had certificates from British merchants stating the goods on board to be British property. We do not regret the inactivity of the Nimrod, but we cannot understand why the orders understood to be given by the Admiral should be thus partially only carried into effect. For while all the vessels in the Broadway escaped seizure, a few others, in and near Hongkong, were taken, condemned, and sold for, we hear it said, about $6 or 7000. We can only repeat what we said on this subject last week, that these seizures, whilst the port of Canton remains open to trade, cannot possibly annoy or distress the Chinese government, and can only serve to harass the peaceable people, whom we have hitherto professed to protect, our quarrel being only with the Mandarins.

"THE ARDASER DEPARTED.—Left Singapore November 8; calm, anchored; noon on the 9th passed Pedra Branca; entered Palawan passage on the 9th; wind shifted to the eastward; determined to try the Chinasea; passed Palo Sapato on the 11th with a S. W. gale; 13th wind shifted to the northward; prepared for a gale; 14th and 15th fine northerly winds and clear weather. At midnight on the 16th, being then in lat. 14° 30' long. 1° 8' 0", the barometer fell from 30 to 29. Sent down top gallant yards, close-reefed and furlled the topsails, reefed and furlled the main sail. At 3 a. m. blowing a hurricane from the northward; furlled the foresail; spanker blown away; sea making a breach over all; 8 a. m. clouds rolling on, and the wind like the noise of thunder; sea confused and running mountains high; hove the ship to under bare poles; 9 a. m. thrown on our beam-ends, shipstiff fast; put the helm up which she refused; little after 9 cut away the masts, and ship righted, sea at the time nearly swallowing us up; but the ship did not make an inch of water. Now under jury-masts and hope to make Manila, as wind has been from the westward for 3 days. Cabin filled with water, letters, chronometers sextants, &c., all destroyed; cargo all right. Ardaser, at Sea lat. 16° 40', long. 117° 15'.—Canton Register, 14th Dec. The letter from which the above is extract, was brought here by the Portuguese Brig Genovese, and is dated the 21st November.

We beg to correct an unintentional error we committed in our shipping intelligence on Saturday last, when as passenger by the French Frigate Erigone we stated Colonel de Jancigny to be Envoys from the King of the French to the Court of Peking. Colonel A. de Jancigny, Chevalier of the legion of honor, is merely in charge of a commercial mission from the French Government to Eastern Asia.

We learn that the greatest activity prevails among the Chinese, in fortifying, and still more obstructing, the river between Whampoa and Canton. The Hay list (now stationed we believe somewhere near Lintin) was fired at from a fort at Tonkoo not many days ago, and it is said the fort has been destroyed in consequence.

SEIZURE OF ARMS.—The Salopian, chiefly laden with government stores from Singapore, arrived here some weeks since; and proceeded forthwith to Hongkong, where her Capt. immediately denounced having on board 800 muskets, 9 guns, and some shot, without licence, although regularly entered on the Manifest. The arms and ammunition were seized, but in consideration of Capt. Bell having himself given the information, and having been under the impression when taking the arms on board, of not having acted contrary to law, the fine of $100 Rupees thereby incurred, has been remitted and other unpleasant consequences to his ship avoided; for, we believe, information had already been given to H. M. officers in these roads of the existence of the arms, and had the Salopian not set sail immediately for Hongkong, she would have had a visit from them.

TURKEY.
(From the Gallivan's Messenger, Aug. 26.)
The following from Constantinople of the 31 instant is given by the Oriental Observer:—
"The government steamer Pekin Shenkai arrived here on 29th ultimo bringing the welcome intelligence of the termination of the Candian insurrection without further bloodshed. The rebels had accepted the amnesty offered to them by the Captain Pacha, and had surrendered to his Excellency Mustapha Pacha. Some of the most guilty have effected their escape by an outlet, perhaps negligently left open for that purpose, whilst the mission of the rest was unaccompanied by the slightest disorder. Tahiy Pacha, whom his enemies delighted to depict as the most sanguinary and merciless of men, has set the world an example of moderation and lenity, which must sadly confound the detractors of that eminent commander. Mustapha Pacha also kept his troops in admirable discipline; in fine, a handful of Greeks, whom the Turks could at any time have crushed to atoms, have been brought back within the pale of order and obedience without having been eaten up by 'barbaric cannibals.'—By the submission of the insurgents, the Ottoman Empire is restored to a state of tranquillity more complete than it has at any time enjoyed during the last two-and-twenty years, and it will be in vain that the lovers of revolution renew their efforts to provoke fresh disorders of a nature to endanger the existence of the Empire.—Said Bey and Sami Bey continue to be the objects of the most delicate attention here. The Sultan, in order to give the Pacha of Egypt a fresh proof of his desire to continue the good understanding at present existing between him and his favoured vassal, has voluntarily diminished the amount of tribute, to come an annuity from Egypt, to the sum of thirty millions of piastres, or about £275,000, which is certainly a very low figure considering the productiveness of the banks of the Nile, and the unbounded ability of the Pacha to pay a much heavier sum, had it been insisted upon. The Egyptian visitors went to the Sublime Porte on the 28th ultimo to return thanks for this new boon. In the evening they dined with H. E. Said Mohib Effendi, the Muteshar of the Grand Vizier. Yesterday the Vizier himself entertained them. On Saturday last the Sultan attended the general Council held on that day at the Porte, and remained for nearly two hours to witness the mode of transacting business there.—Sir John McNeill proceeded for Trebizonde, on the 28th ultimo in the Polyphemus. Major Farrant, who arrived here a few days before to meet him, accompanied his Excellency. The second son of the late Sir Walter Scott, attached to the embassy, was also of the party. Sir William Symonds went too, and after leaving Sir John McNeill at Trebizonde, he will repair to Odessa, there perform his quarantine, and subsequently visit the naval establishments of the Russian government in the Black Sea. The Persian Ambassador dined with Sir John on board the steamer on the day she set out. Colonel Barnett will be accompanied by J. H. Drummond Hay, Esq. (an accomplished Arabic scholar), on behalf of the Embassy here. Nothing further in the way of news from Persia. Yesterday Mr. Turoff, the Russian minister, had an interview with Rifaat Pacha at his Excellency's house, as had Baron Sturmer, the Austrian Ambassador, and Mr. Christides, the late Greek Ambassador here, who is to set out for Athens on the 7th inst by the French steamer. —On Friday last Pera was thrown into a dreadful state of alarm by the news that plague cases had occurred at the convent of Terra Santa, situated almost in its centre. Three Catholic priests lately arrived there from Beyrout—one of them died in the quarantine, of a disorder supposed not to be plague; his companions after the usual term of isolation, were admitted to paritane, and all was well; but it appears that the quarantine guardians had neglected to purify one seized by a malady which was pronounced to be pestilential! He was in the evening transported to Leander's Tower, under proper care, and the severest sanitary precautions having been adopted at the convent of Terra Santa, the evil appears fortunately to have been nipped in the bud. We have, however, a font bill of health for 15 days, and if nothing in the meantime happens to prolong it, there will be 15 days more of a suspected bill, after which, it is hoped, we shall once more be pure again. In the meanwhile, many travellers are stopped—Reports state there has been a great deal of fighting lately in Eastern Candaria, between the Russian army and the Circassians under the celebrated Shamsh Bey, the chief of Darchestan, to whose forces were united those of Great Kabarda, the Circassians here assert, that their countrymen were completely victorious. Little Kabarda is now united with the Abasaka and both have been un molested this year. The 17th ult. was an oppressively hot day here. The thermometer rose to 97 deg. of Fahrenheit, and it is wind, which was from the S. W. was quite scorching. In the evening it fell calm, and lightning was playing about in all directions; the air smelt as if it came from a heated charnel house. About 9 o'clock, without the slightest warning, a squall burst upon us like a clap of thunder—clouds of dust, stones, tiles and the branches of trees swept past with fearful rapidity, the houses were shaken to their foundation, and we had truly to use an Eastern expression "a sample of the last day." Most fortunately this took place at night, or the loss of human life would have been dreadful. As it was, a good deal of damage occurred among the shipping and some few persons perished. Two English medical gentlemen who were at Therapia had a narrow escape. They had stepped into a small kaick just before the squall set in and were about to proceed down the Bosphorus, when a friend prevailed on them to come ashore for a few moments. No sooner had they put foot on terra firma, than the sea war in such a boiling state that no kaick could have lived in it for an instant. The Magicienne and Polyphemus each lost an anchor, and the well known Sery Perona was, they say, damaged to the extent of near £600.

NO CHANGE IN THE CORN LAWS.
(From the Morning Post, August 22.)

We venture confidently to assert, on behalf of the Conservative party, and emphatically on behalf of their eminent leader, who fills his distinguished position in virtue of the known coincidence of his sentiments with the predominant opinion of the body, on this most important of all national questions, that no alteration of the law for the protection of British agriculture will be proposed, or considered, or tolerated by them, or by him, that indicates, however slightly, the purpose, or tends, however remotely, in the effect, of lowering the degree, or impairing the substance of that protection which the agricultural interest now enjoy, and which no section of genuine and sincere Conservatives regards as excessive.

SINGAPORE.
PIRATES ON THE COAST OF BORNEO.—By arrivals during the week from the Coast of Borneo, we learn that the Lanoon Pirates are still in great force in that quarter, plundering the trade, ravaging villages and islands on the Coast, and committing every species of devastation. One of their most recent exploits is an attack on the Island of Serakassan—where Mr. GILL, the chief mate of the Sultana was so long detained on his voyage over from Borneo Proper—on the lower part of which they have established themselves for the present, after driving away the inhabitants. The island abounds in Coconut and Fruit Trees, with the oil manufactured from the former of which the inhabitants carried on a trade in exchange for rice. These plantations, among other ravages, the pirates were cutting down, and of course intercepted all the supplies destined for the consumption of the inhabitants, so that these poor islanders ran the risk of being starved unless some assistance reach them in season. It unfortunately happens that at the present time the hostilities on the Coast of China, and the menacing aspect of affairs in Burmah, of which intelligence has been received here within these few days, monopolize the employment of our naval means in these seas, so that even our Straits steamer has been withdrawn from the service of the local authorities, and despatched to Malacca. The Coast of Borneo belongs more properly to the guardianship of our Dutch neighbours, where they have several settlements—but it is not to the credit of a naval power like England, that a fleet of 20 pirate prahus should have been ravaging the coasts and islands within three or four days sail of this settlement, for many months past.—Singapore Free Press, 4th November.

BATAVIA.—By the arrivals from Java during the week, we have received Batavia letters to the 30 ultimo, which report the loss of the Dutch Brig De Koek from Manila on one of the 7 thousand Islands in the vicinity of Batavia roadstead. The following account of this occurrence is taken from the Java'sche Courant.

THE CANTON PRESS.

"The Dutch merchant brig De Kock, Capt. Willems, with a cargo on board from Manila and Macao, has been wrecked on the North East side of the Agoutien Islands.

"The Agents of the vessel, and the owners of the cargo on board, having applied to the marine department for assistance, H. M. Steamer Hecla, Lieutenant B. H. Staring, Commander, was immediately despatched, and it is to be ascribed to his unwearied exertions, seconded by those of the officers and crew of the Steamer, that a considerable part of the cargo has been saved, and landed at the Island of Ouras—but notwithstanding that the utmost exertions were made to get the brig afloat, Lieut. Staring found it impossible to succeed, she having already filled with water.

"Although the crew have all been fortunately saved, the Captain has received some internal injury, from the helm falling over while he was standing by it."

The Java Courier of the 30th October, contains the following Proclamation of the Batavia authorities, prohibiting the importation of Opium in Batavia, except for account of the government:—

PROCLAMATION.

For and in the name of the King.

The Vice-President Acting Governor General of Netherlands India.

The Council of Netherlands India being heard, it is made known, to all who shall see, hear or read this:

That by a Resolution (Resolutie) passed this day it is thought fit and been determined, to prohibit the importation of Opium into Java and Malacca, otherwise than for account and behalf of the government and that no one may pretend ignorance this shall be published and placarded in the Dutch, Native, and Chinese languages, where the same is usually done.

It is further ordered and commanded that all Superior and inferior Boards and Officers, as far as it may concern each; do act and officiate, to see the strict performance hereof observed, without any command or regard to persons.

Given at Batavia 27th October 1841.

P. MERKUS.

By order of the Vice-President, Acting Governor General of Netherlands India.

S. VESSCHAR,

Acting General Secretary.

What has given rise to this prohibition is not stated; but it does not appear to be regarded as of much consequence in Java, where, as the law formerly stood, no Opium could be introduced except for sale to the government Opium-former.

Our letters do not report any recent transactions in produce of any importance. Sugars were on the decline; more particularly after the Report had reached of the July sales in Holland, showing that the Government had not on the average netted above £7.86 per ton, on what they had shipped through the Trading Association or Maatschappij,—a price which did not return a prime cost to Government. This is a loss which the Government finds itself under the necessity of making up to what with its entanglements with the Maatschappij, through the heavy debt it has incurred to that Body, and with the large amount of tonnage which has been built on the faith of the existing system, where the sales of Sugar, in open market, would speedily drive out of employment. Other causes also contribute to perpetuate this system, as it seems that from the highest functionaries of state downwards, there is scarcely an influential person in Holland, who has not a share in the Maatschappij shipping interest, and they of course strain every nerve to maintain at the present rates of profit the capital they have thus invested.—Sing. Free Press, 18th November.

RANGOON.

THE ARRIVAL OF THARRAWADDY.

From the Maulmein Chronicle Oct. 3

The late arrivals from Rangoon bring accounts of the landing at that place of the King and his Court, and a grand affair it must have been. At 10 A. M. on the 26th instant, the ex-king, being in charge of the Prince of Protie, reached the old wharf at Rangoon in a boat, something like hudgegrog, the house on which was painted white with gilt mouldings. He was accompanied by his daughter, a young lady now aged 16 and one of his wives, known as the Donabue Queen.

At 4 P. M. of the same day, the floating palace conveying his majesty was seen rounding the point, making way against a strong flood tide, with the assistance of numerous war-boats. About six his majesty landed on the new wharf prepared for him, where he remained for the night in the bamboo residence, which was raised like magic during the day for the purpose. At about half past seven, the ex-king landed at the old wharf and was conveyed in a gilt palanquin to the residence prepared for him, the ladies of his family who accompanied him, following on foot, lighted by lanterns. There were several elephants in attendance.

On the following morning the grand procession marched on the new road to the palace. Their majesties were conveyed in a splendid car, having several carriages and gilt vehicles following, filled with the ladies of the Court, many of whom also followed on foot. The road was lined on both sides with troops from the landing place to within pistol shot of the palace, all of them fine looking men and extremely well armed. Six elephants preceded the King, each being accompanied by 100 musketeers, 50 spearmen, and 20 men bearing banners and gilt standards. The whole affair is said to have been imposing in its way. We doubt whether any so grand a spectacle has been ever before exhibited in the country. The question naturally springs up what is the meaning of it? why is his majesty come down in this grand armed style? No one appears able to answer it.

There are various reports current relative to the number of men the King has brought down with him. It is generally supposed he has about 15,000 with him at Rangoon, and it is said he has 50,000 in reserve at Sarawah; but this is all conjecture. We suspect, ourselves, that all the numbers we have ever heard assigned have been sadly exaggerated. His majesty's artillery seems, from all accounts, to be far more complete and formidable than was supposed. It is said he has brought with him near 100 pieces of field artillery, the majority of them well mounted and fit for service. It is not said who are engaged to work these guns or how they are to be dragged about, whether by elephants, bullocks, or ponies. The part of the armament which appears to have excited the greatest interest and curiosity among the natives, is the vessels and gun-boats. The latter are described as ranging from 30 to 70 tons, flat bottomed, pulling lots of oars, but unsupplied with either masts or guns. It is difficult to divine the motive for bringing such things down, and causing many more to be built, as we hear in the case. One would almost imagine his majesty contemplated forming a navy. If so, he is rather late in the day, and will not, we fear, be very well seconded by the nautical propensities of his subjects.

There are, of course, numerous reports as to what is about to be done in this direction by the King. One day we have confident reports of the authorities at Martaban being displaced, and the next we hear that Soay Ya, the Bileng man's son, is high in favor with the king and about to come from Rangoon to Martaban in command of some picked corps of the royal army; but we can learn nothing decisive on this subject beyond the fact that no troops have yet crossed the Mittang en route to Bileng and Martaban. At the latter place, a few days ago, all the houses outside the walls of the new stockade were pulled down and the owners ordered to remove them inside. We are not aware whether any reason was assigned for this, nor is it easy to assign any. The number of men at Martaban is said to be very considerably less than it was some time ago, and the fortifications there have of late proceeded languidly. There are said, however, to be parties out in the jungle, clearing roads from Bileng to different points on the river.

Since writing the above a day's later intelligence has been received from Rangoon, representing the place to be full to overflow of troops. His majesty and his sons were said to be winning golden opinions from all by their affability and liberal allowance of puaia, dances, fighting, wrestling, &c. As nothing appears to have been officially announced as to the object of this visit or its duration, reports, of course, are rife on those subjects, and probably one half of them are manufactured here. We have heard, however, people from Rangoon say that so inconsistent, absurd, and contradictory are the reports in circulation at the place, that it is perhaps easier to form an opinion on the probable course of events here than there.—Sing. Free Press, 25th November.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 25th Dec., 1841.

By the Sir Herbert Compton, arrived the night of the 23d, advices from Bombay to 28th October and from Singapore of 29th November have been received. We are in possession of Bombay papers to the 28th Oct., and of the Sing. Free Press of 25th Nov., and have from the latter extracted an account of the entry into Rangoon of Tharrawaddy. The intentions of that Monarch continue to be unknown. From Calcutta no later dates than those per Water Witch have come to hand.

By H. M. Troopship Jupiler, which arrived at Hongkong on the 17th inst., letters from Chusan of the 9th and from Amoy of the 15th December have been received. Major General Sir Hugh Gough's headquarters were at Ningpo, and no move upon Hangchow had been made, nor seems it for the present to be contemplated, but it was said that it was not unlikely Ningpo would be evacuated by the British forces, who would fall back on Chin-hae, and there remain in winter-quarters. No communication whatever had been received from the Chinese authorities and the bearer of a despatch that had been sent to Hangchow foo, by Sir Henry Pottinger, containing, it is said, Lord Palmerston's letter to the Chinese Government, has been taken and imprisoned by the Chinese. The ransom money demanded for the city of Ningpo was not forthcoming, nor was there any probability of its being obtained. The copper seized at Chin-hae and Ningpo, about 170 tons weight, and a large number of heavy brass and copper guns were being shipped at Chin-hae into transports for Calcutta, and two Carpoes of sugar, we know not where seized, laden on transports were to be sent to Hongkong, there to be sold. Provisions at Ningpo, Chin-hae, and Chusan were cheap and plentiful. At the latter place the inhabitants show less reluctance than last year to live under British sway, and the town of Chin-hae is full of inhabitants who keep the place well supplied with everything necessary. It appears that the island begins to redeem its character as to climate, the troops there being in perfect health.

Letters we have seen from Ningpo, dated the 24 of this month, state that Keshen had been sent to Hangchow-foo, without title or avowal, to enter into negotiations with Sir Henry. Upon his future success, it will we suppose depend whether the sentence of banishment pronounced against him is to be carried into effect or not. (Accounts from Canton state that the Peking Government have sent after him to interrupt his progress to Hangchow, and that, after all, he is to be sent forthwith to Eto.) The Ningpo letters state that his foster brother Yih-king, the present Generalissimo and Imperial Commissioner at Hangchow foo, stands securely for him. Yih-king is cousin-german of Yih-shan the rebel quelling tartar of Canton celebrity, and is now on his way to Chekeang Province, accompanied, it is said by Muhchang, prime minister, who was last year degraded three steps for having taken the part of Keshen, by several other Commissioners, generals, mandarins, and 25,000 soldiers; but that the latter be in such large numbers is doubted by our correspondents.

At Amoy everything was proceeding quietly and satisfactorily; the inhabitants continued orderly, giving the British ships, and the garrison at Kolong-foo no trouble. We have not seen a description of the horse races lately held at Kolong-foo, but we are told that during five days they afforded a great deal of amusement.

These few items are all the news that we have been able to gather, in fact, seeing that everything remained in statu quo, that no new enterprises had been undertaken, and that neither success nor disasters have to be related, our readers need not wonder at this barrenness.

The greatest activity prevails among the Chinese in and near Canton in erecting new fortifications, and it has been observed by those well able to judge of such matters, that the works now constructed display as far greater degree of engineering skill than the Chinese have heretofore evinced. At Shamung immense fortifications have been thrown up, and although now nearly completed, their existence was unknown in Canton; with such care had they been masked. The whole of the Macao passage is one succession of fortifications and earthen breastworks, and any hostile fleet would, if the Chinese have made as much progress in gunnery as they have in engineering, be exposed to a severe fire on approaching the City of Canton. A little below Shamung a great number of sharp stakes or palisades have been driven obliquely into the bed of the river, so as to threaten destruction to any boat attempting a landing at high water, at which time they would run through their bottoms, and would during low water, when not concealed by mud or water, also prove a formidable obstacle. The river between Canton and Whampoa is now so thoroughly obstructed, that the sinking of a single stone laden junk would make the passage of even small pulling boats impossible. Opposite to Napier's fort, on Sate Junk river very large and well contrived fortification have been thrown up, which will completely command the whole of that reach.

We think these preparations on so great a scale, and carried on with unceasing activity indicate, an intention on the part of the Chinese at no distant period to resume hostilities, and we would recommend the greatest caution to those dwelling in Canton, that they may not become victims to Chinese treachery, which the merchants at Canton on the 31st of May last so narrowly escaped. We hope that the attitude now assumed by the Chinese at Canton will rouse the attention of the authorities at Hongkong. That these fortifications are in direct violation of the truce concluded with Capt. Elliot there can be doubt.

By the Maya from Manila 12th inst. the gratifying intelligence has been received of the arrival there of the Steamer Ariadne on the 10th. In want of fuel, a party was sent to cut wood on the coast of Borneo, where they were attacked by the natives, and driven off. The length of passage of the Steamer from Singapore to Manila was caused by the want of fuel. Nothing as yet heard of the Medusa; she had not reached Singapore on the 29th November, but we may still hope that she will make that port ere long.

H. M. S. Cornwallis, 74, and Chameleon have during the week arrived at Hongkong, whether to proceed northward, we have not heard; but there being no prospect of the Admiral's returning from Chusan this winter, the Cornwallis will, we suppose, proceed to thither that the Admiral may hoist his flag on board of her. Sir Henry Pottinger has no intention of leaving Chusan for Hongkong during this winter; so letters received per Jupiter say.

The Sea Queen arrived in Singapore on the 20th, and the Poppy, Red Rover, Cowajee Family, Rob Roy, and Ariel on the 25th of November.

We learn that H. M. troopship Jupiter is to take about 800 men of the troops stationed at Hongkong, and of those lately arrived there from England, consisting of recruits for H. M. 18th, 26th, 49th and 55th, to Chusan and Chinhae. She is to sail within the next fortnight.

It was the Starling and Royalist who were fired at from a fort to the northward of Tongkoo; and the fort was forthwith demolished under the orders of Commander Kellett of the Starling.

The building of warehouses at Hongkong is persevered in, and several of them are in a state of great forwardness, as well as some of the dwelling houses. The number of Chinese inhabitants is still increasing, and a considerable trade begins to be carried on there. Already, we hear, have some junks from Fokien arrived there with cargoes of Teas, to exchange for British manufactures and opium, and their visits will no doubt soon become more frequent, the transport by sea of their teas being so much more cheap, than that hitherto forced by land, canals, and rivers. They avoid besides the not inconsiderable transit duties, and the heavy consou charges at Canton. We do not know whether as yet any measures are taken for the recording in a public office all imports and exports of Hongkong; we hope this may be done soon, if not already in operation; for although no duties are to be levied at Hongkong the statistical information therefrom derived would be of the greatest value. At Singapore, equally a freeport, all exports and imports are regularly registered, and, indeed, without it the value of the trade could never be ascertained with any degree of accuracy.

A large junk of between 4 to 500 tons was captured, we are told the day before yesterday by H. M. S. Nimrod, not far from Lantau.

In the first of our advertising columns will be seen advertisements concerning the sale of the property, and the affairs, of the missing Mr. Beale. We have not before alluded to this distressing subject, from the hope that something would be learned of Mr. Beale's present residence, but can no longer avoid stating the particulars of this event, since it comes before our readers in a judicial form. Mr.

Thomas Beale left his house on Friday the 10th of this month, and has not since been heard of, although all possible exertions have been made by the authorities as well as by his numerous friends, to discover his retreat. From circumstances since ascertained, there is no doubt that Mr. Beale's absence from his house is voluntary, and strong hopes are entertained that his present whereabouts may yet be discovered, and that the serious apprehensions entertained on his behalf may have no foundation. It is thought that the embarrassed state of his circumstances may have prompted Mr. Beale to seek a temporary retreat. Mr. Beale, resident in China during the last 53 years, was much esteemed by all his numerous friends and acquaintance; his taste for natural history, and zoological collection, have for many years made him one of the most conspicuous foreign residents here, to whom and to strangers his collections were always liberally open for inspection.

THE CENSUS RETURNS.

We have received a copy of the official returns of the population, &c. in the various counties and districts of the Colony, for 1841, obtained under the provisions of an Act passed during the Session of Council. The returns before us, though incorrect in some few instances, are given as correctly as possibly could be, under all the difficulties and circumstances attending such a laborious process; it is indeed to some a matter of small astonishment how these official lists tally so closely with the number of the population as lately ascertained from documents in the various public offices, agreeing within one per cent., particularly when we take into consideration the immense extent of country the scattered state of the population, and the extreme difficulty of getting information that could be relied upon.

The returns contain a large mass of statistical information, from which we give the following abstract. Mr. Rowe, the Government Printer, has executed his share of the business in a manner that reflects the most credit upon him; the lists have been got up in a most elaborate style, having required no little attention to get them finished in so very superior and neat a manner as they are now given to the world.

The total number of the inhabitants of New South Wales, including Port Phillip and the Districts under the jurisdiction of the Crown Land Commissioners, amounted on the 2nd day of March, 1841, to 130,356—classified as follows—

IMMIGRATION.—Within the last ten days, eight immigrant vessels have arrived in this port; namely, the "John Renwick," with 294 immigrants; the "Eleanor," 210; the "Elizabeth," 260; the "Forth," 240; the "Percy," 280; the "Runnymede," 222; the "Adam Lodge," 285; and the "Globe," with 24; amounting in all to 1815 immigrants, besides cabin and intermediate passengers.

EXPORTS OF WOOL.—By the return of Wool exported from the Colony of New South Wales, which has just been published in the appendix to the Report of the Committee on Immigration, it appears that in 1832, the quantity was 172,880 lbs, the value of which is not known. In 1832 the quantity was 1,515,156 lbs, and the value £73,559; and in 1840 the quantity was 8,616,775 lbs, and the value £256,112; showing an increase of 7,093,616 lbs in quantity, and of £182,553 in value, of the wool exported in the year 1840, as compared with that of 1832.—Sydney Monitor, Sept. 3.

It is not many hours since one of the Treasury journals made an effort to represent the state of our foreign relations, as handed over by the defunct Ministry to their successors, as of the most satisfactory character. Our present paper will furnish our readers with the latest intelligence from the East; and a single expression, attributed to the Admiral on the Chinese expedition, gives an excellent sample of the real position in which affairs have been left by our late Foreign Secretary. "The Chinese dispute," says Sir WILLIAM PARKER, "may be settled in a few months, or it may last for years."

Nor is this by any means a solitary case. Our operations in northern India, which must necessarily be of the most costly description from their very remoteness, present a different prospect in each succeeding month. Unquestionably the language of Admiral Parker concerning the Chinese dispute must be equally applicable to them also. Such affairs as these, with the M^{rs} Lord's negotiation on the other side of the globe, will surely visit the new Foreign Secretary and the Board of Control abundant occupation for many months to come.

Another point of the case, which can hardly have escaped our readers, is the hearing of all these quarrels upon the state of our commercial and trading interests at home. How is it possible for wars, and threats of war, to be going on in three or four different parts of the globe, without an inevitable pressure upon many branches of our foreign trade? There can be no doubt that much of the stagnation which undoubtedly exists in our manufacturing districts, and which is all laid to the account of the corn laws, arises from the embarrassments growing out of existing, and apparently impending, quarrels. No argument can be required to show that our exports for the Chinese market must be greatly reduced, so long as the quarrel remains in its present position, of being capable, in the Admiral's opinion, of being prolonged for years.

We have never attempted to deny to the late Foreign Minister the possession and the exhibition of a certain amount and description of talent. But between cleavages and sacrifices—between wit and wisdom, there is a very wide difference. We cannot for one moment admit that his portfolio is handed over to his successor in a state of enviable ease and comfort. Perhaps, indeed, a twelve-month since, matters might have been in a still worse predicament. Our prospects have somewhat improved in the course of the present year. But, whether we look to China or to America—in any portion of the risk run of a continental war, by our Syrian exploits,—we must contend that a great part of the danger has arisen from a want of timely firmness in our Foreign Minister; one result of which has already been, in the Chinese affair, an expenditure of millions, never to be regained,—when little or even less might have been required, had promptitude and firmness been exhibited at the outset.

There is, however, a reasonable hope that now both the Elliotts, have been withdrawn, and men of rather higher character appointed, the controversy with "the Celestial Empire" may be brought to a close. We trust that Sir WILLIAM PARKER and his civil auditor will not be held to that which is quite obvious to every one in this part of the world—namely, that when a few thousand men are sent from the very extremity of the globe to deal with a great empire, it is almost impossible for their measures to be too mild or of too divided a character. Every hour lost in useless negotiation is so much clear loss to the invaders, and clear gain to the inert mass on which they are sent to make an impression.—Times

SYNOPSIS OF EVENTS IN CHINA,

DURING THE YEAR 1841.

In wishing our readers a happy New Year, we likewise present them with a synopsis of events in the year just departed. On the same occasion last year, we uttered the wish to be enabled at the close of it to present to our readers a picture exhibiting more pleasing colors, than the events of 1840. This wish has been but in part fulfilled, for although British arms have been uniformly successful, the diplomatic skill, and hostile feelings of the Court at Peking have hitherto prevented the reaping of the fruits of these victories. Negotiations, which have never yet led to anything here, were the hobby-horse of the late Plenipotentiary, and the Chinese were so well aware of this, that without making any concession, they managed to amuse Capt. Elliot from November until near the end of May, at the end of which time, by four different attacks on the fortifications on the river, Canton was at last at the mercy of the British force. The fruits of these brilliant actions were given less to the Chinese of men and military stores, and a ransom of 6 millions of dollars. The town and all the fortifications were restored to the Chinese; and a truce with the Province of Kwangtung, and the reopening of foreign trade served upon. No progress whatever was made in the settlement of the differences existing between the two nations, and after the humiliation of Canton, the British force continued inactive near the Island of Hongkong. Fortunately however for British interests in China, Captain Elliot was recalled, and Sir Henry Pottinger appointed in his stead, and if this officer has not yet succeeded in advancing towards a settlement of differences, it must be recollected that matters were left by his predecessor in a very difficult position, and that the Chinese were emboldened to lengthened resistance by his vacillating conduct. As yet the occupation of Amoy, of Chuen, Chinkai and Amoy has not had the desired effect of causing communication to be made from the Chinese government to Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, and it is probable that many more laurels will be earned by the British force, ere Chinese pride will be brought to make the first advances towards peace. We much fear however that another year, or perhaps more, must pass over before amicable relations shall exist between the two governments. The final result of the war must be in force China to take the natural place in the family of nations, nor will she be any longer permitted to isolate herself with supercilious contempt from the rest of mankind.

At the end of the year 1840 the British forces had been rather more than six months in China, but beyond the occupation of Chuen, nothing had been done. Admiral Elliot had, according to convention made with Keshen at the Peking, returned to the south and soon after the arrival of the Imperial Commissioner at Canton, negotiations began again, which were conducted on the part of the British by Capt. Elliot. He being now sole Plenipotentiary after the resignation and departure of Admiral Elliot, the fate of these negotiations will be found below. The dates under which the events of the year are recorded are those of the Canton Press, which we have chosen in accordance of more easy reference.

January 24.—The intention of the Commodore to permit access with cargoes, during the blockade to two American ships the Kearns and Panama has become known; and as such measure threatened materially to affect the interests of British merchants generally, to the advantage of a favored few, a large body of them addressed Sir Gordon Bremer on the subject, strongly remonstrating against the proceeding, 1st, on the ground of its illegality; 2d, on account of its being a benefit to one particular class, to the injury of the general body; and thirdly, they complained of the secrecy with which the intention had been communicated to the parties interested, and to them only. To this remonstrance the Commodore answered to the effect, that H. M. Plenipotentiary having, some weeks since, given a pledge that the ships should have access with cargo, and having urgently called on him to let them pass unobstructed, on the plea that their detention, after his word had been passed, would be fatal to his character in the eyes of the Chinese authorities and agreed besides to absolve him from the responsibility of the measure, he did not consider it expedient to detain the vessels. The merchants have addressed Lord Palmerston on the subject.

January 10th.—On the 7th Capt. Elliot issued a Circular to H. M. subjects, stating that in consequence of negotiations having been interrupted, the positions of Chuenpoo and Tysookow had that morning fallen to Her Majesty's arms.

As our intention in summing up the events of the year, is only to facilitate reference, we shall not, during the many conflicts to be recorded during the year, state more than the general result, and the force employed. On the morning of the 7th, steamers Nemesis, Enterprise, and Madagascar disembarked 700 Native infantry, the Madras 37th N. J. and Bengal volunteers, 300 European invalids lately returned from Chuen, and about 400 marines, all under command of Major Pratt of the Cameroonian, on the island of Chuenpoo. Nemesis and Queen steamers threw shells into the upper fort, while H. M. S. Catlope, Larue and Hyacinth opposed the lower battery, opened a heavy fire upon it. At about half past eleven o'clock the British were in undisputed possession of the Island, the Chinese having suffered a loss of about 700 killed.

H. M. S. Samarang, Druid, Madras and Columbine at the same time attacked the fort of Tysookow, which was soon silenced, and taken possession of by the seamen under command of Capt. Scott. The loss of the British was very trifling. A great number of warjunks were destroyed by the Nemesis.

On the next morning the ships of the line Mersey, Blenheim and McClure moved to take up a position in front of the Bogue forts when to the surprise and indignation of everybody, a flag of truce was hoisted on board the Commodore's ship, and hostilities ceased. It soon became known that this event was caused by a junk boat pulled by an old woman, bringing an envoy from the Chinese admiral to the British Plenipotentiary, in the person of a quack doctor to propose an armistice for the further exchange of ships. This incredible event was officially communicated to H. M. subjects in a Circular from Capt. Elliot dated Amoy, the 9th January. The two reduced forts were utterly demolished, and the British flag hoisted on Chuenpoo.

Six petty mandarin or spies were seized by the Chinese at Tauchow, tied in a boat, the boat hauled on shore, saturated with oil, and the poor wretches burnt alive by their inhuman captors.

Accounts from Chuen of 24th December are more favorable than hitherto; the health of the troops here represented as good, and fresh provisions plentiful.

January 18th.—On the 14th H. M. Plenipotentiary arrived here after his exploits at the Bogue, and was officially informed H. M. subjects that negotiations on a satisfactory footing had been resumed with the Imperial Commissioner Keshen.

In the mean while, Keshen had, after the attack on the two forts, issued an edict warning all Chinese against interference with the traitorous English, and threatening those who should sell them any provisions with military law. This caused considerable alarm here, and to reassure the Chinese inhabitants, who were beginning to leave Macao, the Kom-mission issued a proclamation, saying that there was no intention to trouble the people in any way.

January 24.—On the 20th H. M. Plenipotentiary issued a Circular to H. M. subjects, announcing the conclusion of preliminary arrangements between the Imperial Commissioner and himself, of which the following is the copy.

1. The custom of the Island and Harbour of Hongkong to the British crown. All just charges and duties, the Empire upon the commerce carried on there, to be paid as if the trade were conducted at Whampoa.

2. An indemnity to the British Government of six millions of dollars one million payable at once, and the remainder in equal annual instalments, ending in 1850.

3. Direct official intercourse between the countries upon an equal footing.

4. The Trade of the Port of Canton to be opened, within ten days after the Chinese New Year, and to be carried on at Whampoa till further arrangements are practicable at the new settlement.

Details remain matter of negotiation.

After recommending to his countrymen oblivion of past and redressed injuries, the Plenipotentiary's circular winds up with this unfortunate paragraph.

"He (the Plenipotentiary) cannot conclude without declaring that next these causes (the wisdom of the government of the expedition etc.) the peaceful adjustment of difficulties must be ascribed to the scrupulous good faith of the very eminent persons with whom negotiations are still pending."

The disappointment felt on the publication of this treaty was general, as hardly one of the objects of the expedition had thereby been attained.

On the 24th the British colors were, in accordance with the treaty hoisted down on the Island of Chuenpoo, and Chinese hoisted instead; and although the Chinese Government have given no security whatever for its due performance, H. M. Brig Columbine was dispatched to Chuen whether the called on the 24th, to order the immediate evacuation, by H. M. forces, of that island.

January 30th.—On the 27th Her M. Plenipotentiary, accompanied by a number of officers of H. M. Navy and Army proceeded to the Nemesis to near the second bar, where he had an interview with Keshen, by whom Capt. Elliot and suite, were very politely received and invited to a banquet prepared for them.

On the 28th January the Island of Hongkong was taken possession of in the name of Her Majesty Victoria.

February 6th.—On the 30th January, a Circular issued by Capt. Elliot informing British subjects that negotiations were proceeding satisfactorily, but warned them that those going to Canton before he declines that they may safely do so, must know the whole risk and responsibility of their own proceedings. Although the day agreed on in the treaty for opening the trade, is gone by, all application for pilots to take ships up the river continue to be refused. Soldiers begin pouring into Canton, where symptoms of insurrection to the government are said to have been discovered.

February 13th.—H. M. Plenipotentiary has had another interview with Keshen. Trade not opened. February 20th.—It has at least become evident even to H. M. Plenipotentiary that the Chinese entered into the treaty only with a view to gain time and after the return from the Bogue of the Steamer Nemesis without the expected ratification of the treaty, on the 24th February, Capt. Elliot issued the following Circular.

"Circumstances have involved the Commander

"in Chief to announce to H. M. Plenipotentiary his intention to move the forces towards the Bocca Tigris."

"The Plenipotentiary will afford the earliest information in his power of the future course of events."

The Emperor's entire disapproval of the treaty entered into by Keen has become known, and that officer is said to be in disgrace.

February 27th.—Hostilities commenced on the 24th, when a masked battery at the back of Anunghoy was destroyed, and 60 guns of various calibre rendered unserviceable. On the 25th February the batteries of the Bocca Tigris were taken by Her Majesty's forces, with considerable loss to the Chinese, and no loss to the English. Many prisoners were made, who were however again set at liberty. A very large number of Chinese cannon were taken and destroyed; the forts of Anunghoy, South Wangtung, and on Tiger Island were demolished; and North Wangtung garrisoned by the 37th Regiment M. N. I.

March 6th.—On the day after the destruction of the Bogus forts H. M. forces moved up the river, and a fort near first bar, bravely defended by a garrison of 5000 men, was taken and destroyed with great loss to the Chinese, and the formerly British ship Cambridge, (bought by the Chinese Government) blows up.

On the 27th, H. M. ships anchored at Whampoa; on the 3rd March Capt. Elliot issued a Circular dated from Whampoa, informing H. M. subjects that on the previous day a masked battery on the northeast end of the Island of Whampoa, which had fired upon H. M. S. Sulphur, had been carried by boat crews. The Kwangchowfoo had on the 3d of March an interview with H. M. Plenipotentiary, of which the result was a truce. The greatest consternation prevails at Canton, the inhabitants flying in all directions, and such is their haste that several boats overlaid with people and their effects have sunk.

On the 2d March arrived in H. M. Brig Cruiser, Major General Sir Hugh Gough, to assume the command of H. M. landforces, and on the same day arrived H. M. S. Nimrod, Platan and Conway and transports, with part of the troops from Chusan, which Island was evacuated on the 24th February by H. M. forces, after the Chinese had given up their prisoners Capt. Anstruther, Mrs. Noble and the other prisoners et cetera. Such was the belief of Capt. Elliot in the good faith of the Chinese, that the regiment of Bengal Volunteers had been ordered to proceed direct to Singapore.

The Emperor has appointed Yih-shan to the service of tranquillising the rebels and Lungwang and Yang-fang to be his assistant great ministers.

March 13th.—On the 6th March at 11 a. m. the truce expired, and the works in immediate advance of Howqua's fort were occupied, and Capt. Elliot issued a proclamation to the inhabitants of Canton, stating, to allay their fears, that their City was spared because the gracious sovereign of Great Britain had commanded the High English Officers to remember, that the good and peaceable people must be tenderly considered.

On the 9th H. M. Plenipotentiary arrived at Macao from Whampoa, and on the 10th issued a Circular stating that unless the whole foreign trade at Canton proceeded on an equal footing, a close embargo would very shortly be laid on the city and trade of Canton. Notwithstanding this, Pilot chops were granted to neutral flags whilst they were denied to English ships.

During the week H. M. S. Blonde, Columbine and Algerine have arrived from Chusan, with the rest of the garrison of that Island, which after having become the grave of so many of the British troops, is again in undisputed possession of the Chinese.

March 20th.—On the 19th Captain Elliot left Macao in the Nemesis steamer, Captain Hall, for Whampoa by the inner passage, and destroyed during her passage even small works or batteries, and 105 pieces of Cannon. On the 13th March the fort in the Macao passage near Canton was taken, and garrisoned. The edicts from the Emperor are of the most threatening nature, and the local authorities have offered rewards for the taking and destroying ships of war, and for the capturing or slaying Capt. Elliot, Commodore Bremer, and Mr. Morrison. Yang-fang has arrived near Canton, with an army of 30,000 men, and threatens extermination, but H. M. Plenipotentiary intends again to try the effects of conciliatory conduct.

March 27th.—After H. M. Plenipotentiary's arrival at Whampoa, a flag of truce was with a 'Chop' for the Canton authorities, fired at on the 16th; it seemed vain to expect that friendly measures would yet have any good effect, and H. M. forces therefore moved up on the 17th, and on the 18th all the works in immediate advance of the City, including the Dutch folly were taken and a number of Chinese warboats and junks destroyed. Canton was now under the guns of the squadron, and all approaches to the City under its complete command, and Capt. Elliot again in possession of the British factory, whence on the 20th he issued a Circular to Her Majesty's subjects that a suspension of hostilities had that day been agreed upon between him and the Imperial Commissioner Yang. The trade of Canton was in consequence declared to be again open and that British and other merchants who may proceed to Canton for the purposes of lawful trade should be duly protected. The usual port-charges to be paid, and although no bond is to be required, there will be no objection on the part of the British authorities to the like liabilities for the introduction of prohibited merchandise, or smuggling (duly proved) which would follow such offences in England, detention of the person, or penal consequences of any kind, excepted; ships of war to remain in the near neighbourhood of the Factories for the better protection of Her Majesty's subjects engaged in trade at Canton. Sir Gordon Bremer at same time issued permission for British and foreign vessels to proceed to Whampoa, all consequences arising from the possible and sudden resumption of hostilities remaining at the risk of the parties.

On the 26th March three Englishmen, Messrs. Bligh and Toole, mates of H. M. S. Blenheim, and Mr. Field, late chief officer of the schooner Saige, when about to go on board the Blenheim, were near the nine Islands seized by Chinese, and the two former have never since been heard of; the body of the latter was several days after thrown up by the sea near Cassiha Bay.

Foreign vessels are freely supplied with Pilot chops which are still denied to the English.

H. M. S. Melville, Capt. Dundas, sailed for England on the 25th, and Samarang, Capt. Scott, on the 29th.

April 3d.—At length the Emperor's reply to Keen's report concerning the loss of the Bogus-forts has been received; Keen is deprived of his rank and command, and to be sent in chains to the capital, to be delivered over to the board of punishments. The Emperor evinces the greatest indignation at the rebellious conduct of the barbarians and swears that both powers shall not stand, that one or the other must perish, and repeats his orders to his generals for the total extermination of all barbarians.

The English ships, pilots having been granted are moving to Whampoa, and British merchants have again taken possession of their factories; the ships of war, to remove all apprehension of the Chinese, have been ordered to some distance below the city. H. M. S. Modeste only remaining in the Macao passage.

Commodore Sir J. J. Gordon Bremer has sailed for Calcutta in the H. C. Steamer Queen, the command of the naval forces now devolving on Sir H. Le Fleming Senhouse.

News have been received by the arrival of the Portoufoe Bomanjee transport, of her commander, Lieut. Stead, R. N. having been treacherously murdered at Kiltow point near Chusan where the transport had gone direct from London in the expectation of still finding that Island in possession of the English.

April 10th.—Preparations for trade are actively making at Canton, but the Chinese dealers are very unwilling to take manufacturers and other imports in barter for teas; insisting mostly on being paid in hard cash. Vessels at Whampoa are beginning to discharge cargo. The guard of marines hitherto stationed in the British long has been withdrawn to prove to the Chinese the confidence H. M. Plenipotentiary feels in their pacific intentions. H. M. S. Columbine has sailed during the week for Chusan with a 'Chop' demanding explanation concerning the murder of Capt. Stead.

Among the 6 articles of accusation against Keen, the most important are his having held interviews and exchanged documents with Capt. Elliot on equal terms;—his having entertained Captain Elliot at second bar; and lastly his having fixed his seal to a document ending the Island of Hongkong.

On the 4th, H. M. S. Jupier sailed for Ceylon.

April 17th.—The Sir Herbert Compton with the overland January mail arrived this day.

of soldiers gathering at Canton begin to show themselves, but H. M. Plenipotentiary gives to H. M. subjects the assurance that all is going on well.

April 24th.—On the night of the 19th a fire broke out in Macao, which threatened the Customhouse; it was however soon got under without doing much damage, by the exertions of the garrison, assisted by the Portuguese and foreign inhabitants, and by some boats crews of the H. C. steamer Nemesis under the command of Capt. Hall.

The Chinese people, aware of the warlike preparations secretly carried on by their government, are much alarmed, but Capt. Elliot has received the most satisfactory assurances from Yang of the faithful intentions of his newly arrived colleagues, and has therefore addressed a Notice to the people of Canton declaring that all rumours of war are false and mischievous. Trade continues at Canton, but threatening edicts against the English continue to arrive from Peking.

May 1st.—The people are distressed, and very few of the outside dealers have returned to Canton. The British ships of war have been still further removed from Canton; soldiers continue pouring into Canton from all parts of the country, and an interruption of the present armistice is speedily looked for by all but H. M. Plenipotentiary. A good many vessels with full cargoes of teas have during the last two weeks sailed for England and America.

Howqua's grandson was killed by lightning, when under the hands of a barber.

The Emperor reproves E-le-poo, Governor of Chekung, for his dilatoriness in driving the English from Chin-ha. He ought, says his Majesty, rather than allow them to evacuate the Island, to have annihilated them all.

May 6th.—An pseudo Imperial Edict has been issued, apparently by the Canton authorities, recommending peace and quietness, no doubt with a view of throwing H. M. Plenipotentiary off his guard. On the 4th and 5th of this month no boats with cargo were allowed to leave Canton for Whampoa, when troops were immediately despatched to the ships on the advanced stations to see if required. The Chinese, who by this manoeuvre only wished to try the disposition of the English, then allowed cargo boats to leave as before.

The fleet is under orders to sail for the northwest, by the middle of this month.

On the 1st of May appeared the first number of the Hongkong Gazette, published at Macao, the official organ of H. M. Plenipotentiary. Experts of tea up to this time about 7 millions pounds of Tea. Seafaring people and divers are being engaged for the service of the Chinese government, and arms and ammunition were seen to pass in great quantities through the Creek hong at Canton. The trade is carried on under great disadvantages to foreigners, exports being very dear, whilst imports are nearly unobtainable.

Captain William Caine, of the Cameronians, has been appointed Chief Magistrate of Hongkong, and Capt. Elliot, in the Hongkong Gazette publishes the conditions on which land on that Island will be let.

May 16th.—The warlike preparations of the Chinese continue, many more soldiers have lately arrived in Canton, the garrison of which is supposed at present not to be less than 50,000 men. H. M. S. Modeste has been moved nearer Canton and the Algerine is anchored in front of the factories. The greatest anxiety and excitement prevail at Canton, where Captain Elliot had an interview with the Kwang-chow foo on the 11th. Yih-him and his colleagues have issued a proclamation telling the people not to be alarmed, there being no probability of any hostilities; they are not however believed by the people who are fast leaving Canton.

M. H. Brig Columbine returned from Chusan on the 11th, without having obtained the desired explanation regarding the murder of Capt. Stead. The 'Chop' from H. M. Plenipotentiary could not be delivered, and after the Chinese had made a treacherous but unsuccessful attack on a boat's party, she came away.

Great activity prevails at Hongkong, where a number of Coolies are employed in cutting roads; and government offices are about being erected.

May 22d.—February overland mail arrived on the 4th, per City of Derry. Advice from Canton of the 20th are alarming; on the 18th H. M. Plenipotentiary advised British merchants so to order affairs as to be able to leave at a moment's warning. Soldiers with lighted matches are seen in the streets, and the Hong merchants and others are removing families and valuables. Fortifications are to be seen in every direction, and fire rafts are constructing in great number. All the British force, except H. M. S. Druid, remaining at Hongkong, moved with transports of troops, to the Bogue on the 20th.

May 29th.—At length the Chinese have thrown off the mask which has hitherto so poorly disguised their intentions. On the 21st there were sufficient indications of immediate hostilities, and Capt. Elliot issued a Circular at Canton recommending British and other foreign merchants to leave the factories before sunset. This they did with the exception of two American merchants. At a little past 10 o'clock at night fire rafts were seen floating down from the direction of Fatee, upon the cutter Louisa and schooner Aurora, which vessels owing to calms and tide had not been able to move from before the factories, and a fire was opened upon them from the shore which was returned by the cutter. H. M. S. Madeste, Algerine, and Palades, had moved from the Macao passage as close to the town as the water permit, and opened a destructive fire upon the batteries, escaping nearly from the danger threatened by the fire rafts, which were fortunately got out of the way by boats of H. M. S. Herald, without any damage. The turning of the tide enabled the two small vessels, Louisa and Aurora, to move out of shot range, and the steamer Nemesis which, had by this time arrived on the scene of action, played her 32 pounders with destructive effect upon the Shaming battery. On the morning of the 22d the Shaming battery was destroyed, and the Nemesis followed by the boats of H. M. S. Herald, entered a creek opposite Fatee and there destroyed about 40 war-junks. Capt. Hall, the gallant commander of the Nemesis, was here wounded in the hand by the bursting of a rocket. On the 23d the whole of the force had arrived within 4 or 5 miles of the city, and on the 24th H. Majesty's 26th Regiment took possession of the Factories, of which four had been entered by the mob, pillaged of every thing portable they contained, including a large quantity of merchandize, and partly destroyed. On the same day H. M. Royal Irish Regiment, H. M. 49th, the Madras 37th Regt. N. I., the Bengal volunteers, the detachment of the Madras artillery, together about 1800 men and 500 marines and seamen, under command of Major General Sir Hugh Gough, were poised by the Nemesis to the northward of Canton, where in the evening, the 49th was landed, to reconnoitre, and the guns were disembarked during the night. On the 26th four forts to the north of the City were taken possession of, and although large bodies of Chinese troops threatened the small gallant band, they generally kept at a respectful distance, but the British suffered severely from the fire kept up upon them from the city walls. A large encampment to the north east of the City, from which frequent attacks were made and threatened, was that afternoon destroyed by the 18th, 49th, and R. Marines and the British encamped on the heights to the northward of, and commanding, Canton. The 26th May, while some negotiations were going forward, and while the Chinese had on the city walls hoisted a flag of truce, was employed in getting the heavy ordnance in position, and on the morning of the 27th everything was ready prepared for an attack on the town itself, and orders were given to open the batteries at seven o'clock in the morning, when at a little after 8 o'clock an officer of the Navy brought a letter from Capt. Elliot for Sir Hugh Gough, stating that an armistice had under certain conditions been concluded, and that for the present all hostilities should cease. Sir Hugh Gough and Sir Le Fleming Senhouse, had a parley with Yang, the Tartar General, and at noon Capt. Elliot arrived in the camp and all further active operations ceased. The conditions of this truce, at a time when Canton was altogether at the mercy of the British troops, were as follows:

- 1st. The three Imperial Commissioners and all the troops other than those of the Province to quit the city within six days, and proceed a distance upwards of sixty miles.
- 2d. Six millions of dollars to be paid in one week for the use of the crown of England, counting from 27th May, one million payable before sunset of the 27th.
- 3d. For the present the British troops to remain in their actual positions; no additional preparation on either side. If the whole sum agreed upon be not paid within seven days, it shall be increased to seven millions; if not within fourteen days, to 8 millions, if not within 30 days, to 9 millions. When the whole be paid, all the British forces to return without the Bocca Tigris, and Wangtung and all fortified places within the river to be restored but not to be resumed till affairs are settled between the two nations.

4th. Losses occasioned by the destruction of the factories and of the Spanish Brig Bibiano to be paid within one week.

5th. It is required that the Kwang-chow-foo shall produce full power to conclude these arrangements on the part of the three Commissioners, the Governor General of the Garrison, and the Fooyuen, having their excellencies' seal.

While thus, as far as they had been allowed to proceed, H. M. landforces had gallantly achieved their task, H. M. Ships had no small share in the subjection of the city of Canton.

The ships on the 24th attacked, silenced, and destroyed the batteries at Shamien and to the eastward of the Factories, and sustained from the well directed fire of the latter some loss. The arsenal with 19 warjunks building, 24 rowboats, and 12 war-junks at anchor; as well as a great quantity of timber and stores fell into the hands of the victors. The different divisions of the ships were commanded by Capt. T. Herbert of H. M. S. Calliope, and Commander W. Warren, of H. M. S. Hyacinth, and the ships engaged in, or having sent part of their crews for the service were the following. Wellfleet (off Wangtung) Blenheim, Blonde (in Blenheim reach) Calliope, Comany, Herald, Aligator, Sulphur, Hyacinth, Nimrod, Modeste, Plades, Cruizer, Columbine, Algerine, Starling & Steamers Atlanta, & Nemesis. The Atlanta grounded on a rock near Dutch folly, but was fortunately got off without sustaining much damage.

According to the agreement entered into, a large number of Tartar troops evacuated the City on the 26th, being allowed to retain their arms, but without music playing or drums beating. On the 26th, large numbers of men were seen, armed with spears, in the rear of the British position. They were attacked and dispersed, a duty very fatiguing to perform, on account of the great heat and the soft nature of the soil. In the evening a heavy shower came on, which rendered the muskets unfit for duty, and a company of the 37th M. N. I. was attacked, while in this condition, by several thousand Chinese, and in some danger of being cut up, when relieved by two companies of marines with percussion locks, upon whose arrival the Chinese fled.

On the following morning the enemy again collected in great number, but a threat of immediately attacking Canton, if the Chinese did not retire, brought out the Kwang-chow-foo, who passing through the British lines, prevailed on the Chinese, who are said to have been villagers, to disperse. More Tartar troops marched out of the City this day without music or banners.

About 17,500 tartar troops having left the town, and 5 millions of the ransom money paid, and the remaining million given security for, at noon on the 30th May the British flag was lowered on the four forts, and at about 5 o'clock all the troops were embarked, not leaving a man of the army or navy or a campfollower behind. The loss of the English during the whole of the operations on Canton was 15 killed and 112 wounded.

June 12th.—Overland mail of 4th March arrived per Corsair from Bombay on the 7th. Sir J. J. Gordon Bremer appointed joint Plenipotentiary, pending the arrival of Admiral Sir William Parker, appointed to succeed Admiral Elliot. Preparations are making at Calcutta, after the arrival there of Sir Gordon Bremer, for reinforcements of troops to be sent out here.

Capt. Elliot, chief superintendent of trade, and charged with the Government of Hongkong, on the 7th gives notice that on the 13th the annual rate of quitrent for town and suburban allotments of land at Hongkong, will be put up for sale, and on the 10th Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary thinks it necessary to warn all Her Majesty's subjects that he considers the entrance of British shipping within the river, under present circumstances, imprudent and unsafe, and recommends that they should forthwith proceed to Hongkong. H. M. Plenipotentiary further declares that any attempt of the Chinese authorities to interfere with or obstruct the freedom of trade or intercourse with Hongkong, will be answered with a close blockade of the port of Canton.

Capt. Elliot also issues a proclamation offering protection to all such Chinese as shall come to trade at the Island of Hongkong.

June 9th.—H. M. S. Nimrod sailed for Calcutta.

June 19th.—On the 14th died on board the Blenheim, Sir Humphrey Le Fleming Senhouse, senior naval officer of her Majesty in China. His remains were interred with due honors in Macao on the 17th. The arduous duties to which the troops and seamen have been exposed in the late operations upon Canton, and the very sickly season this year, and wet weather, have caused much sickness in both branches of the service, and deaths are numerous.

On the 10th June arrived the April overland mail, by H. C. steamer Queen, from Calcutta, in which commodore Sir Gordon Bremer returned to China.

Already a good many British and American ships are moving up to Whampoa, and the trade has recommenced at Canton, although as yet but few foreign merchants have ventured to trust themselves in Canton.

It is said that great excitement exists among the people of this province, and appeals to their patriotism have been published both in Canton and Macao, and probably other places, calling upon the people to take up arms in order to drive the English out of their country. Yatuen, at the time Lieut. Governor of Keangsoo (afterwards Governor of Chekeang) has published proclamations offering rewards for the murdering of Englishmen, and also submits his plans for conquering the English to the Emperor.

June 26th.—The health of the troops and ships companies is improving.

July 3d.—Alex. Johnston Esq., Deputy Superintendent of British trade in China, has been appointed to the government of the Island of Hongkong, on behalf of the Chief Superintendent, by notification dated 2d June. Only thirty-four lots, instead of 100 with water frontage were put up for sale at Hongkong, not on the 12th, but on the 14th June, which realised the very large sum of £3244.10s. annual quitrent.

July 10th.—On the 6th the April overland mail per Charles Grant has been received. H. M. S. Calliope, Capt. Kuper, sailed for Calcutta this day with about 2 millions of the Canton ransom money. The Emperor, after having received Yihshan's version of the occurrences at Canton, is graciously pleased to permit the barbarians to trade as heretofore, but orders Yihshan secretly to restore all the fortifications. Trade labours under great disadvantages at Canton. Keshien is by the Emperor's orders despoiled of enormous wealth, and the Hong-merchants are ordered to repay the government for the Canton ransom money disbursed by the latter, amounting to 2,800,000 taels.

July 17th.—Sailed H. M. S. Cowsey, Captain Bethune, for England with upwards of two millions of the Canton ransom money. The fleet and army are anchored off Hongkong, and nothing known regarding their destination. H. M. 35th Regiment arrived from Calcutta.

July 24th.—Arrival of the May overland mail per Good Success on the 13rd. The Chinese treaty has caused the greatest disappointment in England, and a deputation of merchants waited on Lord Palmerston to declare on behalf of the British public interested in the trade of China, in England, Bombay, Calcutta, and China, that Capt. Elliot had entirely lost their confidence, so having in their judgment shown himself quite unequal to the high and responsible duties with which he was charged. The Minister returned an evasive answer, as not being in possession of his despatches, but Sir Henry Pottinger's appointment to supersede Capt. Elliot is sufficient proof that the government are equally disappointed at the result of Capt. Elliot's negotiations. A dreadful typhoon occurred here and in the neighbourhood on the 21st. A great many vessels were disabled at Hongkong and in the Tyne, and the James Loring lost, although the greater part of her crew and cargo have been saved.

H. M. Cutter Louisa on a trip to Hongkong from Macao, having H. M. Plenipotentiaries, Sir Gordon Bremer and Capt. Elliot on board, was wrecked on a small island in the delta of this river; all the passengers and crew saved, with the exception of Mr Owen, her master, who was drowned. For 48000 part of the Passengers were taken to Macao by the islanders, who had previously stripped them of everything valuable they possessed, and the remainder were brought off on the following day by boats sent from this.

The Chinese troops, now returning from Canton in triumph to their houses, are warned in a proclamation from the authorities, not to commit any excesses during their march.

July 31st.—By an Imperial Edict His Majesty is graciously pleased to permit in future the trade with the English; that now "the Imperial troops from the different provinces, being sent successively "with songs of triumph to their homes, the strife of war ceases from this moment and for ever! the deceptions and mistakes of both parties are to be forgotten! all suspicion, all distrust is to be utterly banished from our minds! and that each may be able quietly to look after his own business, and that all may unitedly enjoy the blessings of peace, is the ardent wish of the Commander in chief and his colleagues!" (dated Canton the 16th July, 1841). The H. C. steamer Platagon arrived on the 29th, with despatches from the foreign Office to Capt. Elliot, disapproving of the Chuenpoo treaty, informing him of the appointment of his successor, and directing him to return home immediately after Sir Henry Pottinger's arrival.

The whole of the six millions ransom-money has been paid, as likewise the damage done to the Factories, and the pillage of the property they contained. This amounted to $41,243-69 on account of foreign, and $280,798-31 on account of British sufferers, which sums have been paid by H. M. Superintendent to the parties respectively interested.

Lin and Tang, both formerly Vice-roys of the provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangse have been banished to Ele.

Another typhoon was experienced here on the 28th, which did not prove so destructive as that of the 11th. The two typhoons have so much injured many of H. M. ships, and of the transports, that if an immediate movement to the northward were intended, it cannot take place before the needful repairs have been made.

August 7th.—In a memorial from Yihuan to the throne, he informs the Emperor to have given orders for the immediate execution of all the prisoners, white and black, made at Canton. Their number probably did not exceed one, whose head was exposed in the City. Many English ships have gone to Whampoa.

August 16th.—On the 21st arrived from Bombay, with the June overland mail, H. C. steamer Sagittaria, having on board H. M. Plenipotentiary, Sir Henry Pottinger, and Rear Admiral Sir William Parker, who have been only 67 days on their passage from England, inclusive of a stay of 10 days in Bombay. The Government has declared the provisions of the Chuenpoo treaty so highly unsatisfactory, that it cannot be ratified. On the 12th August Sir Henry published in the Hongkong Gazette, his official appointment as her Majesty's Plenipotentiary on a special mission to the Government of China, and to act also as Chief Superintendent of the trade of Her Majesty's subjects in China, and Sir Henry Pottinger on the same day issued a Notification, to H. M. Subjects on the assumption of his office.

August 21st.—The fleet under the command of Rear Admiral Sir William Parker, set sail for the northward this day. It consists of, H. M. ships Volunteer, 19; Sagittaria, 19; Blackheath, 18; Blonde, 18; Druid, 16; Medora, 16; Cruiser, 16; Columbine, 16; Pygades, 16; Algerine, 16; Rattlesnake, troopship, 16; Quinn, Sagittaria, Nimrod, Platagon, and 16 transports, with H. M. 18th, 26th, 49th, 55th Regiments of the line, Madras Artillery and Engineers, having in these waters Horrid, 20, Alligator, 20, Napher, 8, Hyacinth, 10, Starling 8, Pygades, 10, Hobbs, 4, and at Hongkong, detachments of the 14th Royal Irish and Camerons, and all the native troops consisting of the 27th M. N. I. and a detachment of Bengal Volunteers.

A fire broke out on the 15th of this month destroyed the greater part of the Barr at Hongkong.

August 23rd.—On the 24th sailed H. C. steamer Albatross in which H. M. late Plenipotentiary, Commodore Sir Gordon Bremer, and Capt. Elliot, have left China for Bombay on their way home-ward.

On the 22d arrived French Corvette Danville; commander Rosamel from Manila; and H. M. troopship Jupiter from Madras and Singapore. The latter follows the fleet to the northward.

September 4th.—The Chinese begin fortifying the River again.

September 18th.—July overland mail arrived on the 12th per H. C. steamer Madagascar. About 900 men have been sent on from England in three transports to reinforce the four regiments now to the northward. On the 14th authentic information of the taking of Amoy reached here. The fleet arrived off Amoy on the 25th, and on the 26th, the city with its very extensive and formidable batteries and fleet of gun boats and warjunks (the whole mounting upwards of 500 pieces of cannon) was taken possession of, after a short but animated defence, by H. M.'s naval and land forces under the command of Admiral Sir William Parker, and Lieut. General Sir Hugh Gough.

The island of Kolongoo has for the present been kept possession of, leaving thereon a garrison of about 450 men of H. M.'s 18th and 26th Regiments, while H. M. S. Druid, Pygades, and Algerine under command of Capt. Smith also remain there. The fleet sailed again from Amoy for the northward on the 5th September.

H. M. S. Herald, schooner Starling and steamer Houghly went up the Canton river on the 11th, leaving a detachment of Sappers and Miners at Wangtung to destroy that fort. On the 13th this squadron under command of Capt. Nias arrived in the reach between Whampoa and Canton, and there destroyed a number of stone laden junks, some mandarin boats, and works in the river on which a number of Chinese were busily employed, in order to obstruct the passage. This caused much excitement in Canton, which was immediately left by all the British merchants then there, who however returned a few days after.

September 25th.—The people of Canton are much displeased with their Kwang-chow-foo for having unnecessarily, as they think, made concessions to the English, and he has lately been attacked by a mob, his chair broken, and with difficulty escaped.

October 2nd.—Accounts from Amoy to the 23d September state that the inhabitants are returning to the town, and that provisions are plentiful.

October 9th.—The transport Norbuada was abandoned in a sinking state by her Capt., and all the Europeans, near the north-eastern point of the island of Formosa, leaving on board about 150 Cainp followers and the crew, all natives of India. H. M. S. Nimrod has gone to see if the vessel or inmates can yet be saved. The Capt. and other Europeans were picked up by the Schooner Black Swan, on the 6th Oct. about 85 miles E. N. E. of Hongkong. The Chinese at Canton are busy repairing the old and building new fortifications, also in obstructing the river.

October 23rd.—The Emperor returns thanks to heaven for the providential destruction of all the barbarians during the typhoons in July last.

October 30th.—The August overland mail arrived on the 28th. Keshen's trial and sentence has been published in the Peking Gazette. The head of his offending is incapacity, and he is sentenced to decapitation.

November 6th.—On the 31st of last month the French Corvette Danville returned from Chusan, and by her we learn that Tinghae on the Island of Chusan was retaken by Her Majesty's forces on the 1st October, and the cities of Chinbae and Ningpo were occupied on the 10th and 13th October, respectively. The fortifications at Tinghae had been much strengthened and increased since the former evacuation of the British force, and the Chinese made a better attempt at resistance than they have hitherto done; but they were driven out of their entrenchments, and the batteries cleared in less than two hours. Chinbae at the mouth of Ningpo river was strongly defended by batteries and a citadel, and the resistance of the Chinese caused to themselves a considerable loss in dead and wounded, whilst the English had only five killed and about 30 wounded. Yukeen, the governor of Chekeang, who had come in person to defend Chinbae, seeing resistance useless, attempted to drown himself; but was dragged from the water by some assistants, who fled with him to beyond Yu yaou, where he expired from fatigue and vexation. Ningpo was taken possession of without resistance. Large quantities of Copper copper guns, and metal coin, as well as stores of all descriptions, well filled granaries, and some silver were taken at Chinbae and Ningpo.

The Nimrod has returned to Amoy without having seen the Norbuada transport. From natives it was learnt that a great proportion of the campfollowers and crew had reached the shore upon pieces of wreck, and that 100 of them were now prisoners in the hands of the Chinese, and were supposed to have been sent to Chinbae. About 60 or 70 must have perished. In the harbour of Ke lung on the island of Formosa the Nimrod was fired at from a fort, when company of her men were sent on shore who destroyed the fort. Trade continues undisturbed at Canton.

November 30th.—H. M. S. Lorne from Chusan arrived on the 13th, and sailed again for Bombay on the 15th.

Evidence has been found at Chinbae to the effect that Capt. Stead of the Protonjee Bomanjee was not, as before supposed, killed at Kitow point; he was only severely wounded there; thence carried to Chinbae, where he was executed, by being cut in pieces. The official report of this legal murder has been found, with the Imperial reply, approving of it.

December 4th.—Many buildings, for government as well as private are being erected at Hongkong, where already a Chinese population estimated at about 15 000 has collected.

December 11th.—On the 10th a portion of the September overland mail was received per Water Witch from Calcutta. Several junks and trading vessels here lately been seized near Hongkong, condemned, and sold. H. M. S. Nimrod has been sometime in the Broadway without making any seizures. Capt. Chas. Elliot, late H. M. Plenipotentiary in China has been appointed Consul General to the Republic of Texas.

December 18th.—H. M. S. Wia arrived on the 13th from Singapore. It is said that Keshen has been pardoned conditionally, and is sent to the province of Chekeang again to try what negotiations may do.

December 25th.—H. M. troopship Jupiter arrived at Hongkong from Chusan and Amoy on the 17th and sailed again for the northward with about 650 men reinforcements for the four regiments H. M. S. Cornwallis, 24, and H. M. Brig Chamillion, 10, arrived at Hongkong on the 23d, from Singapore, and the former sailed again for Chusan on the 26th.

We have now brought the occurrences of this year down to its close, and it remains for us to take a hasty glance at the present disposal of the British forces. The naval force is stationed as mentioned below. At Hongkong there remain some European troops (of what regiment, since the sailing of the Jupiter, we have not been able to learn), the 37th regiment-M. N. I., and a detachment of Bengal volunteers. At Amoy 400 of the 18th and 150 of the 26th Regiment, and the remainder of the four regiments, the 18th, 26th, 49th, 55th, with the Madras Artillery, and corps of Engineers at Chusan, Chinbae, and Ningpo, at the latter of which places by the last advices of the 9th December, Lieut. General Sir Hugh Gough had his headquarters.

With reference to the advertisement announcing the sale of Mr. Beale's effects, we beg to state that the sale has been postponed to the 3rd of January, and following days.

We hear nothing new from Canton; the Chinese continue actively employed in completing the fortifications of the town and river, and we hear that they are still purchasing guns in great number. Whether all these preparations are intended for offensive, or merely defensive, measures, time will show. The British authorities, although the Chinese are clearly acting contrary to the spirit of the agreement entered into with Capt. Elliot, do not seem disposed to interfere, but we think that all these preparations will, during the present year cause the British force to pay a second visit to Canton.

It is just three years this day since the regular trade of Canton, which had been stopped by the Chinese owing to a seizure of Opium made in front of one the Factories, was reopened, and continued until the advent of Lin on the 30th March. Many important events have since taken place, and the war with China, may yet, ere its conclusion, produce immense results. Little contemplated at the time when Capt. Elliot delivered over to Lin the 50,000 Chests of Opium.

Three or four trading junks and a saltjunk have, we hear, been seized during the week, some of the former of considerable value. The Nimrod yesterday detained three small trading vessels in this neighbourhood.

The extension of the Blackwall railway from the Minories to Fenchurch-street, having been completed for the reception of passengers, and undergone a proper survey by order of Government, was opened on the 2nd to the public.—Papeau, the Canadian O'Connell, is living in a state of great wretchedness in Paris.—The American Government is about to borrow twelve millions of dollars, at six per cent., for the purpose of paying its debts.—REPEAL OF THE PENITENTIARY SYSTEM.—Sir Peter Laurie stated on the 4th, that he felt great gratification in being able to assure the public from the chair in which he sat, that the Penitentiary system, which had been so loudly reprobated by men of humanity, was about to be completely altered. He had heard from unquestionable authority, that after the long trial which had been given to the solitary and maddening process in that place of punishment, it was at length discovered that the cruel rigours of the plan were not productive of the good anticipated; that the silent and solitary system, instead of causing an improvement of morals, deprived several of the wretched delinquents sentenced to pine within its walls, of the use of their reason altogether; and that the Government was at length awakened to the necessity of prison reform as regarded the horrible place of punishment called the Penitentiary.

The small portion of the distance, about 25 feet, now incomplete, is connected with the shaft on the Middlesex side of the river by a driftway, through which, at the end of the tunnel, Sir Isambard passed. Thus the great problem of the practicability of forming a railroad under the Thames, without interrupting the navigation, is practically solved in a few months it is expected that one of the archways will be open for foot passengers.—The Government, in order to make the travelling between London and Dublin more expeditious, have given orders that a mail-boat shall proceed to Dublin immediately on the arrival of the mail-bag from London by Chester and Birkenhead

The stone work has been cut out at the base, and a railway and carriage erected, on which the lighthouse now stands; it was moved by screw power a distance of 21 feet to the north, on the 9th, in which situation it will remain for some time, till the railway is reversed, when it will be removed to its new site, at the east end of the north pier.—The returns of the population of the parishes within the city and liberty of Westminster, and the various parishes and unions adjoining the cities of London and Westminster, show the following results:—

With the exception of Wapping and Saffron-hill liberty, in all parishes there are more females. Saffron-hill contains many lodging houses for the accommodation of men only; while, Wapping, is a rendezvous for sailors. The excess of females in Islington is accounted for by the great number of ladies schools. It appears that the dogs ran between the legs of the horses of the phœton of the Earl of Ennol; the leaders, from the fright, ran over the postilion—one of them then plunged into the lake, which is about fourteen feet deep. The horse, which had several times sunk, was eventually got on shore, but not without some labor and trouble, in which Prince Albert took an active part.—Later, the wife of Mr. Dupe, gunmaker, St. Aldgate's of a daughter; the father will be ninety years of age at Christmas next, is now in good health and vigour, and has been a water drinker all his days. Mattieson, from Christiansand to Nantes. The unfortunate accident appears to have been caused entirely from not steering the course properly defined in the navigation rules laid down by the authorities of the Trinity House. The concussion was tremendous. The Olsen, being the lightest vessel, received the most injury. On the vessel being disengaged it was discovered that the Olsen was sinking. Fortunately Capt. Mattieson and his crew got on board the Vernon immediately, and in a few minutes afterwards the Olsen went down head foremost in deep water. The Vernon being in a very dangerous state Captain Gimlet lost no time in making for Portsmouth, which he reached early on the following morning, and landed the crew of the Olsen and his own passengers.—VIC-ADMIRAL SIR CHARLES ADAM, K. The Illustrator, 72, now sitting out at Portsmouth to be the flag ship, will not be ready to go to sea for a couple of months. The unsatisfactory accounts received by the Great Western of affairs in the United States is stated to be the reason for Sir Charles hastening his departure.—The Judicial Privy Council gave judgment on Monday in the long-contested suit respecting the will of James Wood; Lord Lyndhurst read the decision which reversed the judgment of Sir Herbert Jenner in the Ecclesiastical Court, and admitted the validity of the will. It was stated, that out of 1,500 replies to the invitations which had been distributed among the clergy, only six were decidedly opposed to the objects of the meeting; an equal number expressed doubts upon the subject; whilst the vast remainder were decidedly favorable to those objects. The proceedings closed on the 27th, when Mr. G. At the same Assizes last year, Punter gained a verdict of 250 l. damages for a trespass committed by Lord Grantley. Punter had been ejected from a cottage which he and his father had occupied for forty eight years, without any rent having been demanded; Lord Grantley, after cutting down a tree in the cottage garden, and performing a few acts of ownership to set up a title, procured a warrant under the act for the recovery of small tlements; the family were turned out, and the cottage was rased. Punter and his family spent three nights in the lane in which it stood. The new trial was granted on account of some informality in the first; but the jury made Lord Grantley pay for his law, by returning a fresh verdict of 275 l. damages. It is said, that one of them observed that four per cent. was not too much to pay for keeping Punter without his money.

A company, which has obtained a knowledge of the method employed, is constructing a ship upon the principles discovered, as it is said, by Mons. Langhans, but which proceed rather on the experiments of Tillotier and of Faraday, since the article used is carbonic acid gas, liquefied without a machine of compression. All the invention consists in two large gas producers, the same as Tillotier's, which are supplied with bicarbonate of soda and sulphuric acid. Some drops of carbonic acid, produced and liquefied by this mixture, fall alternately before and behind the pistons, and as this gas has a pressure of at least 93 atmospheres, it undergoes a considerable expansion, which gives impulsion to the machine. Instead of a cumbersome load of coals, a scorching fire, and ponderous machinery, a few tons of carbonate of soda and of acid will suffice to traverse the ocean and circumnavigate the globe in less than three months.—A Circular Order has just been issued by the Board of Admiralty, directing that all ships and vessels are in future to be fitted with wire-rope lightning conductors, on Mr. Edey's plan, which will not cost one twelfth the expense of Mr. Snow Harris's. It appears that Mr. Sheppard, accompanied by two gentlemen, stopped before Captain Fitz Roy, and, shaking his whip over his head, stated that, although he would not strike him he must consider himself horse-whipped; upon which Mr. Fitz Roy struck Mr. Sheppard; a scuffle then ensued, which terminated by Cap-Fitz Roy knocking Mr. Sheppard down, who fell on his back on the pavement, when the bystanders interfered, and the parties were separated. Some matters connected with the Durham election are said to have been the cause of this unpleasant affair.

From the Chinese Repository for December.

Art. VI. A memorial addressed to his imperial majesty by Law Yauko the lieutenant-governor of Chikwang and his colleagues, respecting the fall of Ningpo, and the state of the defences in the province. Dated Oct. 21th 1841, and forwarded by express.

Law Yauko, the lieutenant-governor of Chekeang, with Kemingpoon and Hangkiu the commandant and lieutenant-general of Hangchow, kneeling send up to his majesty their report, respecting the attack made on Ningpo by the rebellious foreigners, the loss of that city, and the imminently dangerous state of affairs both at Shaohing and Hangchow; and also respecting the provisional appointments of the provincial commissioner of finance, Ching Tsochia (late of Fuhkeen), with general Le Tingyng, and the intendunt Loh Tseichiang, to superintend and direct the forces stationed for the defence of the commanding position at Taougo. Respectfully, they lay this report before his majesty, hoping a sacred glance may be cast thereon.

The fall of Chinhae, the dispossession of maintaining the defense of Ningpo for a single day, and the consequently disheartened state of all the inhabitants of the west, from the district of Tseke to Hangchow, the capital of the province, have been duly reported to the throne, by your majesty's minister Law, in successive dispatches, dated the 12th, 13th, and the 24th of Oct.

On the 16th of October, Loh Tseichiang, the intendunt of the departments of Ningpo and Shaohing, made a report. The said intendunt, on the 10th of October fought at Chinhae, but on account of the fierce bearing of the rebellious foreigners, our soldiers were unable to withstand them and maintain their defences; and the heights of Kinko and Chaupoon, with the chief town of the district, were once after another lost. The said intendunt, seeing that the case was impracticable, threw himself into the river that he might sacrifice life in the maintenance of duty; while in a state of insensibility, he was taken from the water by the marines (his water braves), and in a small boat was sent off to Tseke, when resuscitation commenced, and he began to revive, although his thighs had been severely wounded by his fall. Having heard that the commander-in-chief (Ye Poonyn) had fallen back for the defence of Ningpo, and that the Imperial commissioner and high minister Yu-keen, having attempting to sacrifice life in the maintenance of duty, but being rescued from the water by the people,—had, after reaching Ningpo, expired on the road while being borne off from thence to the provincial capital; and said intendunt, seeing the routed troops come rushing into the city (of Ningpo) in perfect confusion and disorder, now at length took off his wounded self to Shingya, and there assembled together the scattered soldiers, purposing to return and defend the city of Ningpo.

On the 15th of October, Shao Yau, a domestic of Tang Tingyng, the prefect of Ningpo, reported that, on the 12th, a steamer came up to the city and sounded the depth of the water, and that early on the morning of the 13th, eight ships of war coming up near to the city, Tang Tingyng, the commander-in-chief Yu Poonyn, and the chief magistrates of the district, went out with their troops for the defence of the place; but on account of the small number of their troops and the constant firing of the enemy, they were unable to maintain the defence; and seven or eight hundred of the foreign soldiers having made a rush into the city Tang Tingyng leaped from the wall over the western gate into the moat. The people belonging to the small boats dragged him out of the water, and bore him away to the city [of Tseke?], in an apparently lifeless condition; but on the application of ginger-gruel, he showed symptoms of life and began to breathe. The other officers, civil and military, the said domestic knew not where they had gone. On passing through the city of Tseke, he saw it deserted and empty.

The fall of Chinhae, and the state of Ningpo—extremely dangerous like a pile of gun, we your ministers had already faithfully reported; and now on the 15th Ningpo has suddenly fallen, and thus this province of Chekeang has lost one of its eastern defences, and the two districts of Fungwha and Seangshin (on the south of Ningpo), are left isolated and exposed in a manner much to be regretted. (On the west of Ningpo, although the rivers and channels are rather narrow, so that the large vessels of the rebels may not be able easily to make their way upon them; yet their boats and small craft will be able to go in every direction.

On the 15th, a dispatch was received from Wang Wintan, the Magistrate of Tseke, stating that the inhabitants were living in great numbers and confusion, and that the danger was so great that it was impossible to afford any security for the defence of the place. The above named domestic, Shao Yau, has now again reported verbatim that when he passed through Tseke, the place was entirely vacated. That place being thus left without inhabitants, the people of the neighboring districts Yauan, Shingya, Hwuyke, Shauvit, Seashan, together with the inhabitants of Hangchow, are day after day removing in great numbers; and the remnants are numerous in proportion as the respective places are near to the late scene of action. Perhaps the rebels, hearing of this state of our affairs, may come either to their small craft of no cost, and improve the opportunity to make new attacks. It is feared, therefore, that Tseke and the other places on the rivers will hardly be able to maintain their defences against them. And should the rebellious foreigners not presume to enter as far into the country, still there is reason to fear that treacherous natives will seize on this opportunity to rob and to plunder. The number of these outlaws daily increasing, it is further to be feared that they will band themselves into factions hands, and give rise to internal disorders.

Pondering on this state of things, as we relate them, it is impossible to repress the bitter grief and painful anxiety of our hearts.

We, your majesty's ministers, with the other high provincial authorities, having taken into consideration the whole state of affairs, are only able, under existing circumstances, to guard and defend the most important positions, hoping thereby to secure the safety of Shaohing, and also to cut off from Hangchow the approach of the invaders. In looking at the several positions in the province, the narrows on the river Tsougo are found to be the most important. From thence, on the one side, Shuangyn and Tzeke, and other districts, may be overlooked; while on the other, defence may be afforded to Shaoubing and the provincial capital. There consequently it seems desirable to appoint soldiers for defence; and by this means prevent the sudden incursions of the rebellious foreigners, and, by repressing the depredations of robbers, keep the country in subjection, and gradually restore internal security.

At this moment, not one of the soldiers in the province is available for such service. But the 800 Tartar troops, formerly ordered from Nanking for the reinforcement of Ningpo, having not yet arrived, we have sent an express to their commander to march directly to Tsougo, and to have the 50 pieces of artillery from Kengsoo brought on also for immediate service.

Tsougo being a position of such great importance, in a military point of view, and its defences so essential to the safety of the province, it becomes in the highest degree necessary to select a man of great experience and ability to take command at that post. This done, there may be some hope of success.

By the present turn of our affairs, the people of the province are becoming more and more alarmed, and the danger is very great. Law and his fellow officers, your majesty's minister, are day and night engaged in devising means to quiet the people. But to do this is impossible.

Moreover, the rebellious foreigners, now flushed with success and eager for conquest, it is very much to be feared that they will seek out a new way to attack Chappoo, or by some channels approach Tseenshan in the district of Haening, and thus gain access to the provincial capital. Hence the presence of the lieutenant-governor is required at Hangchow, in order to give stability to that important position and prevent disorders there. All the gentry also belonging to the city, have been forbidden to leave the place.

Ching Tsoushin, late commissioner of justice in the province of Fuhkeen, is found to be an able and intelligent man, and your majesty's minister, the lieutenant-governor, has long been acquainted with his talents. On the recommendation of the imperial commissioner Taken, your majesty has already been pleased to accede to the proposal of his being put in command of troops in this province. But Ching has fallen before he could reach that post, so that his assistance there was not availed of for its defence. He has since arrived at this metropolis; and the lieutenant-governor, having pointed out to him the situation and circumstances of Tsougo, appointed him temporarily to take command of any defence that position. This officer has not shrunk back from the danger, but willingly and boldly undertaken the duties of that station; and accordingly, clothed with proper authority to act, he has repaired thither to take command and give security to the inhabitants, and to seize and severely punish traitorous natives.

Luh Tseichung, the intendant of Ningpo and Shaouling, is at present at Shuangyn collecting the scattered soldiers.

Le Tingyang, the commander-in-chief of Kechow, after having been wounded at Chulubai, retired to Shaouling, and there rallied and collected his forces; and we have deemed it right to order him to repair to Tsougo, to join commissioner Ching Tsoushin, and assist in the direction of affairs at that station.

Teohing Wanking, the provincial commissioner of justice, has been directed to repair to Shaoubing, and to remain there with the troops, to act in concert with Ching Tsoushin.

A commissariat has been established at Shaoubing, in order easily to afford the requisite supplies.

The troops which have been repeatedly asked for from Showchow, Kengsoo, and Hoopih, have not yet arrived. Those stationed at Tsougo are few, and having been already defeated, will be again the more easily shaken and moved. That by such a force the enemy will be overcome, we, your majesty's ministers, really cannot give any assurance.

The soldiers on the lieutenant governor's own establishment not being distinguished for their valor, your majesty's minister, Law, has therefore enrolled the brave and patriotic among the people, and put them under discipline. The whole number of these recruits, in and about Hangchow, is about twenty thousand. Their leaders are brought day after day before the lieutenant governor, who labors to inspire them with a sense of fidelity and justice, and at the same time encouraging them with pecuniary rewards. By this means, these troops have been somewhat emboldened; but those who fought at Tinghai and Chinghai are scattered and disheartened. Thus the regular troops at Hangchow are weak and feeble, while the recruits are wholly unused to war. Under these circumstances of extreme danger, it is impossible to give any security that either will stand to their posts.

We are overwhelmed with fear and anxiety, our strength of body and mind is exhausted, and our weakness and inability are extreme. It is not in our power to repay the imperial favor. We can only beg your majesty to direct what we ought to do, and cause us to fulfil our duty. Then great will be our gratitude.

Postscript. Your majesty's minister Law, entrusted with an important territorial government, and having within the current month lost several cities in succession, begs that he may be delivered over to the proper Board for examination and punishment, as a warning to others not to fail in like manner.

With regard to Luh Tseichung the intendant of Ningpo and Shaouling, and Le Tingyang the commander-in-chief of Kechow, with any who have been rescued from the attempt to sacrifice life in the discharge of duty, or wounded in battle and have retired into the country—his majesty's will is requested; and, in view of the present want of men, it is desired, that their examination may be delayed, and their awards or condemnation postponed, so that we may avail ourselves of any assistance which they are able to afford.

Furthermore, when we shall have made examination with regard to Tang Tingtsue, and ascertain whether he be dead or alive, and what he has obtained any information concerning general Yu Pooyun, then a separate memorial shall be addressed to the throne.

(From Hangchow) this memorial is respectfully sent by an extra express, to travel at the rate of more than six hundred le (about 200 miles) per day. We prostrate beg that the august ruler will cast on it a sacred glance, and grant instruction. A respectful memorial.

13. CAPTAIN GRATAN.—We are indebted to a friend at Ningpo for the following.

Extract from General Orders by lieutenant general air Hugh Gough, M. O. B., dated Ningpo, Nov. 4th, 1841.

"Lieut general air Hugh Gough is most happy to communicate to the forces the highly gratifying approval of the right honorable the governor-general in India conveyed in a letter, which his excellency has had the honor to receive from his lordship, and of which the following is an extract.

"I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, through captain Grattan, of H. M.'s 18th Royal Irish, of your dispatch dated 31 of June last, reporting in detail the successful series of operations in the neighborhood of Canton during the last week in May, which ended in the brilliant triumph of the British arms, over an infinitely superior Chinese force, and the signal humiliation and submission of the enemy.

"The great successes of the troops under your command, acquired, as they were, by a marked combination of skill, decision, courage and good conduct, and evincing throughout a zealous and cordial co-operation with H. M.'s naval forces, while they so highly redound to your own honor, demand also my sincerest congratulations and my warmest thanks and approbation.

"I have not failed publicly to record the testimony of the feelings with which the government of India has learnt these remarkable achievements, and have the pleasure to refer you to the enclosed copy of the extraordinary Gazette of the 7th of August, for a knowledge of the terms in which it has been expressed.

"I would add, that while it has occurred to me that the possible contingencies of the military service may require the presence of every available officer with his regiment in China, (and the public utility of captain Grattan's return to head quarters has been pointed out to me by that officer) I have at the same time strongly urged on H. M.'s government, that any honors or benefit that might have resulted to captain Grattan had he proceeded to England with dispatches, may not be withheld from him on account of his speedy return, under the opinion I have expressed to him, to a field of service, where he has been so gallantly employed."—Chinese Repository for December.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 8th Jany., 1842.

This week has been barren of news of any kind, from abroad or local. Nothing has arrived from the north, and we suspect that the Chinese government must lately have taken measures to prevent any of their official documents to get out of their offices; we at least have not for some time been able to obtain any, and even our Peking Gazette, which used to be brought us pretty regularly, have not of late come to hand, although we are in the habit of paying for them much more liberally than Chinese do.

The French Frigate Erigone, Capt. Cécille, has during the week gone over to Hongkong.

Several seizures have during the week been made of Chinese junks and other trading vessels in the estuary of Canton river, and only two days since H.

M. S. Nimrod convoyed three prizes. Chinchew junks we are told, to Hongkong, to be there condemned and sold. While these hostile measures are being executed, the trade in Canton continues undisturbed, nor do the authorities there seem as yet to have made any official remonstrances against acts, which may appear contrary to the spirit of Capt. Elliot's arrangement made before Canton. It is an anomalous state of things; on the one hand every Chinese merchant vessel which leaves the river of Canton is immediately seized, and sold for the benefit of the captors, whilst, on the other, British shipping still resorts to the port of Whampoa, and trade there meets with no obstruction, notwithstanding the hostile acts of British ships of war. By a petty sort of warfare, harassing the peaceable, industrious, and inoffensive merchant, it seems to be intended to distress the Chinese Government; while that same government is allowed by the regular British and other foreign trade, to receive a large amount of duties, and other profits, which are immediately laid out in fortifications and the purchase of arms and ammunition. We regret not to be able to perceive any wisdom displayed in such conduct of the war; for whilst the Chinese government, the legitimate object of attack, is furnished with the means to prolong its resistance, the unoffending people are deprived of their property, and must necessarily feel an increased degree of hostility towards the foreign invaders, by whom the promise, that hostilities were not directed against them, has been broken. Were the river of Canton closely blockaded, we should not find fault with the seizure of Chinese merchant vessels, as then the system on which the war was carried on, could be plainly understood, it having, ever since fighting is known, been the maxim to distress the enemy by every means in one's power; but being at peace in one place, and at open war a few miles further on, is an anomaly not easily comprehended.

It is said that the Chinese at Canton have three European Engineer officers in their pay, and this would account for the great improvements lately observed in the fortifications near the river, which, as we mentioned before, are now being built with considerable skill, far superior to any hitherto shewn by the Chinese themselves. It has been observed that some of the works near the river, although but recently constructed, have lately been pulled down, and others erected on or near the same spots, probably upon the principles newly taught them. The greatest activity still prevails in and near Canton in fortifying the river and town.

We have copied, from the Repository, a very interesting document, being a report from Yew, the Lieut. Governor of Chekeang to the Emperor of the attack of the English on Chinghai and Ningpo. It will therefore be seen that several of the high officers attempted suicide; this may be true, but from its frequent recurrence, and its having been attempted where success was near, a suspicion of its not being intended in earnest, obtrudes itself, and the reports of such acts of despair may probably be intended to divert the Imperial wrath from the offending, because unsuccessful, officers. The admission in the report now before us, of the probable insufficiency of the Imperial troops, even after they shall all have been concentrated in the most favorable position, deserves attention; Keatsen was deprived of his fortune, rank, and liberty for a like statement; has the Emperor's ear since become more open to truth?

Several mandarins have lately come here from Canton, with a view of harassing Chinese dealers; several conflicts between smugglers and mandarin boats have also happened, in which the latter are said to have been worsted. A new Taou-tai has arrived in this neighbourhood, and many soldiers are being enlisted; but courage is at a higher price than before, and whilst formerly a soldier's pay was only two dollars, six dollars a month, which the authorities now offer, are hardly sufficient to prevail on the rascals or the coolie to don a soldier's jacket.

From the Hongkong Gazette of 1st January (still published in Macao) we have made several extracts, and should have copied from it more largely had it come to hand earlier; but it was issued only last night. This number is full of interest, for not only does it contain abstracts of Chinese Official documents, relating to the occupation of Chusan Chinhae, and Ningpo, but we also find in it a well written article on the present state of the new settlement of Hongkong, which we shall copy into our next. From the official documents before mentioned, it appears that the Emperor is greatly vexed at the success of British arms, indeed his autograph reply to one of Yukeen's despatches, relating to the fall of Chusan is to the following effect: "Our feelings of indignation and wrath cannot in words be expressed"; and the Emperor further writes as a marginal note on the statement that "for six days and nights they had fought with heavy toil," these autograph words: "We read it with fast falling tears."

When His Majesty received the news of the fall of Chinhae and Ningpo, he expressed himself in similar terms of indignation, but approves of the great officers' suggestions of concentrating all the available forces at and near Hangchow, the capital of the province, which is to be defended at all hazards. Orders for troops from the surrounding provinces, to march upon Hangchow, have been given, and no peaceable overtures to the invader are yet spoken of.

It is singular that Yukeen's attempt at suicide is approvingly spoken of by His Majesty. Such acts of despair may be a proof of the sincerity of these high functionaries, but, according to the, with us, generally received notions, are anything but in favor of the supposed ability of the suicide. We extract the following from the Hongkong Gazette on the subject.

On the 22nd of October, the Emperor expresses his great regret on account of the death of Yukeen, who "gave his life for his country, casting himself into the water." He adds to his departed servant's titular distinctions, orders him funeral honors of a high class, and remits whatever there may be recorded against him in any of his official situations. His Majesty then calls to mind the death of Yukeen's grandfather, in the same manner, at Ele, during the reign of Keenlung, directs that Yukeen receive subordinate sacrificial honors in the same temple of "faithful ministers" in which his ancestor had already found a place,—promises farther honors at the end of the war,—directs all the local officers to pay to his remains every honor, wherever they may pass on the way to Peking, and sends Yukeen's brother to meet the coffin, permitting him to bring it without the city of Peking."

We have been kindly favored, at our request, with the following particulars regarding the two American Schooners Anglona and Ariel, and the race they lately run. We hear it is intended by the owners of these vessels to have very shortly another trial in a fresh northerly breeze, over the same distance lately run, and bets to some amount are made on the result.

"THE LITTLE AMERICAN CLIPPERS"

The Anglona, Capt. Turner, and Ariel, Capt. Dodd, Schooners of 90 tons, arrived some time since from the United States, both making capital passages. Notwithstanding which it was doubted by many if such diminutive craft were capable of working to windward at sea against the strong winter monsoon; but a trial proved them at least equal to any sailing vessels which have visited these waters. They were dispatched in a strong northerly; the Anglona to Nanchang completed her voyage in little over 5 days, going up in the very "teeth of the gale" in 3 1/2 days. The Ariel went to Manila where she remained 24 hours and was back at an anchor off the Praya Grande in 12 days. It was then proposed to try their speed with each other, and the 29th of last month fixed upon for

The Race,—round Lintin Island and back to the starting point, a boat anchored off the Praya Grande. They went off in fine style, at 9 h 52 m. a. m. with a strong north wind which continued about 3 hours, when Anglona had gained 3 miles to windward; it afterwards became quite moderate, when Ariel established her superiority in light winds, by gradually closing with her antagonist, taking the lead soon after rounding Lintin, and coming in 17 minutes or 1 1/2 miles a head.

Time,—Ariel 8 h. 42 m.—Anglona 8 h. 59 m. distance sailed 65 miles.

(From the Hongkong Gazette of 1st January.)

ABSTRACTS OF COMMUNICATIONS.

Received at Hangchow, regarding the movements of the Generalissimo and Commissioners sent by the Emperor to Chekeang.

Hoo Chao, commander-in-chief in Shense, was on his way, apparently, to Fuhkeen, when he received, on the 29th of October, the imperial commands, appointing him a joint commissioner. He was then on the frontiers of the province of Cheihle, from whence he wrote to the government of Chekeang, giving information of his appointment, and stating that he was about to repair to Hangchow, in obedience to the imperial commands, with 3000 men. He received, at the same time, the announcement (issued at Peking two days earlier) of the appointment of Yiking as generalissimo, together with the subordinate appointments already detailed, in the translation of extracts from Imperial edicts—This communication from Hoochao was received at Hangchow on the 29th of October.

Shortly after, a second imperial rescript arrived, ordering Hoochao to change his route, and repair, with 1000 of the troops he had with him, to Teentsin,—for which, as a place immediately adjoining the imperial abode, the Emperor began to feel alarm. The remaining 1000 of the Shense troops under Hoochao's command were ordered to continue their route to Chekeang; but of the further reinforcements from Shense, advancing at a later period in that direction, 1000 were to turn aside and join their commander-in-chief at Teentsin. Hoochao was meanwhile to associate himself with Narkinge, the Governor-general of Cheihle, in arranging the defence of Teentsin and its neighborhood.

It was between the 18th and 20th October, that Keshen was ordered to be released, that he might repair to Chekeang. He was to leave, in the suite of the generalissimo, on the 30th of October. Two other joint Commissioners, and an officer of the Board of Revenue bearing a separate civil commission, have, it seems, been appointed to Chekeang;—and a noble of the first order has been sent with a detachment of the Imperial Guards. The civil commissioner was to leave Peking, with two subordinate officers, on the 26th October; the generalissimo, with Keshen and another high officer, and ten subordinate officers, was to leave on the 30th. The officer appointed to succeed Yukeen, as Governor-general of Keangsoo, Anhwy, and Keangse, was to leave about the same time, bringing with him 1000 of the Honan troops.

These particulars are from letters received at Hangchow from the officers themselves.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

As arrangements have now been made for the opening of Mail Packets at Macao, Shipmasters and others are requested, on their arrival here, to forward all such Mail Packets to the Office of the Superintendents, where they will be opened.

By order, L. de ALMADA e CASTRO,
Senior Clerk in the Office of the Superintendents of the Trade of British Subjects in China.
Macao, 23d December, 1841.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Tinghae, 3d Oct., 1841.

Major General Sir Hugh Gough has again the pleasure, to congratulate the troops under his command, upon their success in the recapture of the island of Chusan, and city of Tinghae, on the 1st instant.

The conduct of the 55th, whose good fortune it was to land first, and who gallantly gained and cleared the heights, under a brisk and sustained fire from the enemy, was most creditable to the corps, and gave it the further advantage of being first to scale the city walls.

That of the 18th Royal Irish, who landed next, was equally praiseworthy in driving the enemy before them in spite of the resistance from the long line of sea batteries, until the regiment gained and re-occupied its old station upon the Pagoda Hill.

The well directed fire of the detachments of Royal and Madras artillery from Truinball Island, and the exertions of the Madras artillery on Chusan in getting their guns over almost impracticable ground, and opening their fire from successive points,—were alike distinguished.

The Major general was also gratified by observing the spirited manner in which the Madras Rifle Volunteers advanced, in extended order, over the hills of the city, and the active zeal of the Madras sappers, in carrying the scaling ladders over those steep, and difficult heights, and planting them against the walls.

Circumstances which it was impossible to foresee having hastened the moment of attack, the 49th Regiment and Royal Marines were not landed in time to perform all that had been allotted to them; but the Major general noticed with the utmost satisfaction the rapidity with which they moved off to support the advance.

Sir Hugh Gough addresses himself, therefore, to all, in expressing his thanks to commanding officers of columns and corps, and to the personal staff, and directs that his sentiments be made known to all of every rank under their respective command.

By order. (Signed) ARTHUR S. H. MOUNTAIN,
Lt.-col., Dep. Adj. General.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Chinhae, 13th Oct., 1841.

Major-general Sir Hugh Gough having so lately thanked the troops under his command, for their conduct on the 1st of Oct., will only now observe, that their promptitude and gallantry at the capture of the fortified heights and citadel of Chinhae, on the 10th inst., justified his warmest anticipations.

The Major general again requests, that the commanding officers of columns and corps and heads of departments, will communicate this expression of his satisfaction to all under their respective command and acquaint them that he will have much gratification in bringing their praise-worthy conduct to the notice to the Governor general and Commander in chief in India, and to General Lord Hill.

From the Hongkong Gazette of 1st January. ABSTRACT OF A SERIES OF IMPERIAL RESCRIPTS Upon the successes taking of Chusan, Chinhai and Ningpo. Lew, the governor of Chekeang, having reported, on the 5th of October, the fall of Tinghai, and requested that detachments from the best troops of the neighboring provinces might be sent for the defence of Chapoo and Hangchow, received the imperial autograph reply, in these words: "Our pleasure shall immediately be declared." And, the same day, he received a dispatch from the Great (or Privy) Council, covering an imperial rescript, delivered to the cabinet on the 12th of October. The purport of this rescript is, to reprehend the high commissioner, Yukeen, and the commander-in-chief, Yu Pooyun, for having been so little able, during half a year of cooperation, to provide against attack; and to command the Board of War to determine with rigor what should be the penalty inflicted on them; while the governor, Lew Yunko, having been this year more especially charged with the defence of Hangchow alone, is declared less culpable than his predecessor (Urknugab) was last year, and is merely placed at the bar of the Board to be judged without rigor.

In a second rescript, of the same date, the emperor informs the governor, that he has already commanded the respective governors of Hooiph and Kraucse, to send for his disposal a thousand men from each of those provinces. His majesty speaks of Chapoo, and another place somewhat to the westward of it (a jutting-out head-land), called Taenshan, as most important posts of defence; and expresses the fear, that, taking advantage of this moment of general alarm of war, the rebellious barbarians will be breaking out in every direction. He urgently enjoins the governor to recruit his local forces with volunteers, and especially to collect an extensive body of "water-braves" (seafaring men),—and to band the people together, encouraging them with the assurance, that "to exert themselves for their country is the sure way to defend themselves and their families; that if they will fortify themselves with oneness of determination, no enemy can stand against them." In this, the emperor is simply giving back to the governor the words of the latter's own propositions. His majesty desires that no attack be made, till the grand army be assembled.

On the 17th of October, the governor, Lew Yunko, received an express from the Board of War, addressed to the late high commissioner, Yukeen, which he opened, and found it to give cover to the emperor's autograph reply to the high commissioner's memorial,—as also to an imperial rescript, of date the 11th of October, transmitted by the Great Council. The autograph reply is: "Our feelings of indignation and wrath cannot in words be expressed. Our pleasure shall forthwith be declared." And as a marginal note on the statement that "for six days and nights they had fought with heavy toil, are these autograph words: 'We read it with fast-falling tears.'

The imperial rescript transmitted through the Council is nearly as follows:—"Yukeen this day reports, that Tinghai has fallen, and that he is in the first place rigorously arranging for the defence of Chinhai, at the same time preparing to send forth a force to advance offensively. From this report, it appears that, on the 27th of September,* the foreigners advanced to Chushan-mun (the channel off Forty-ninth Point), when the general Ko Yunfei (commanding the forces of the island, and having his post on Joss-house Hill) opened fire on them, and striking the mainmast of a foreign vessel, caused them immediately to sneak off again. That on the 28th, they landed on Forty-ninth Point, when the general Chin Kwongshu (commanding a detachment, posted on the heights) opened a ginnal-fire, and killed numberless foreigners. That on the 29th, they pitched some tents on the Wookwei shan (Trueball island), when our soldiers killed more than ten of the rebels. That, finally on the 1st of October, they advanced to the attack of Tinghai, when general Ko Yunfei himself aimed a gun, the shot from which struck in the magazine of a foreign vessel, and it was forthwith blown up. The rebels advanced in three columns. As the front ranks of our soldiery fell, the rear ranks advanced to take their place, till their ginnals and small field-pieces would no longer serve, when it was left to them only to throw away their lives on the battle-field. For six days and nights, they had fought with heavy toil, and had found success; but unfortunately the wind had been for several days contrary; and the sea violent,—so that the reserved reinforcements were hindered from arriving from Chinhai. Our soldiery were no longer able to withstand the enemy, and on the 1st of October Tinghai was lost.—Yukeen requests that his demerits herein may be punished with severity: let the Board with rigour determine the penalty. The generals Wang Sepang,† Ching Kwongshu, and Ko Yunfei,‡ and the acting magistrates of Tinghai and sub-perfect of Shippo, Shoo Kungshou,|| who fell in the battle, are to receive the funeral honors, &c., by law established. And let Yukeen ascertain and inform the Board of the names of the subordinate officers and soldiers who fell in battle Respect this."

* The entrance of the two steamers to reconnoitre, and their return, on the 26th, had already been reported as a partial success; and that day, though not here mentioned, is therefore to be reckoned as one of the "six." † He was posted in the town, and the manner of his death has never been learned. ‡ He fell, it is reported, in the long battery. § After receiving a severe wound in the head, he slew himself. || He was reported at the time, and it is still commonly believed, to have escaped to an island northward.

The governor Lew, having, on the 12th of October, reported the loss of Chinhai, the imperial autograph reply, in similar language of indignation, and his orders thereupon, of date the 18th of October, were received about the 24th. His majesty's first orders are to the Board of War, to make an immediate financial-report of what will be required for the military operations in Chekeang. The next commands are to Chin Keenping (mentioned in a previous translation as one of the joint commissioners with Yiking), to proceed with all speed to Chekeang, retaining still his rank of provincial commander-in-chief. Again, Yiking is appointed generalissimo, and Halanzah and Hoo Chan, joint commissioners, and they are likewise commanded to repair with haste to Chekeang. Hoo Chan's appointment, transferring him from one of the most distant provinces, appears to be owing to an earnest volunteer of his services, sent in upon his hearing of the capture of Amoy, wherein he states that he has been for some time exercising the troops under his command with an improved discipline, and has been employing skillful artificers in the improvement of their weapons.

His majesty's next commands are addressed to Ke-mingpaon, the general commanding the Tartar garrison of Hangchow, Lew Yunko, governor of Chekeang, Yu Pooyun, commander-in-chief in Chekeang, and Hang-hing, lieutenant-general of the Tartar garrison, acquainting them with the appointment of the generalissimo and joint commissioners, directing that they remain at, and give their best attention to the defences of, Hangchow, and requiring of them the utmost exertions to collect together the scattered remnants of the Tinghai and Chinhai forces,—to show kindness to those of the people who adhere to the government,—and to use every prevention against those who traitorously abandon it. He approves of the arrangements reported to him, for the defence of Showling, in sending thither the judicial commissioner of the provinces with a body of troops,—and for the assembling of volunteers and militia, for which purpose an officer had been sent out with a supply of money. Yu Pooyun, the emperor commands to abide at Ningpo, and there, in concert with the civil officers of the place to collect militia for offensive operations. He ends with demanding more accurate particulars of the fall of Chinhai at the earliest possible period.

On the 22d of October, the Emperor expresses his great regret on account of the death of Yukeen, who "gave his life for his country" casting himself into the water." He adds to his departed servant's titular distinctions, orders him funeral honors of a high class, and remits whatever there may be recorded against him in any of his official situations. His Majesty then calls to mind the death of Yukeen's grandfather, in the same manner, at Eie, during the reign of Keenlung, directs that Yukeen receive subordinate sacrificial honors in the same temple of "faithful ministers" in which his ancestor had already found a place,—promises farther honors at the end of the war,—directs all the local officers to pay to his remains every honor, wherever they may pass on the way to Peking, and sends Yukeen's brother to meet the coffin; permitting him to bring it within the city of Peking.

An express from the Board of War was received at Hangchow on the 27th of October, giving cover to an Imperial Rescript of the 17th, in answer to the report of Yu Pooyun, the Commander-in-chief in Chekeang. That (functionary, in announcing the loss of Chinhai, added that he had retired to Ningpo, which was at that moment defenceless, but which he would use every exertion to save. It was then threatened by the enemy, but it might be that they were only making a feint to draw off attention from Hangchow. His Majesty commands him to continue if possible at Ningpo; but, should that place also fall to the enemy, to retreat to Hangchow, and aid in its defence; Showling from its neighbourhood to Ningpo, might in the latter case also be found untenable;—every exertion should, however, be made for its defence, that might be consistent with a due care for the safety of the capital of the province.

On the 24th of October, another Imperial rescript was issued, consequent on having received from the general of the Tartar garrison, and other officers at Hangchow the announcement of Ningpo having fallen. His Majesty has once more to give utterance to "the extremity of his wrath and indignation." By this report, it appears, that, on the 12th of October, eight foreign vessels approached the city, and commenced a cannonade on it, when, the force therein being but "small, the place immediately fell." The Emperor, in commenting upon this subject and the arrangements to be made in consequence of the loss of Ningpo, alludes to the importance of the post of Tsaooung, a small river, having its embouchure to the northward and westward of Chinhai, which runs past the city of Showling (beyond the town, lately visited of Yuyson): sundry civil officers are ordered to be sent to Showling, and among the rest a Commissary-general to lay in a store of grain. With regard to Hangchow, His Majesty continues, officers and troops have already been dispatched thither; but it must require about two months for them all to arrive. Reliance must meanwhile be placed upon the exertions of the provincial officers.—It seems that, since the fall of Ningpo, nothing had been heard of the commander-in-chief, Yu Pooyun; His Majesty directs search to be made for him, and a true statement of all particulars to be forwarded to the court. It is further commanded, upon the representation of the governor, Lew Yunko, that the militia of the neighboring provinces shall not be sent till the moment of action arrive, lest they become, during a period of inactivity, mere bandits.

These last orders were received at Hongchow on the 30th of Oct. (True Abstract) J. R. MORRISON, Chinese Secretary and Interpreter.

HONGKONG, JANUARY, 1st 1842.

In January, 1841, Hongkong was ceded to the British crown, and the island was taken possession of on the 26th; but nothing was done for its improvement until May, when a chief magistrate was first appointed, and shortly after a Road was commenced under the superintendence of the corps of engineers belonging to the Chinese expedition. From May to August, the population increased most rapidly, and an extensive bazaar shortly followed this congregation of people, though it received several severe checks from typhoons and fires. After the departure of the Chinese expedition to Amoy and Chusan in August, permanent public buildings were commenced on the side of the island facing the present anchorage which is called by the natives "Kwan-tai-loo."

Commencing from the westernmost part of the present settlement there are at this date, independent of the temporary barracks which afford quarters for the Bengal Volunteers, one of a permanent nature for about 60 men, nearly completed,—a stone store-house of considerable dimensions ready for use,—and another smaller one in a state of forwardness. A road runs from these buildings to the bazaar, a distance of about one mile and a half, on the side of which some private buildings have been commenced, while in and about the bazaar itself some 20 permanent shops are in different states of completion.

From this latter point to the residence of Mr. Gillespie, a distance of about 2 miles, is the present scene of great activity; and on both sides of the road permanent buildings of some importance, both as to size and number, have been and are in progress of construction; while a little higher up Magistracy-hill, we see 3 or 4 permanent houses already finished and inhabited, overlooked by the Magistracy and Prison itself; and on about the same elevation, but more to the east on Government-hill a public office to serve as a temporary residence for the head of the government is just finished;—having a guard house at no great distance from it, where at present are quartered an officer and more than 60 men of the 55th foot. Near to this is the residence of the land-officer, and a small public building at present used as a post-office. Pursuing the road to the east, one arrives at Cantonment-hill, on which a barrack is nearly finished for the Madras Native Infantry, with a powder magazine a little way behind it. At the foot of this hill a small battery is about to be commenced.

Arrived at Mr. Gillespie's, the road crosses a granite bridge and ascends rather suddenly to a gap cut through a hill from which one commands a view of the whole valley and village of "Wong-nai-chung," and the road to "Tai-tam" winding up it until lost to sight among the hills in the centre of the island. If instead, however, of pursuing this road, the branch which crosses the valley and goes on east is followed, one at length arrives at the village of "Soo-keon-poo," at present a sequestered, well wooded, and very pretty part of the island. It is from the western end of this village that a point runs out into the sea, whereon an European building has already been commenced, and off which lies Kelle's island, where the government are constructing a battery. The road to the east terminates at the village of "Soo-keon-poo;" but about three miles farther is the fishing village of "Soo-ke-wan,"—a place with a large migratory population having in its neighborhood some vast stone quarries.—From "Soo-ke-wan" a native foot-path, sufficiently good to ride on, leads to "Tai-tam," which is at present a place of little note—though situated at the head of an extensive and deep bay of that name.

On the west side of the southernmost point of "Tai-tam" bay there is a little cove called "Chek-cho," the resort of large fleets of fishing-boats, and the site of a considerable town with a population of about 2000 souls,—having a very good bazaar, an extensive rope-walk, and shops well stocked to supply the wants of Chinese seafaring people.

It is at this place the government have determined on erecting a barrack for two or three hundred men, and where one capable of holding a hundred is now in an advanced state towards completion. A branch of the "Tai-tam" road will lead to this town.

Tracing one's steps westward as if continuing round the island, one at length comes to "Heongkong" proper, a small agricultural village situated in a remarkably pretty, and the most extensive valley on the island. "Shek-pae-wan," often called by the Chinese "Heongkong, Shek-pae-wan," would seem to be the sea port of Hongkong proper, and to have once been a more flourishing place than it now is. There is here, on an isolated spot the largest Chinese temple to be found on any part of the island. The port of "Shek-pae-wan," though small, is nearly land locked; and having both a northern and a southwestern entrance, it is pretty easy of ingress and egress. An island of about two miles in circumference, called "Tap-lee-chow" protects it from southwest to north, and the island of Hongkong completes the circle. There is abundance of water for a line-of-battle ship, and its only fault is in being too small as an anchorage for many European vessels; yet there may be nearly as much anchoring ground in it as in the Inner Harbour of Macao.

There is at present a small detachment of the Madras native infantry with two officers and one doctor stationed at this place; and the road has been projected and partially finished, from "Kwan-tai-loo" to it across the hills, a distance of 8 to 4 miles.

There are other villages on the island, but as no public works are carrying on, at or near them, at the present date, it has not been thought necessary in this short sketch to make mention of them.

Various materials have been used in building. At the commencement no one thought of anything better than houses constructed of fan palm leaf, called by the Chinese kwan; the next stage was having them boarded and made with doors and windows that could open and shut; then occasionally was found one room of brick, and the rest of the house of the aforementioned description. The first who set the example of a stone and brick house, was Mr. Matheson; government soon after commenced the magistracy and prison, others followed in their train, and now few Europeans think of a palm leaf house, except with certain forebodings of fever and ague. Some wooden houses have been imported from Singapore, and are at present being erected upon a lower story of stone; but for large buildings such as barracks, where space and solidity (should) no objection on the score of whole soundness exist are the principal considerations, a material made of the common soil or disintegrated rock of the place, sifted and mixed with lime, and then pounded between strong boards into solid walls, seems to be as good as anything else, and costs about half what brick or stone would do. From the great thickness of the walls, also, this material is better adapted for keeping out the heat in summer and the cold in winter; but it must be covered inside and out with a thick coating of plaster. This being well done, and care taken in having the material well mixed and pounded together, there is every reason to expect that a building so constructed will last a very long time, and indeed attain additional solidity the older it becomes. The ancient houses at Macao as well as the walls of the city are made of this material; and the Chinese may occasionally be seen, when it is required to pull some part of one of them down, cutting out bits of it with wedges and pickaxes, as if it were stone. This material is called ni-chien by the Chinese at Hongkong, caipa by the Portuguese at Macao, and the manner of making it answers to the description of the pisé of Europe. Stone is, however, best adapted for building near the sea, and it will be found to cost as little as brick.

Some wood has been brought from Singapore and Manila, but as it is dearer than Chinese wood now, and requires much more labour to work it, the latter seems to be preferred. Nothing but cheapness would induce one to use the Manila and Singapore wood for other purposes than floorings, as it is excessively heavy; and for roofs the Chinese timber will last as long as the tiles.

The productions of the Island are at present not very numerous. Round most of its villages both on the north and the south side of the island are found very fine Mango trees. The "Lichee," the "Longan," the Orange, and the Pear-tree seem also to thrive very well, the soil being deep between the rocks, and (according to the opinion of some of the gardeners from the gardens near Canton) of an excellent quality for trees of every sort, some of which have been already planted. There is not much rice-cultivation on the Island, and what there is, being only on the level parts, is likely soon to be discontinued for the cultivation of vegetables more sought after by Europeans, or to be purchased and turned into spots for building upon. Sweet potatoes, and a few of the other Chinese vegetables are likewise grown; and, doubtless, when the agricultural part of the inhabitants begin to find a demand for other than Chinese vegetables, others will be produced. Some small additional patches of ground on different parts of the Island, previously unproductive, have since its occupation by the English been brought into cultivation. Fish is abundant, and much of it is cured at "Chek-cho," as well as at other fishing villages.

Owing to the Roads and paths that have already been cut, parts of the Island are now easily got at where formerly it was difficult to go: and the dry coarse grass and fern which abounds in the hills is brought down in large quantities, and with such facility as to render it cheaper, combined with other circumstances, for Chinese boats to careers at Hongkong, than at any neighbouring places. The grass and fern are used by the Chinese for killing the insects that have eaten into the bottoms of their boats.

Many little arts are now practised among the working portions of the population, which three months ago were not known at Hongkong. Every house that is building of stone gives employment to an itinerant blacksmith, who is required to point the stone cutter's tools. Mat-trasmakers may also be seen cleansing their cotton with their oddly constructed bow—and hawkers of every description abound, as well as the various sorts of fortune-tellers, jugglers, quacks, and actors, that are seen in all well populated Chinese towns.

Lime-kilns have necessarily increased, and there are many places where the soil is adapted for bricks, so that we may some day see the art of brick making introduced. Tanning is likewise carried on pretty extensively, and the cattle that are consumed by the European classes afford the hides.

The population has often been estimated at about 15 000 souls, and it is probable this number is by no means an over-estimate. Until the population, however, gets regularly fixed, it will not be easy to obtain a census. They are hard-working, industrious, and cheerful, as the Chinese usually are; and they appear to be too much engaged with their own affairs to have time for idleness and graver crimes—which of late have been anything but of frequent occurrence among them.

There are not more than a dozen horses on the island, and one carriage; a few small flocks of sheep and some goats. Cattle for the consumption of the Europeans are easily obtained, and some of the cows have been found to afford rather a good supply of rich milk, when taken care of and fed with grain.

Many of the complaints about excessive heat, and excessive cold and dreadful unhealthiness, are being forgotten, except among those who have little else to occupy their attention—amidst the general bustle and activity of Hongkong.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 15th Jany. 1842.

By the Black Joke, from the coast, news have been received from Chusan to the 24th December, and from Amoy of 2d January, but these later dates give no additional intelligence, except that everything was continuing in statu quo. The troops at Chusan are enjoying good health, and the same at the other stations; but no new enterprises had been entered upon, nor is it likely that any movement will take place until the arrival of the reinforcements per Jupiter. With the exception of this arrival we have during the week had no news from any quarter of the Globe, and no local occurrences of any moment to report, and little blame can therefore attach to us for the barrenness of our columns.

On Thursday week last a report reached Canton that the British forces were ascending the river in order to destroy the new fortifications now erecting by the Chinese, and as may be supposed created considerable alarm among the Chinese, and the foreign particularly British merchants; and several of the latter, giving it implicit faith, immediately left for Whampoa, on arriving where, no news of the approach of the British forces having reached, it was soon discovered to have been nothing but a hoax, spread we know not whether for the sake of amusement only to the initiated few, or with a view to some financial operation. But however caused, and with whatever motive, the merchants soon returned to Canton where everything by the last advice continued quiet as before. If it was supposed that the market was to have been much influenced by exciting the fears of the Chinese, such supposition has not been verified, for we hear that with the exception of a few Chops of Tea that were hurriedly shipped off in consequence for Whampoa, to be thence sent outside, no transactions of consequence were caused by it, and the statement in the Canton Register that Teas had fallen 6 or 7 Taels is incorrect. Under the circumstances of the market at Canton at present, even supposing it really true that the British forces were approaching, we do not think the price of teas could decline so much; for although the Chinese, with a wish of placing their property beyond danger, might then be willing to submit to a great reduction, for Cash, it is well known that foreign merchants at the present moment have it not to offer, and exchanging teas for Cotton or other merchandises, would leave the Chinese in exactly the same position as regards danger to their property as if they had not disposed of their teas. We have received several communications on the subject of this hoax, which, although the authors of such deceptions, if wilful, deserve being publicly known, we refrain from publishing, wishing as much as possible to avoid personal animosities in our small community. On the present occasion, the object, if it was to depreciate the value of property by creating a false alarm, a thing strongly suspected, has fortunately not succeeded, and the only inconvenience caused by it was the trip to Whampoa and back again of the few who left Canton. That there can have been no good authority for the report that the British forces were about moving up the river, and therefore an excuse for its propagation, we have reason to know on good authority; the project having for some time past at least, not been entertained by H. M. Senior naval officer, nor is any movement contemplated now.

The foreign Engineers we mentioned last week as being employed by the authorities at Canton in erecting their new fortifications, are said to be

Dutch, and to have arrived here from Java in a Chinese Junk several months since. Their names are said to be van Schotte, van Braam, and van Schraik. Should, during the course of the year, another attack be made on Canton, it is possible, from the very much increased and improved fortifications, that the ships will suffer much on their passage up, and that they will encounter much difficulty in removing the obstructions in the river which are now said to be completed in many places, and to be of such nature that the additional sinking of a single stone laden junk will effectually bar the passage to even small boats. Not only the Macao passage, and Salt Junk River are obstructed, but a very little addition to the impediments already existing will make the second bar impassable to ships of any size. It is much to be feared that when the rains shall set in, these obstructions will cause great inundations in Canton this year. This however does not as yet seem to have engaged the attention of the Chinese authorities, who continue as intent as ever on completing the fortifications of the river leading to Canton, and on procuring arms. We have elsewhere given a translation of an Edict from the Senate of Macao, prohibiting the importation of arms into the Custom-house, and their exportation therefrom, except to sea-ward and under certain guarantees; this is all very well as far as Macao is concerned; but if it is really intended to cut the Chinese off from any further supplies of foreign arms and ammunition, the merely preventing their providing themselves through Macao, whilst Whampoa remains open, will not have the desired effect; for what is to prevent arms to be imported by neutral flags into a port, not only friendly for them, but friendly for the English? We believe that under the present system of hybrid warfare, if a cargo of arms were sent to Whampoa, and thence in boats, merely protected by the neutral flag of the ship which brought them to Canton, no English ship of war would have a right to touch them; for, with British merchant ships in the port, transacting their lawful and peaceable business there, we do not think that the plea, of the English being at war with the Chinese, would hold good in any Court of justice, in justification of the seizure of such arms.

THE LATE MR. THOMAS BEALE.—A fortnight since we alluded to the distressing disappearance of this gentleman, but hoped at the same time that nothing more serious than a temporary retirement needed to be anticipated. No intelligence whatever was received as to his whereabouts, until the day before yesterday, when it was reported that a person passing near Casilha Bay, saw the head of a dead man protrude through the sand about 30 yards distant from highwater mark, and on opening the ground a little, he saw the upper part of the body dressed in a waistcoat. Information was immediately given to the Portuguese authorities, and the Judge accompanied by his officers, and some English gentlemen, went to the spot. The body was then exhumed, and although all traces of the features had been lost by decomposition, the size of the body corresponded with that of Mr. Beale, and several of the clothes in which it was dressed were marked with his initials. Shoes and hat were wanting, in other respects the body was perfectly dressed. There remained no doubt as to the identity upon the minds of the Judge and the gentlemen accompanying him, nor as to the circumstance that the body had not been washed on shore, but buried there, the lower parts being about a foot below the surface, and the spot where it was found about 30 yards distant from high water-mark. How this unfortunate gentleman, after leaving his house, came to his death, remains matter of conjecture; it is supposed that he took refuge with some of his Chinese friends, at whose house he may have fallen ill and died; and that they, to avoid trouble or suspicion, buried him where his corpse was found. The bad health from which deceased had suffered frequently before his disappearance, renders this conjecture not improbable, and the rash step he took so few days before his death of concealing himself from his friends, may probably have been a consequence of that illness. His remains were buried last evening in the British burial ground, where the service was read by the Revd. Mr. Bridgman, and where most of the foreign residents attended on this mournful occasion.

FIRE AT HONGKONG.—Again a great part of the Chinese Bazaar at Hongkong has been destroyed by fire. A friend who has received a letter from Hongkong supplies us with the following information. "On the morning of the 14th a large fire occurred at Hongkong, which destroyed a great portion of the Bazaar, but fortunately only the malthouses; the recently erected brick and stone houses escaped. The French frigate Erigone sent her boats and men in a most prompt and praiseworthy manner to assist in extinguishing the fire; not a boat or a man from the British ships of war. The efficient and prompt conduct of the magistrate and other authorities on shore was deserving the greatest praise." We have not yet heard how many habitations were destroyed, nor whether much property was lost.

The Brig Friends, Capt. Rugg, arrived last week from Manila, was on her coming to anchor in the roads visited by an officer sent on purpose in the Hobs, and taken over to Hongkong. This second seizure we understand to be in consequence of informal papers, the vessel not being entitled to the English flag she sailed under, and we now learn that the Senior Officer, Capt. Nyas, has sent her on to Singapore, there to be adjudicated, the Court of Singapore, possessing Admiralty Jurisdiction.

The seizures of junks and Chinese trading vessels in these waters continues, and we hear among others of two junks of about 600 tons each having lately been brought into Hongkong, the nature of whose cargoes had not at the time been ascertained. We suppose they will also be brought to the hammer, as has been the fate of many others lately. We do not however cease to regret the continuance of such petty and ineffectual warfare, which, we believe, can only be approved of by those immediately interested in the prize money, but is reprobated by every body else, as long as Canton remains a friendly port.

THE ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION.

We copy the following highly interesting document, from yesterday's Herald:—

The Antarctic Expedition, under the command of Captain James Clark Ross, having just left our shores on the further prosecution of their most interesting voyage, I venture to communicate, through the medium of your journal, a few of its leading features; the cause of its equipment; and a brief account of what has been already effected, in the hope that such information will be acceptable to the public.

The science of Magnetism, has of late years been so much enlarged, both theoretically and practically; but more particularly by the gradual improvement in the manner of observing, and by the simplicity and beautiful delicacy of the instruments used for ascertaining the elements of Dip, Intensity, and Variation, that twenty years ago, comparatively little can be said to have been known respecting them.

The actual Variation and Dip certainly had been carefully observed for many years before, but the discovery of the Deviation, or Perturbations of the Magnet, is of recent date. The magnetical observations made by Major Sabine, during the first and second Polar Voyages, gave a fresh stimulus to the development of the law of Magnetism, and attracted the attention of British and Continental philosophers, to whom this law became a question of intense interest and deep investigation. Amongst them the names of Von Humboldt and Gauss, are conspicuous in the annals of science.

In the third Polar Voyage, 1824-6, extensive observations in exemplification of the important discovery of the horizontal deviation of the needle, first noticed by Professor Barlow, (Philosophical Transactions, 1823, p. 326), were made by Sir Edward Parry, assisted by the late Captain Forster; and in the year 1828, Captain Forster, at Spitzbergen, prosecuted the enquiry still further with success. Subsequently, in the celebrated voyage of Sir John Ross, his nephew, James C. Ross, the commander of the present expedition, distinguished himself, after the wreck of the ship, during four successive weary years, within the Arctic Circle, by his magnetical researches, and finally succeeded—as near at least, as could be ascertained, with the limited means of determination of which he was then in possession—in planting his country's flag upon the position of the true North Magnetic Pole, which he found to be in lat. 70° 5' 17" & long. 98° 45' 48" W.

This discovery, which formed the subject of a communication by Captain J. C. Ross, to the Royal Society, and which was read on the 10th December, 1833, gave, as may be readily imagined, a new impetus to the scientific world. Facts and observations were daily accumulating over all Europe, and indeed the study of Terrestrial Magnetism, became of interest to many who had never before considered its importance. In the year 1833, a magnetical observatory was established at Göttingen, and in consequence of this circumstance, the curious discovery was made in 1834, that the minute momentary changes in the position of the longitudinal needles, are simultaneous and corresponding at different places." This led M. Gauss to direct the attention of men of science more particularly to the subject; and the operations, of the "magnetic union" of observers was carried on with great activity under his guidance.

In the year 1836, M. Van Humboldt, who in the year 1818, had set on foot a combination of magnetic observers, in different and distant places, made a communication to H. R. H. the Duke of Sussex, as President of the Royal Society, in which he expressed a wish "that magnetical observatories upon an uniform plan, might be established in great Britain and its Colonies, with a view of making observations with those which were then making, or were in progress to be made, in different parts of Continental Europe and Northern Asia." A committee of the council was appointed to consider the best mode of carrying the recommendation into effect. A very elaborate report was consequently made by Mr. Christie, in November, 1838, enumerating many important consequences which might result from such a system of observations, and pointing out a series of stations where they might most efficiently be made." (Address of H. R. H., the President of the Royal Society, Nov., 1837.) In consequence of this, measures were taken to carry the above recommendation into effect, and the Lords of the Treasury placed the requisite funds at the disposal of the Royal Society for the purchase of instruments.

At a meeting of the British Association at Dublin in 1835, the attention of the members was called by Major Sabine to the subject, and subsequently in 1836, at the meeting of the Association at Newcastle, his arguments were renewed by the same distinguished member with much force. The consequence was, that the equipment of an Antarctic voyage was strongly recommended as highly essential to the further development of a science in which all Europe was so much interested. The Royal Society during the ensuing session (1838) took up the matter with warmth and zeal. A Joint Committee of Physic and Meteorology, of which Sir John Herschel was the Chairman, and Major Sabine and Mr. Whewell, the Secretaries, was appointed to report an opinion "on the propriety of recommending to Her Majesty's Government the establishment of fixed magnetic observatories, and equipment of a naval expedition for magnetic observations in the Atlantic Sea, and also to report generally on the subject." The Committee's report being favourable, the Council strongly seconded the recommendation of the British Association, and also proposed that fixed observatories should be erected in Canada, St. Helena, Van Dieman's Land, and Ceylon, or Madras, and at the Cape of Good Hope for the purpose, as the report states, of registering "hourly observations of the fluctuations of Variation, Dip, and Intensity, with Magnetometers on the most improved construction, during a period of three years from the commencement," and that "on fixed days, in concordance with other European observatories, 'the same elements should be observed during twenty-four successive hours, strictly simultaneous with one another, and at intervals of not more than five minutes.'"—In the month of June, 1839, the Lords of the Admiralty informed the President and Council of the Royal Society, that it had been determined to send out Captain James Clark Ross on such an expedition, and requested that they would communicate to the Admiralty any suggestions on the subject, or on other points, to which they might wish Captain Ross's attention to be called. The Council, with a due regard to the magnitude and importance of the question submitted to them, "considered that they would best fulfil the wishes of Her Majesty's Government by a subdivision of the enquiry into different parts, and by referring the separate consideration of each part to distinct committees, consisting of those members of the Society who were especially conversant with the particular branches of science to which each division of the enquiry had relation." These several committees, namely, those of Physics, of Meteorology, of Geology and Mineralogy, of Mineral and Vegetable Physiology, and of Zoology and Animal Physiology: after bestowing much time and great attention on the investigation of the subject brought under their notice, have each drawn up very full and complete reports of the results of their labours."—(Report, &c., of the President and Council of the Royal Society, 8th Aug. 1839.) The general Report which emanated from the labour of the several committees was adopted by the Admiralty, and forms the groundwork of the instructions for the voyage.

The Erebus and Terror were accordingly prepared and fitted. The vessels being bombs, were originally constructed with more than usual strength; but on this occasion they were strengthened with additional timber, both inside and out, to resist the pressure of the ice. The instruments were numerous and complete, the victualling most ample and of excellent quality, and nothing seems to have been spared by the Admiralty to perfect the equipment, and to provide against every contingency that might be expected to happen in a service of much danger and privation.

It would be foreign to the object of this communication, already extended beyond its proper length, to enumerate all the instruments on board. There are, however, amongst them three, which deserve particular notice, because it is by them that the observations on Terrestrial Magnetism, "the great scientific object of the expedition" are to be made. These are—1st. The "declination magnetometer," 2nd the "vertical force magnetometer," and 3rd, the "horizontal force, or Bifilar magnetometer." The first is for determining the changes of variation, or the deviation of the needle in its horizontal position; the second is for ascertaining the fluctuations of the Dip, or of the needle in a vertical suspension; and the third for determining directly the absolute value and the changes of horizontal intensity—in it, the needle or magnetised bar in an horizontally suspended position, having its results freed by an ingenious contrivance, and by the peculiar construction of the instrument from the effect of the force of gravity, indicates by its changes the fluctuations of the earth's magnetic force. These beautiful instruments were constructed after the plan adopted by Professor Lloyd, in the Magnetic Observatory at Dublin. A more detailed description of them would be out of place here; it will be sufficient therefore to say, that they are similar to, and perhaps an improvement upon, those invented by M. Gauss, for which this philosopher has received the "Copley medal" from the Royal Society; the highest honour which that learned body can bestow. M. Gauss's instruments are used in the continental observatories, the number of which is rapidly increasing. When the expedition sailed, the number of observatories erected in various parts of the world were upwards of forty. In these, the various observations are hourly made, and on the "term" or certain fixed day in each month, the changes are registered every 24 minutes in the 24 hours—a most mentally laborious occupation, and, but to those whose heart is in the service, a most monotonous one.

The expedition having left England, proceeded to the south; touched at St. Jago, and then made way to St. Helena, where an officer of the Royal Engineers was left to superintend the observatory—one of the fixed stations. Thence it went to the Cape of Good Hope, where another officer was left to direct the observations there. The voyage may then be supposed at its commencement. Their first visit was to Kerguelen Land, where their portable observatories were erected, and a complete series of observations made with their magnetical apparatus, and with the pendulum. There the expedition remained 3 months, and then proceeded to Van Diemen's Land, or, in the nomenclature of the voyage to Tasmania, a name certainly more euphonical, and but for the mischievous precedent of changing well established names, a more correct and legitimate one. On their arrival at Hobart Town, the fixed observatory was erected, and sufficiently completed so quickly, that before the arrival of the first "term day," the instruments devoted for this station were set up, and the necessary observations made. The establishment was then left under the direction of Lieutenant Joseph Kay, of the Terror, but under the protection of His Excellency Sir John Franklin, himself an experienced observer, by whose valuable and zealous assistance, in erecting the building and personal co-operation, the expedition had been very much forwarded.

The expedition then sailed to Campbell Island and Auckland Island, and having at each of those places made the necessary observations, proceeded on the first attempt to penetrate the Antarctic Circle towards the South Pole.

Beyond the parallel of 70° south, no other navigator had as yet penetrated, except Cook and Weddell. The former in two meridians as far as 71° and the latter to 74° S. in 34° W. The object of these attempts, particularly the latter, was merely to discover land—an "Antarctic Continent."

I have always thought the exertions of Weddell were never rewarded in a way they deserved to be. His object certainly was personal gain; but why not? From what other source were his expenses and the outfit of his vessel to be defrayed? It was a bold and daring attempt to proceed so far south, in two small frail bark. He set the example which has since been followed by the enterprising Mr. Enderby, who has fitted out several small vessels and sent them to the south to look for and publish the situation of southern land. Mr. Enderby's praiseworthy exertions have been rewarded by the discovery of land in 66° south and 164° east, of Simbirsk Island, in 65° latitude between the meridians of 116° and 118° east; then of Kemp Land, in lat. 67° south, and long. 69° east, and of "Enderby Land" to the westward of it.

The Russian navigator, Bellinghausen, also discovered two islands, one in lat. 66° S., and lon. 77° west, and the other in lon. 91° west. Within the last four years, however, some further additions have been made to the list of Antarctic lands,—first by the French expedition under M. D'Urville, and secondly by Commodore Wilks, of the United States Navy. M. D'Urville, 1828, discovered the land of Louis Philippe, in the latitude of 54° south, within the meridian of 56° and 58° west, and in the early part of January, 1849, discovered and landed on "Adelie Land," in 66° and longitude 136° east, supposed to extend 180 miles; the magnetic dip being 86°, which was the greatest dip M. D'Urville observed. Having remained sine die coasting either land or ice, and having thought himself in possession of facts sufficient for "determining the position of the south magnetic pole within a degree, and that this pole could only be in the land of Adelie itself, or in the compact ice which adjoined it," the French navigator retired.

The discoveries of the American exploring expedition, under Commodore Wilks are said to be a continent extending 1700 miles from east to west. The first sight of this land was made, as has been elsewhere noticed, by a curious coincidence, on the 19th January, the day on which M. D'Urville, at a distance of 700 miles discovered "Adelie Land." The situation of the land first seen by the Vincennes is said to be in latitude 64° 30' south, longitude 134° 11' east. It is to be regretted that Captain Wilks was not permitted by his Government to publish the particulars of his discoveries, since they are consequently put before the public in an uncertain and mutilated unsatisfactory way. I am not aware of the authority for the above publication in the Herald, and it therefore must be received cum grano salis.

The British Expedition, with these discoveries before them, proceeded on their course, having the intention, not of following the track of others, but of exploring those parts which had yet been unvisited. A southerly course from about the meridian of 166 east brought them near the eastern limit of the land said to have been discovered by the American exploring expedition. In this land, however, the American Captain must have been deceived, since the British ships passed over it without finding bottom with 600 fathoms. The Hebrus and Terror then came to a "pack" of ice 300 miles in length, through which they penetrated without delay or inquiry, and having emerged into the open sea, steered to the westward and discovered land, trending in a southerly direction, which they coasted to the south as far as latitude 78° 4' where the land seemed to take a more westerly trend. Near this point rose majestically to the height of 12,000 feet, two volcanoes, one of which appropriately named by the Capt. Ross "Mount Erebus," was activity, but the other, "Mount Terror," was in a quiescent state. From this point the ice extended to the eastward upwards of 300 miles, which prevented the ships from following the coast line of the land, which Capt. Ross considers to be part of a large island.

MAULMEIN.

From the Penang Gazette 20th Nov.

The late arrivals from Rangoon bring accounts of the landing at that place of the King and his Court, and a grand affair it must have been. At 10 A. M. on the 2nd instant, the ex King, being in charge of the Prince of Prowe, reached the old wharf at Rangoon in a boat something like a baidger, the house on which was painted white with gilt mouldings. He was accompanied by his daughter, a young lady now aged 18, and one of his wives, known as the Donabue Queen.

At 4 P. M. of the same day, the floating palace conveying his majesty was seen rounding the point making way against a strong flood tide with the assistance of numerous war boats. About six his majesty landed on the new wharf prepared for him, where he remained for the night in a bamboo residence, which was raised like magic during the day for the purpose. At about half past seven, the ex king landed at the old wharf and was conveyed in a gilt palanquin to the residence prepared for him, the ladies of his family who accompanied him, following on foot, lighted by lanterns. There were several elephants in attendance.

On the following morning the grand procession marched up the new road to the palace. Their majesties were conveyed in a splendid car, having several carriages and gilt vehicles following, filled with the ladies of the Court, many of whom also followed on foot. The road was lined on both sides with troops from the landing place to within pistol shot of the palace, a lot of them fine looking men and extremely well armed. Six elephants preceded the King, each being accompanied by 160 musketeers, 50 spear-men, and 20 men bearing banners and gilt standards. The whole affair is said to have been well got up and to have been imposing in its way. We doubt whether any so grand a spectacle has been ever before exhibited in the country. The question naturally springs up, what is the meaning of it? why is his majesty come down in this grand armed style? No one appears able to answer it.

There are various reports current relative to the number of men the King has brought down with him. It is generally supposed he has about 15,000 with him at Rangoon, and it is said he has 50,000 in reserve at Sarawah; but this is all conjecture. We suspect, ourselves, that all the numbers we have ever heard assigned have been sadly exaggerated. His majesty's artillery seems, from all accounts, to be far more complete and formidable than was supposed. It is said he has brought with him near 100 pieces of field artillery the majority of them well mounted and fit for service. It is not said who are engaged to work these guns or how they are to be dragged about, whether by elephants, bullocks, or ponies. The part of the armament which appears to have excited the greatest interest and curiosity among the natives, is the rearer and bolts. The latter are described as ranging from 30 to 70 tons, flat bottomed, pulling lots of cars, but unsupplied with either masts or guns. It is difficult to divine the motive for bringing such things down, and on using many more to be built, as we hear in the case. One would almost imagine his majesty contemplated forming a navy. If so, he is rather late in the day, and will not, we fear be very well seconded by the nautical propensities of his subjects.

There are, of course, many reports afloat as to what is about to be done in this direction by the king. One day we have confident reports of the authorities at Martaban being displaced, and the next, we hear, that Shway Ya, the Bill eg m-n's son is high in favor with the king and about to come from Rangoon to Martaban in command of some picked corps of the royal army; but we can learn nothing decisive on this subject beyond the fact that no troops have yet crossed the Bittang on route to Biling and Martaban. At the latter place, a few days ago, all the houses outside the walls of the new stockade were pulled down and the owners ordered to remove them inside. We are not aware whether any reason was assigned for this, nor is it easy to assign any. The number of men at Martaban is said to be very considerably less than it was some time ago and the fortifications there have of late proceeded languidly. There are said, however, to be parties out in the jungle, clearing roads from Biling to different points on the river.

Since writing the above a few days' late intelligence has been received from Rangoon, representing the place to be full to overflow of troops. His majesty and his sons were said to be winning golden myinmas from all by their dexterity and liberal allowance of prizes, dances, fighting, wrestling, &c. As nothing appears to have been officially announced as to the object of this visit or its duration, reports, of course, are rife on those subjects, and probably one half of them are manufactured here. We have heard, however people from Rangoon say that an insurrection, absurd; and contradictory are the reports in circulation at that place, that it is perhaps easier to form an opinion on the probable course of events here than there.—Chronicle Oct. 13.

We are without any reports this week, as to what is going forward in Rangoon, excepting one of a vague character which says that the king is to leave Rangoon on the 26th instant, to return to his capital by land via Toung oo. If this should prove true, he will have made a much shorter visit than would seem to be compatible with the preparations made for his reception; he will, also, have to diminish, very much, the number of his retinue, as a large part of it must necessarily remain with the squadron of boats which accompanied his majesty down the river, and which consists of some thousands. We shall be happy to hear that the royal presence at Rangoon has been attended with some solid advantages to the inhabitants, particularly to the European and Asiatic foreigners by whom the commercial transactions of that port are chiefly conducted.

There is a report which seems to be pretty generally believed, that an armed force of some 2 or 3000 Burmese, under the command of Nong-Shway-Ya, is within two or three days' march of Martaban.

Since writing the foregoing we have heard that the rear division of the king's retinue, arrived at Rangoon a few days after his majesty, and that there was as much noise and confusion in the town and suburbs, as might be expected from such a sudden flood of visitors. The report that it is the intention of the king to take his departure at an early day, seems to gain credit.—Ibid Oct 20.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

SIR,—You have doubtless heard of the system now pursued to the Northward, of allowing individuals to ransom their property on payment of 10 per cent on its assessed value. The following anecdote, communicated in a letter from a friend, is at once amusing, and illustrative of the beneficial operation of the system alluded to.

A native applied to be allowed to ransom a house which he pointed out, for which he offered 15 per cent. The house and property in it, were valued; the man paid 15 per cent, and removed all the property from the house. Another Chinese, who acts as a sort of interpreter, was asked what could induce the man to offer 15, when he might have got off for 10 per cent. "What induced him?" said the interpreter—"why, the property never belonged to him at all."

Q.

Macao, 20th January, 1842.

CANTON PRESS.
Macao, 22d Jany. 1842.

The only arrival of any interest during the week has been that of the Prince George transport from Chusan 24th December, and Amoy 12th January. Very few letters have been received by her, and one we have seen states that it was expected Sir Henry Pottinger would leave Chusan in about the middle of this month for Hongkong in H. M. S. Blenheim. If this information be correct, H. M. Plenipotentiary may be expected here every day. The Maudslowi with stores had arrived at Chusan after a passage of 31 days. We hear of no new movements in the north, nor do the Chinese as yet seem to have made any overtures, although it is said that a ransom for the city of Ningpo has been offered; whether it has been refused on account of its insufficiency, we have not heard. From what our correspondent Q. says, our readers will observe that the Chinese at Ningpo are allowed to ransom their movable property on payment of 10 per cent of its value, a method by which possibly piece-meal the ransom originally demanded may be obtained. Junks and other trading vessels are released on payment of the same proportion. This is different from the system pursued at Amoy and Hongkong; at the former of which places the native traders are allowed freely to traffic; whilst at the latter as many junks as fell into the hands of the ships of war are condemned as prizes, and they and their cargoes brought to the hammer. The Jupiter troopship had arrived at Amoy, whence after landing some camp followers, owing to the crowded state of the ship, she was immediately to proceed to Chusan. From Amoy the news are equally uninteresting, with the exception that a party of fourteen or sixteen gentlemen, of which Captain Smith of H. M. S. Druid was one, after partaking of a dinner on shore at Kolongpo, were all taken ill immediately after, and Captain Smith confined to his room for two days. Suspicion of poison was entertained, and it was detected that the Chinaman who sold the flour, had mixed it with Chunan, it is supposed with no more sinister purpose than fraudulently to increase its weight and his profit. All the gentlemen had by the last advice completely recovered.

When last week we stated that a report of the British forces being about to move up the river, had caused several British merchants to leave Canton, we mentioned our suspicion of the report having been designedly spread, although without any foundation in truth. We have since seen documents which abundantly prove, that the parties from whom the report emanated, were themselves led to believe in its truth, they having received the information from what was considered good authority. We take the earliest opportunity of thus stating on well founded conviction that no intention of misleading any one could have existed.

The French Frigate Erigone, Captain Cécille returned to Macao Roads from Hongkong on Wednesday last.

A fire occurred at Canton, near Shaming on the 19th instant, and reduced upwards of 100 houses to ashes.

The petty mandarines here are said just now to be very troublesome to the Chinese traders, many of whom we are told prefer a temporary absence to their "squeeze." The works of the fortifications on and near the river and town of Canton continue to be pushed forward with unabated zeal. Trade at Canton continues unfavorable to the importer, and the scarcity of money is as great as before.

HONGKONG.—We have not much news to report of this new settlement, except that of late a great many robberies have there been committed, with impunity to the thieves, whose number has probably been recruited by the many crews of junks and other trading vessels seized by H. M. Ships, and who, having lost both property and employment, can hardly have any other means left for subsistence. We heartily wish to see an end put to the present manner of carrying on the war in these waters, which cannot be conducive to the honor of British arms.

The native soldiers of the Madras 37th Regiment continue to suffer much from ill health, and their ranks are being continually thinned by deaths; whether this unhealthiness may be attributed to the climate or to other causes we have not been able satisfactorily to learn.

Lin, on rather good authority, is reported to have died; we have not learned other particulars; but, when in Canton, he suffered from hernia, and on several occasions sent to Doctor Parker to consult him, and was by him supplied with medicine and bandages.

We have it on good authority that the names of the three foreign engineers, said to be at Canton erecting fortifications, are not those we gave in our last week's paper; we owe it to ourselves however to state that we gave them such as they were communicated to us by a friend who had himself been deceived.

On Wednesday morning last at a little before 8 o'clock in the morning a fire broke out in the residence of J. A. Mercer Esq. and the flames spread so rapidly, that all attempts at extinguishing them were futile, and in about two hours, only the bare walls remained standing. A large proportion of the furniture, as well as goods in the Godowns were saved, but we are sorry to learn that notwithstanding Mr. Mercer is a loser to a very considerable amount. The house, which is entirely destroyed, is the almost only property of two orphans, who mainly depended upon its rent for subsistence. The fire communicated from a chimney to the wood-work, and was only discovered when too late. Fortunately the morning happened to be very fine, without any wind, by which the danger to the contiguous houses was lessened; had it happened on the previous day when a fresh gale from the eastward was blowing, there can be little doubt that the fire would have spread widely, particularly as during the present very dry season, the water in the wells would very soon have been exhausted. The Governor of Macao was on the spot immediately after the fire was discovered, and a detachment of the garrison was so posted, as to prevent all access of the mob to the burning house and the property saved, whilst Portuguese as well as foreign inhabitants exerted themselves to give what assistance they could in removing the property, and supplying the engines with water.

SIR ROBERT PEEL ON THE WAR WITH CHINA.

In the House of Commons on the 17th September, the Right Hon'ble Baronet said—

"I am bound to say to the noble lord the prospects of future years are far from satisfactory. The Chancellor of the Exchequer struck out from the expenditure of the present year 400,000*l.* for the operations in China: estimating for the future, he said he did not think we should be called on to provide any thing like that sum in any future year. Are these expectations likely to be realized? (Hear, hear.) I say nothing whatever of the policy of the operations in China, but I do ask if it is not probable that the demands made on us in future years for the expenses of these operations will far exceed 400,000*l.* (Hear, hear.) Here is the estimate of "the sum required to be voted in the year 1841 on account of the expenses of the expedition to China—400,000*l.*" The expense already incurred appears by the last return presented to Parliament (No. 274 to have amounted, so far as it can be at present estimated, to 625,293*l.* This paper is dated the 24th of May, 1841, and I venture to say the greater portion of the sum stated had been incurred in October, 1840. Now, you have to provide for the expenditure which has accrued since October, 1840, and what means have you of judging of its amount? This is all the information the estimate gives—"N. B. No accounts have been received from which an accurate estimate can be framed." (Hear, hear, and laughter.) I have read in the public papers some information on this point which appears to have come from tolerably good authority. With respect to the Chinese expedition, H. L. Fleeming Jenhouse, captain of Her Majesty's ship Blenheim, writing from Amunghoy, March 10th, 1841, states, "that we had been exercising for eight months the most extreme and unparalleled forbearance and kindness to the Chinese, thereby incurring an expense of probably the full amount of the remuneration we are seeking." (Hear, hear.) Depend upon it, great additional expense will be incurred. I am not implying any opinion favourable or unfavourable on the political question; I refer now merely to its financial aspect, and I say no prudent Chancellor of the Exchequer, calculating the future expenditure of the country, will omit from his estimate the probable demands of the Chinese expedition. (Hear, hear.) The noble lord wishes, or at least he makes a speech calculated to make unfavourable impressions and add to the difficulties which encompass me on my introduction to office. (Hear, hear.) I do not hesitate to say to the noble lord, I look with alarm to the growing tendency to expense in our colonial dependencies. (Hear.) Here is a paper which was presented the other day for the expenses of the civil establishment at Hongkong—90,000*l.*; so it is stated, for the present, but I cannot say how much further next year the absolute necessity which all colonial governors see more strongly than the Treasury at home may possibly carry it. (Hear, hear.) This is the position in which I am called upon to estimate the probable expenditure of the country, and make adequate provision to meet it. (Hear, hear.)

SIR JAMES GRAHAM AND MR. GLADSTONE ON THE WAR WITH CHINA AND DISPUTE WITH AMERICA.

In addressing the electors of Doncaster Sir James Graham said—

"I think it is of essential importance to the interests of England that the quarrel with China should be soon amicably and definitively arranged, but I am fearful that there are many difficulties which stand in the way. Talking of the state of affairs, there is another question which I almost dread to contemplate. I allude to our present dispute with the American Government. At this present moment a British subject is on the eve of being, or has been, tried for murder, and his life is in jeopardy. Mr. McLeod was acting under the authority of the English Government, and his release had been demanded, but had not been complied with. I assure you it requires ability of no ordinary character to prevent a war with America. Such a war no one would more lament than myself. It would be a war with a people descended from our own ancestors—a people speaking our own language; my prayer is, that the evil which I so much dread may be averted by a safe, discreet, and judicious policy."

Mr. Gladstone, who is regarded both by friends and political foes as one of the most able, best instructed, and most promising young statesmen of the present age, in addressing the electors of Newcastle used stronger and more decided expressions concerning the nature of our quarrel with China along with a similar notice of our dispute with the United States. He said, "Look at the state of foreign relations. They found the relations with the United States of America—a country whose influence on the state of trade, or the rate of labour, and rate of wages, was greater than many present could conceive, in a most critical, though he hoped not an alarming, state. If they had looked again to the state of affairs in the great Indian empire, they would find the frontier disturbed with a war of which at present there was no prospect of a termination. In China, where it had been expected there would have been established a great and lucrative trade, and a new opening for the introduction and disposal of British manufactures, it would be found that trade was impeded by a quarrel, which, he must say, reflected disgrace upon the British name."

Sept. 17th.—Yesterday the Admiralty had quite a warlike appearance, in consequence of the number of bills stuck up at the gateway of the names of ships put in commission for foreign service, and notice to petty officers, able bodied seamen, and ordinary seamen: bds. and musicians, wanted to join them: At Woolwich, Sheerness, Chatham, Portsmouth, and Plymouth dockyards, the greatest activity prevails in getting them ready for service; but some difficulty is experienced in obtaining able seamen at those ports, and at the general rendezvous, Queen's Head, Tower hill, as there is a great demand at present for the merchant service and American. The following are the names of the ships ordered for commission, and ten others are shortly expected to be added to the list. H. M. S. Malabar, Capt. Sir J. Sartorius; H. M. S. Belvidera, 38, Capt. Honourable G. Grey; H. M. S. Illustrations, 72, T. E. Erskine; H. M. S. Sigs, H. M. sloop Syren, H. M. brig Heroine; H. M. S. Thalin, 42; H. M. S. Pique; H. M. S. Aigle, 24, Sir Charles Paget; H. M. S. Harlequin; H. M. cutter Speedy, H. M. sloop Frigate Driver; H. M. S. Farmidable, 84, Sir T. Troubridge, Bart., G. C. B.; H. M. S. Isla, 44; and H. M. S. Warspite, 52, Lord J. Hay.—The following is the correct list of the places against the sitting embes for which petitions have been presented to the House of Commons:—Great Marlow, Nottingham town (3 petitions), Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, Thetford (2), Clitheroe (2), Leeds, Belfast (2), Longford, Harwich (2), Wigan, Rutland (2), Waterford city (2), Wakefield (2), Sudbury (2), Bridport Ipswich, Cardigan borough, Cork county, Kerry, Dudley, Wighton, Rochester, Athlone Gloucester city, Dublin city (this petition has been abandoned), Blackburn, Louth, Tipperary, Lichfield, Southampton town, Flint, Newry, Newport, Kin-sale, Elgin burghs, Bewellry, Reading, Penryn and Falmouth, Wareham, Newcastle under Lyme, Carlisle county, Lyme Regis, Merthyr Tydvil, Shrewsbury, Downpatrick, Barnstaple, Stafford borough, St. Ives, New Windsor, Carnarvon borough.—Total, 50 places.

*Sir R. Peel in the House of Commons in answer to Lord John Russell, on the 8th September.—If he adopted the Whig budget would it repair the deficiency? Lord Sydenham had told them that it was not safe to make the proposed alteration in the timber duties, so that the 800,000*l.* which they reckoned upon from that source was gone; the price of British sugar was so much reduced, that there was no prospect of realizing 700,000*l.* from the reduced duty on foreign sugar; and to the 400,000*l.* on which Mr. Baring reckoned from the new corn duty, 1,100,000*l.* was to be added for duty on corn included in the receipts of 1840 upon which his estimate of 1841 was founded; so that to make good the deficiency, 1,500,000*l.* would have been required under that head. Then the expenditure had been under-estimated in China alone, the real expense for the year would probably be 4,000,000*l.* instead of the 625,000*l.* in the estimate; and there was an alarming tendency to increased expenditure in the colonies—90,000*l.* was estimated as the expenditure for Hongkong this year, including the construction of a main road; Sir George Gipps had issued bounty warrants for emigrants to New South Wales to the amount of 979,000*l.*, reduced by Lord John Russell to 500,000; 155,000*l.* had been voted to meet South Australian Bills, while bills for 11,000*l.* more had been presented at the Treasury and protested; and a loan of 1,000,000*l.* had been guaranteed to Canada, and 100,000*l.* had been promised for fortifications.*

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE PRICE GOODS sale which commenced on the 8th finished on the 15th of September.

The sale of Silks, though not so large as those preceding, was greater than is usual at this season of the year. There were 102,000 pieces of Corals offered; the qualities mixed, but generally better than those in the March and June sales. For even-made parcels there was considerable animation, and some were run up, 16s to 17s being obtained for goods weighing only 12 to 12½ oz. The mixed and loose-wove parcels, though 5 per cent. higher than at previous sales, were not in so much demand. For well-made Cypria 18s to 20s was paid. There were about 10,000 pieces of Choppas and Bandannos, which were mostly sold at about 7½ per cent. advance upon former prices; fair Choppas weighing 18 oz. from 16s to 17s. There was an unusually large quantity of Tussock Cloths, 10,000 pieces; yet prices for fair quality were tolerably supported; a large parcel of inferior goods were bought in by the proprietors as low as 8s for seven yards and a half. In China Silks, owing to the advanced season, little was done, even at reduced prices. There were 3400 pieces of Pongee Silks, the major part of which was bought in at a decline of about 5 per cent. on the June sales. Figured Pongee Handkerchiefs, of which there were 2500 white and 1700 crimson, qualities very indifferent, were also bought in at a reduction of 7½ to 10 per cent. on the June prices. Grape Shawls went off at full prices. Silk Damasks the same, and the few black Silk Handkerchiefs offered realised full prices. The loss will be heavy on some lots of embroidered Aprons, sent to this country, as they are little worn, being too costly for general use. In Bengal Carahs, should the manufacture improve, the trade may be larger than it has ever been, as there is nothing to interfere with really good cloths for exportation. Choppas and Bandannos also if of good quality will sell to a limited extent, say 80,000 to 100,000 pieces per annum.

ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE THE DUKE D'AUMALE.—

On the 13th Sept. the 17th regiment of Light Infantry, with its Col., the Duke of Aumale, Louis-Philippe's fourth son, was expected in Paris on its return from Africa. Some riots in the city, on the nights of the 10th and 11th, had proved that some agent of disorder was at work; but they did not attract much general attention at the time, though about 300 individuals, between 16 and 20 years of age, all dressed in blouses, assembled on the Place du Chatelet, and began to cry "Down with Louis Philippe!" "The Republic for ever!" "Down with Guizot!" This band was immediately dispersed by a brigade of Police; not, however, without meeting opposition. Stones were thrown at the Police, several of whom were struck, and the officer in command of the brigade was dangerously wounded in the head and knee. From the Place du Chatelet, the rioters, directed by chiefs wearing blouses and caps, proceeded the Rue St. Denis, singing the "Marseillaise," and crying "Down with Louis-Philippe! the Republic for ever! Blood! we must have blood!" It was observed, however, on the morning of the 13th, that arrangements had been made in the route by which the regiment was to pass, such as are usual for the prevention of an émeute; there was, however, no appearance of any public excitement at 11 o'clock. The 17th Regiment had received unusual honours in several country towns, and it is said that the distinction had caused a bad feeling in the army. It arrived in the neighbourhood of Paris by the Orleans railroad on the appointed day; and it was joined by detachments by the Chirassiers and Municipal Guards. Exactly at noon the column entered Paris by the Gate of Vincennes, with the Duke of Aumale at its head, and a little behind him two of his brothers, of Duke of Orleans and the Duke of Nemours. The Duke Aumale looked well, and was much cheered by his campaign; the soldiers were so much blackened that at the first glance they looked like a band of Negroes; but though meagre, they were fine, well-knit men. At the gate they were received by general Payl and a brilliant staff; and some young ladies presented a nosegay to the royal Colonel. The troops then proceeded through the Faubourg St. Antoine. The streets were a good deal crowded to witness this procession; which was rendered extremely curious by its being preceded, accompanied, and followed, by several hundred young fellows on blouses, who, it is believed, were members of the secret societies; many mixed up with the soldiers. Just as they reached the Hospice St. Antoine, a man suddenly presented himself holding two pistols, which he snapped at the Duke of Aumale. Only one of the pistols went off. Neither of the Princes was touched; but lieutenant-col. Levaillant, the second officer of the 17th, was slightly wounded in the knee; and his horse was wounded in the eye, the ear, and the breast, so that it died. The 17th immediately lowered their muskets, and were about to charge the mob; but the Duke of Orleans rushed to the front and prevented it, ordering the soldiers to ground their arms. The people ran back, bearing the assassin with them; but one of them seized him by the hair and prevented his escape. He was dressed in a frock-coat, covered with a short-blouse called a bourgeron—for the purpose probably of concealing his weapons. He was immediately taken to the Conciergerie, where he was examined by M. Rouchy. It appears that the assassin—who, according to some of the journals, is only 27 years of age—had formerly been a soldier, but, having a furlough at the time of the riots at Lyons, was wounded at Croix-Rousse. Since his discharge from the army he had resumed his original occupation of a sawyer, but being naturally idle and given to drink, he worked but little, living upon the earnings of a washerwoman with whom he cohabited. The moment the escape of the Princes was ascertained, the people testified their joy by loud shouts of "Vive le Roi! Vivent les Princes!" The troops, after a short delay, proceeded to the Rue de Richelieu; where the march was stopped for some time. At two, the King, accompanied by the King of the Belgians, the Duke of Saxe Cobourg, the Duke of Montpensier, Marshal Soult, and a numerous staff, all on horseback, awaited the arrival of the young Duke and the 17th in the court of the Tuileries. The Queen, of the Belgians, the Duchess of Nemours, the Princess Adelaide and the Princess Clementine, were placed under the Pavillon de l'Horloge. The gates of the Place du Carmusel opened, and the Duke of Anjou entered on an Arabian horse, followed by some officers. The father and son embraced; and the King thanked the Prince for his valiant services in Africa. He then addressed some of the other officers in obliging terms, and gave Colonel Levassier one of the finest horses in his stables. Soon after, the regiment entered the court, formed, and was reviewed by the King in person. At four o'clock it resumed the march for Neuilly, and was present at the banquet given to its colonel by the King and Queen.

The Moniteur gives a corrected account of the man who shot at the Princes. His name is not Pappart, as it was at first supposed to be, but François Quenisset.

He was born in 1814, at Sellen, which is not far from the baths of Plombières in the east of France. The original reports were wrong in many particulars: he never was a soldier in the 17th regiment of light infantry, nor could he have had any cause of vengeance against its colonel or any of its officers. Quenisset enlisted in 1832 in the 15th regiment; in 1835 he insulted his corporal, and was condemned to five years' imprisonment. His time of imprisonment was commuted to a year's; but he escaped a few days before expiration of his time, and came to Paris, where he lived in different quarters under the feigned name of Pappart. Under this name he was condemned to 8 months' imprisonment for assault. Pappart, however, was really the name of a man well known to the police as a vagabond of the worst character; and Quenisset was in possession of his papers, having stolen them; it is supposed. Quenisset has been pined with wine and has opened his mouth to his keepers. He has accused several accomplices and is hourly adding to the list. It is said that he has already accused 23; and that 7 of those are seriously implicated. They all, however, deny any knowledge of him or the conspiracy. The correspondent of the Morning Post says that four principals were immediately engaged in the attempted assassination—Quenisset; a second, who lent him shoulder for Quenisset to take him from, and a third who took Quenisset's second pistol, and handed it to the fourth, who dropped it in the crowd.

The fiscal measures of M. Humann continue to create excitement in the departments. The National Guard of Ville Nouvelle is dissolved by royal ordinance, for having expressed a decided opinion against the measure. M. Humann seems resolved to carry his plans with a strong hand.

At Clermont rebellious movements occurred on the 9th Sept., in which several soldiers were killed and wounded. A large number of the rebels fell in defence of the barricades they had erected. The pretext for this insurrection was that which was used at Toulouse—the census. It appears the inhabitants refused to open their doors to the fiscal officers; who, with the municipal authorities, were assailed with stones. The survey was interrupted and several arrests were made. At one o'clock it was resumed, and with it the rioting. The military were called out, but remained passive until several of them were hurt. They were then ordered to fire, and many rioters were wounded. The disturbance, however, was not quelled; barricades were raised; two gunsmiths' shops were rifled; after a truce during the night, the tumult was continued on the 10th, when four soldiers were killed, and fifteen or sixteen wounded, the "rebels" at the same time "sustaining a considerable loss." The house of the Mayor was destroyed, and the Paris mail was delayed. The firing ceased at eight in the evening. On the 11th all was quiet; and on the 12th the authorities had the command of the town. The Lyons papers represent the destruction during the riot as excessive: all the papers at the civil offices as well as the furniture were burned, and the Prefecture was only saved by discharges of grape. Some accounts speak of artillery having swept the streets, and say that nearly 100 citizens were wounded. The Gazette d'Auvergne was seized for having given a "perfidious report of the events." On Sunday reinforcements to troops were sent to Clermont from Paris. The peasants of the department of the Upper Alps are said to be in open opposition to the resurvey.

A riot occurred at Macos-on-Saone on the 10th Sept., from the refusal of the porters engaged in the shipping of wine to allow other persons, who had been licensed by the Mayor, to share in their work. It was not suppressed until the military had fired upon the rioters. A woman was killed by them; two porters were shot by the troops; another person was killed; two more were so severely wounded as to be without hope of recovery; and six others were very severely injured.

The Moniteur publishes royal ordinances, appointing Count de St. Anlaire Ambassador to her Britannic Majesty, the Count de Planchat Ambassador to the Emperor of Austria, and M. de Salvandy Ambassador to the Queen of Spain.

The Paris Commerce publishes a letter from Genoa, of the 12th instant, announcing that the Jesuits, who are all-powerful with the King of Sardinia, had so artfully manoeuvred as to induce him to affix his signature at the bottom of an edict for re-establishing the Inquisition, but that the ministers had obstinately refused to sign the decree; which could not, consequently, be carried into execution.

AMERICA.

Our accounts from New York are to 15th September.

The President had vetoed the Bank Bill, which was passed by a majority of 31 in the House, though only 1 in the Senate; Mr. Tyler however sets the majority at naught, simply because his own private and political opinion on the point does not coincide with theirs. His message on the subject is of considerable length. The reasons assigned by the President for the veto, which he seems to have signed with reluctance, are—because the bill may justify discounts of the most objectionable character, because no limit is prescribed to premiums on bills of exchange; because a resumption of specie payments would be liable to postponement, and because a charter for 20 years is too long. Mr. Tyler states that he differs from Congress with pain, and he certainly holds out a hope that a bank, or fiscal agent bill, free from the objections he has named, will be sanctioned by him in another session of Congress. Never was the almost despotic power of the veto more fully developed than by President Tyler, who has now extinguished two bills of Congress within a month. The Whigs have every right to complain, for they elected Mr. Tyler to be Vice-President of the United States; and now that the death of Gen. Harrison has raised him to the chief magistracy, he exerts his power to extinguish the measure which has ever been the chief darling of the very party that exalted him to greatness and station. This veto appears to be a privilege capable of being used in a manner by no means consistent with the free spirit of Republicanism, as it gives to one man the power of crushing the majority, and thus of defeating the will of the people.

The extra session of Congress was adjourned on the 13th. The vetoes of the President had caused a great sensation in the cabinet, the whole of whom, except Mr. Daniel Webster, had resigned, and the following nominations were confirmed:—Walter Forward, Secretary of the Treasury; John McLean, Secretary of War; A. P. Upcher, Secretary of the Navy; Charles A. Wickliffe, of Kentucky, Postmaster General; Hugh S. Legare, Attorney-General; Edward Everett, of Massachusetts, Minister to the Court of St. James; William Hunter (now Chargé d'Affaires), to be Minister Plenipotentiary to Rio de Janeiro; Robert W. Walsh, Secretary of Legation to the same; William Bulwark, of Virginia, Chargé d'Affaires to Naples; James D. Doty, Governor of Wisconsin; Major S. Churchill, to be Inspector General of the Army, in the place of General Wood, promoted.

THE McLEOD CASE AND THE BRITISH MINISTER.—We have made more particular inquiries relative to the information communicated to us, that orders from the British government came out by the last steamer (the Britannia), instructing Mr. Fox to demand the immediate release of Alexander McLeod, or his own passports. The gentleman from Halifax who brings the information is highly respectable. Sir John Harvey (who came out in the Britannia) told him that two days before he left London he was at the colonial office, and was there informed that despatches of this character above indicated were preparing, and would go out by that steamer. The intelligence comes to us as direct and through such trusty hands, that we do not see how it can well be erroneous. The following paragraph from the Philadelphia Ledger goes to confirm the above statement:—Exciting Rumor.—A demand for the Release of McLeod.—It was correctly reported at Washington, on Tuesday evening, as we learn from the correspondent of the Baltimore Sun at the city, that Mr. Fox the British Minister, has called on the President, and stated that he would soon lay before him letters from his government demanding the release of McLeod, or if the demand was not complied with, he was then instructed to demand his passport, and return home immediately. The last steam ship which arrived from England brought despatches for Mr. Fox, which may be those referred to.—New York Journal of Commerce.

A letter date contradicts this statement of a peremptory demand for the release of Mr. McLeod, adding that nothing new had occurred in the relations between the two countries.

UNITED STATES.

The Columbine, Halifax, mail steamer, arrived at Liverpool on the 14th ult. She brought papers from New York to the 31st. President Tyler had vetoed the Bank Bill. He had stated his reasons for the veto which had created the utmost indignation; and he was accused of "treachery," and of running counter to the principles that raised General Harrison and himself to power.

The arrival of the steamer Britannia at Liverpool on the 20th ult., enables us to give intelligence from New York to the 15th, from Boston to the 16th, and Halifax to the 18th ult.

The trial of McLeod had been appointed to take place at Utica on the 27th; a panel, consisting chiefly of Quaker Jurymen, unfavorable to capital punishments, had been carefully selected, as likely to give his case the most indulgent consideration; while a speech, in a highly pacific strain, had been delivered in Congress by Mr. John Quincy Adams; so that every rational hope may be entertained that, by some unknown mystical process (not, certainly, by forensic justice, or by reasonable negotiation,) Mr. McLeod will at length be released from his long and humiliating confinement; but opinions on the subject materially differ, according to the feeling of the parties who express them.

Resignation of the Cabinet.—The President, in the independent exercise of the right vested in him by the Federal constitution, had vetoed the second Bank Bill, and stated his reason at great length in a second message to Congress on the 9th ult. This resolute proceeding on the part of Mr. Tyler produced an immediate effect upon his ministerial friends. A resignation of the offices of those who had hitherto acted with him, with the sole exception of Mr. Daniel Webster, took place immediately, and the extra session of Congress was prorogued on the 13th. The matter has caused an extraordinary sensation in the whole Union.

The same packet which brings the intelligence brings us also the names of the new administration. The cabinet appointments confirmed were as follows:—Walter Forward, Secretary of War; A. P. Upcher, Secretary of the Navy; Charles A. Wickliffe, of Kentucky, Postmaster-General; Hugh S. Legare, Attorney-General.

IMPORTANT INTELLIGENCE.

NEW REVOLUTION IN SPAIN.

The journals of Bordeaux give the following important telegraphic despatch.—

On the 2nd instant, at 5 o'clock in the morning Gen. O'Donnell, at the head of two Battalions took forcible possession of the citadel of Pampeluna in the name of Queen Isabella, and her mother.

Gen. Riberio was still in the city with 300 men, and the national guard remained faithful to him.

A journal adds that O'Donnell had immediately commenced his march upon Madrid.

We abstain from comment upon this extraordinary movement. The capture of a citadel, so important in so easy a manner, has surprised every body.

Paris 5th Oct. 1841.

The attempt of O'Donnell against the Regency of Espartero has produced a great sensation at Paris.

From the Augsburg Gazette of 2d instant we learn that the affair of Aquila, in the kingdom of Naples, was a plot to overturn the present dynasty. Many arrests have taken place.

The National has been condemned for reflecting upon its sentence of acquittal, in which it represented the king—the principal conspirator against the lives of the Royal Dukes! The editor to suffer four months of imprisonment, and to pay five thousand francs fine.

This is the first time that it has been condemned by a jury. The punishment, looking at the offence is most lenient.

The Minister of the Interior continues to receive congratulations (for the king) on account of the escape of the Royal Dukes from the late attempt.

We hear through Germany that Great Britain had proposed to all Governments of Europe to disarm, in order to maintain peace on an economical plan.

A serious dispute has arisen between Holland and Prussia in reference to custom house duties, the sovereign of the former country has threatened, to withdraw his ambassador.

SPAIN.

The anniversary of the Revolution of September was celebrated with much eclat but perfect tranquillity at Madrid.—Espartero reviewed the National Guards; by whom he was cordially received. In the evening the city was illuminated.—Don Pedro Cincos, Captain-General of New Castile, had been appointed commander-general of the exterior royal guard, and general Miguel de la Torre had succeeded him as captain-general of New Castile.—General M'Donnell, who was commander-in-chief of Don Miguel's army, and some time since a prisoner at Oporto, has been arrested, and is in confinement in the Castle of St. George.—The guerrillas continue augmenting their numbers, and making payments every fifteen days to their followers, who are now forming into regular and well equipped bodies. The self-styled Colonel Casimiro, one of the most daring of these marauders, was on the 18th shot by his own party, from suspicion of his fidelity to their cause.—The Madrid papers mention the appearance on the Spanish frontier of a Miguelette and Carlist band, commanded by a Carlist officer, and tacitly sanctioned by the Portuguese troops.

CAUBUL.

India Gazette 24th November.

Letters from the Nor west are now beginning to drop in, but somewhat irregularly, affording us intelligence both from the Candahar and Caubul quarters, which enables us to give a more clear and detailed account of recent occurrences, than we have yet been able to lay before our readers. We are sorry to say that there is nothing very satisfactory in these accounts, and the apparent unwillingness of Government to publish the official reports, contrasting so strongly with the alacrity they have shown in putting forth, for public information, the despatches relating to the capture of Amoy, seems to imply that a similar conviction obtains in high places. We earnestly hope that we have been deceived, but from the information now before us, it appears that there has been something worse than mismanagement, and that too in a quarter, where no one would look for anything, but the utmost steadiness and gallantry in action. It is so serious a thing to publish reports of the misbehaviour before the enemy of a British regiment, or portion of a British regiment, and such reports are prima facie so incredible, especially when they relate to a corps which has so often been tried in action, that we shall at present only state that such reports have reached us, and we are sorry to say, in a somewhat circumstantial form.

The following we believe to be, in the main a correct summary of the recent events, between Cabul and Jullalabad, compiled from two or three letters.

"It would appear that a certain sum of money had previously been paid to the people of that part of the country for the purpose of ensuring the safety of the dawks, &c., but an attempt was made by McNaghten to reduce this tribute by one-third, the consequence of which was, that the whole country rose en masse and the roads were instantly closed. At first only one corps, the 35th was sent out. At Bootkha, the first march, they were attacked and lost some men; upon which the 13th L. I. was sent to reinforce them, and the two corps with 2 guns under Lt. Dawes, proceeded into the defile. The artillery, which was leading, came upon a breast work which, however, must have been a rather bad one, as the guns managed to get over it. A sharp fire then opened from the hills upon our party, who however, succeeded in forcing the pass. After this had been done the 35th and the guns took up a position at Koord Kabul, while the 13th L. I. returned to Bootkha and threw up intrenchments. Both corps were chafed that night. Jenkins, of the 35th was mortally wounded, and died universally regretted. After this, the regts, again waited at Koord Kabul, and were joined by Captains Abbott, and Backhouse with his mountain train, who had just returned from a bloodless campaign in Zoormut. The whole party then proceeded under the command of Col. Dennie, to Teesen, where they found the hills occupied by the enemy: to dislodge them and capture some forts occupied the whole day. The mountain train is said to have done good work, as well as Abbott's 24th Howitzers. Besides Jenkins, E. King of the 13th L. I. was killed at Teesen; and S. Le, Mein, Oakes 13th L. I. and Younghusband 35th, wounded in the pass; and Lt. Frere of the 13th and Orr, of Shah Shoojah's Sappers, wounded at Teesen. Sale's Brigade was under orders to return to the Province. The action at Teesen took place on the 23d or 24th, the pass forced on the 12th."

"The force left Teesen, supposing that all had been arranged; but they were fired upon the whole march to Zeyet ch Babu, and again on the road, to Katturang. In the 3d march they suffered more, and Jennings of the 13th was slightly wounded. At Jugduluck, 70 camels were stolen by the Ghilzie—and after they had retained them some time, the rebels (as they're called) offered them to Macgregor at from 25 to 11 Rs. each. The diplomat closed with their offer as their force could not move without them. The march from Jugduluck to Soorkah proved a severe one, our loss was considerable, upwards of 100 killed and wounded. Capt. Wyndham (35th) I regret to say, amongst the former—Coombs (35th and Rattray Jennings, and Holcombe (13th) wounded. The 37th had been left in position near Teesen to keep the road open; but the other corps had arrived at Gundamack. At the last named place, the troops had been under arms several successive nights, this was before the arrival of the 13th and 35th. The chiefs who had formerly entered into negotiations with Macgregor, afterwards came in and declared that they had nothing to do with the business after the troops left Teesen."

The following is a list of the officers killed and wounded, mentioned in our letters:—

SINGAPORE.

From Sing. Free Press of 19th Dec.

On Tuesday afternoon the Clipper Arcturion, which left this port for China on the 2d ult., returned on the roads under Jury masts, having on the 16th November, experienced a severe typhoon in the China Sea in lat. 14° 36' North, and Longitude 14° 40' East; during which she was compelled as a last resort to cut away all her masts. At 4 in the morning the Barometer gave indications of the approaching tempest by falling from 30 to 29 inches, when, thus forewarned, the hatches were battened down and every preparation made to meet the gale. In a few hours more it was blowing a perfect hurricane, with the sea rising in pyramids in every direction, and making a clean breach over the vessel; which was now nearly on her beam ends, with both of her quarter boats carried away. They now attempted to heave the guns, but could only succeed in getting one of them over board, while they had to beat out the Lee port to give a passage to the heavy body of water on the decks, and tried to put the vessel before the wind, but she refused to answer her helm. At about half past 8 A. M. an awful gust accompanied by a tremendous sea threw the ship on her beam ends, the sea coming up to the coats of the masts, and the lee bulwarks and part of the forecastle being under water. The dead lights were beaten in, partly by the violence of the sea, so that the deck and cabins were covered with water, and she seemed to be going bodily down.—With the utmost difficulty, owing to the fury of the blast, and the frightful sea that was breaking over her, the masts were at last cut away, and it appeared that nothing but their fortuitously all going nearly at the same time could in so critical a moment have saved the vessel. Being now clear of her mast she gradually righted, and fortunately for all on board, kept quite tight during the strength of the gale. Captain McIntyre having rigged jury-masts, now endeavoured to make Manila as the nearest port, continuing in that direction until the 23d November, when finding it impracticable to make head against the monsoon in the state to which the ship's rigging had been reduced, she bore up for this port.

On the evening of Sunday last the signal was hoisted for a Steamer to Eastward, and from the direction indicated and the accounts that had been previously received of them, it was supposed to be one of the iron Steamers, either the Ariadne or Medusa, that started from this together for China on the 23d of last October. This conjecture proved correct, the steamer turning out to be the Medusa Captain Hewett, which had been compelled to put back to this port from want of fuel; and the following are the particulars that have been communicated to us of the voyage. On the 2nd November, when about 120 miles from Manila, the Ariadne signalled that they had burnt out all their fuel, upon which Captain Hewett, who was the senior officer, hung out the signal for her to return to Singapore; and his own vessel having still sufficient fuel to carry him on to Manila, he continued his course for that port, which he reached on the 3d Nov., but with scarce an ounce of fuel remaining. Having taken in here about 30 tons of wretched coal, and as much wood as she could stow away, even to filling the cabins with it, the Medusa got under steam again on the 9th, and on the 13th, was off the Great Ladrone, when they encountered a gale from the North East, and having again burnt out all their fuel, they were compelled to bear away on the following day. Here their companies shifted two points to the Westward, and at daylight they found themselves in Hainan North Bay, in the midst of breakers, and seas running mountain high; to escape from which dangerous situation they had recourse to breaking up the ship's bulwarks and every piece of available timber on board, and thus provided a sufficiency of fuel for two hours steaming, by which they escaped the perils that surrounded them, after they had nearly given up all hopes. For five days they had no observation, but managed to run down into Lumaraigo Bay, where they procured Wood and Water, but the former too green to burn. In a day or two afterwards they got amputated, and were enabled to rectify the error in the compass when they prosecuted the remainder of their voyage here in safety.

Captain Hewett of course expected to find that his consort had reached this port long before his own vessel—but she having neither arrived here, nor been otherwise heard of, apprehensions began to be entertained of her ultimate safety.

The Medusa is now under orders to proceed to Maulmain, for which she will set out in the course of a few days.

Mr. A. L. Johnston, one of the oldest residents of the Settlement, and who is not more extensively known than he is universally respected in this and other parts of India, took his departure in the course of the week in the Charles Grant on his return to Europe; and the following is the translation of a farewell address to him by a numerous body of the most respectable Chinese merchants of the island, on presenting him a piece of Plate of the value of one thousand dollars, as a testimonial of their regard together with Mr. Johnston's reply. This is not, however, the only proof of the esteem in which he is held by the native community that Mr. Johnston carries with him, as several other Chinese merchants joined together in raising another subscription of 500 dollars for a splendid Gold Snuff Box, while the Arab merchants subscribed a like sum to present him with a token of their regard also.—bid 23d Dec.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Sir,—The subscription collected by Capt. Hall and myself for the widow of my late chief officer Mr. J. Wainwright, who was murdered at Singan last Sept., amounts to £ 1137, which sum I have paid into the hands of J. A. Durran Esq. at Macao, for remittance to England.

I remain Dear Sir,

Yours very truly,

GEO. J. HUBERTSON.

Brig Lyra, 21st Jan. 1842.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 29th Jan'y. 1842.

The Syph from Calcutta 1st December and Singapore 23th Dec. arrived at Hongkong on the 2d inst. and several parties whose friend, there forwarded their letters to Macao, were fortunate enough to obtain them as early as Tuesday morning the 25th, upwards of two days in advance of the arrival of the general packet which was not received here till the afternoon of the 27th. This delay was owing, we learn, to the letters having from the Post Office at Hongkong been put on board a lorcha, which instead of making the best of her way to Macao, was delayed a couple of days in taking in a cargo of goods from one of the ships outside. As may well be supposed much inconvenience was suffered by those whose correspondence was on board the Lorchs; we did not receive our papers till late on Thursday afternoon, and have therefore not had as much time as we wished to make the most interesting extracts from the papers brought by the Overland mail via Bombay and Calcutta, and sent on here per Syph.

The English news are of very little interest, for which reason our extracts of them are but scanty. A motion in the House of Commons by Mr. Fielden that the distress of the working classes throughout the country was so great that it demanded the instant inquiry of Parliament; and that no supplies be voted until such inquiry be made was lost by 149 to 41. During the remaining part of the month the house was almost exclusively occupied discussing the estimates, voting supplies, and the passing of a set of bills for six months; the Poor Law and other acts about to expire. As all the business ministers intended to enter upon would be finished on the 7th, it was expected that Parliament would be prorogued on the 8th of October.

For the Commercial Intelligence, I refer to our extracts, as also to what has been said with regard to China affairs.

The trial of Mr. McLeod was to take place on the 27th September, and the question of peace or war, with the United States will greatly depend upon the settlement of this affair. An atrocious attempt had been made on the life of the Duke d'Anguine, the French King's fourth son, but had fortunately been unsuccessful, and the assassin secured. A new revolution in favor of the Queen. Recent had broken out in Spain, and General McDonnell was marching upon the capital threatening the Government of Espartero.

From India the accounts from Afghanistan are anything but satisfactory, as will be seen from foregoing extracts, the 35th M. N. I., and 13th L. I. having suffered considerable loss in several engagements with the Ghiljes. The accounts from Malabar give very little news of a positive nature, although it was conjectured that the intentions of Tharawalle, who continued inactive at Rangoon, were peaceable.

From Singapore we have the gratifying intelligence, of the arrival there, of the Indra, and Stenger Medusa; for particulars we refer to our extracts.

Our papers from Calcutta are to the 28th of December, and from Singapore to 23d December;

A meeting of several of the Foreign Merchants was held on the 27th inst. at the office of Messrs Dent & Co., to take into consideration the expediency of adopting some steps to remedy the present scarcity of a circulating medium. The majority appeared of opinion that it would be desirable to legalize Mexican Dollars and Sycee; or rather that all parties approving of such an arrangement should agree to receive and pay each other in either of those kinds of Bullion, on the same terms as in chopped or pillar dollars, provided the Hong merchants agree to receive the Republican dollars without discount.

If the Chinese can be brought into so reasonable an arrangement, the anomaly which has so long existed in money matters in China, will be at last removed, and it would certainly appear absurd to any one but the Chinese that difficulty should be experienced in passing the Republican coin at the same value as the pillar dollar, seeing that the former is of somewhat greater intrinsic value. The object of introducing Sycee into the currency, as a temporary arrangement, is to increase the circulation until a sufficiency of Mexican dollars can be imported; but as large Sycee at par is intrinsically much more valuable than Mexican Dollars at par, the Sycee will of course rise to a premium in proportion as the quantity of dollars in China, in actual circulation, becomes adequate to the wants of trade.

The pillar dollar has of late become so scarce all the world over that it has ceased to be a fit medium of circulation; and as it is no longer equal the substitution of the Republican dollar, or some other money, appears absolutely necessary.

By the Maudu from Chusan and Amoy, and H. M. S. Cruizer from Amoy, dates to the 14th from the former, and 23d January from the latter have been received. The intelligence they convey is of great much importance. The Chinese authorities continue their silence, and H. M. Plenipotentiary does not seem disposed to make the first advances. The only military movement that has taken place has been on the town of Yunnan, and we may say the account of that from the last Canton telegram.

Later reports have reached the British authorities that a body of Tartar troops, were at the city of Yunnan; therefore Lieut. General Sir Hugh Gough and rear-Admiral Sir William Parker, with about 600 soldiers and seamen went up to that city in the two steamers. The Tartars attacked them on landing, but were repulsed, with a loss of about 150 killed; and a man was lost on our side, and one person only slightly wounded. Sir Hugh Gough opened the rice granaries to the populace, and then advanced on another town higher up the river, called, Sa ge, where the public granaries were also opened to the people; the British detachment then returned to the steamers.

The last advices we understand, go far to confirm the report mentioned by us last week, of Sir Henry Pottinger's intended departure from Chusan for Hongkong; which would take place immediately on receipt of the August mail. The despatches by this mail were sent up in the Belle Alliance, which vessel, unable to make head against the northerly gale, put back to Hongkong. The despatches were handed by H. M. B. Chong-tsun of whose return to Amoy we have heard. We earnestly hope the arrival of H. M. B. Pien-tsu will put an end to the, to say the least of it, anomalous state of warfare in these waters. Captain continues to be treated as a friendly port, yet outside the water-terine trading junks continue to be seized, adjudicated as prizes, and sold at Hongkong. Only the day before yesterday H. M. S. Nimrod entered in the roads with three junks captured in the Broadway; she sailed again yesterday for Hongkong conveying her prizes. The profit, as far as prize money is concerned, from these coasting vessels cannot be great; honour, cannot be derived from such contemptible antagonists, if antagonists such can be called who offer no resistance; distress cannot be caused to the Chinese Government by such acts, for we well know how callous it is to the sufferings of comparatively small portions of its people; therefore they cannot weaken the government; they cannot conduce to the honor of the British arms; they cannot lead to the Chinese being brought to entertain a proper estimation of the power of British arms, and they cannot, except in a very small degree, be advantageous to the invader. Let us therefore hope that either peace or war will soon be decided on with respect to the province of Canton and her waters.

Although our accounts from Amoy are somewhat later than we were in possession of before, we have nothing new to communicate, excepting that the various and ships-companies (with the exception of transport Frankfield in which the small pox had broken out) enjoyed good health, and that provisions were cheap and abundant. At Amoy, it is stated in our last, the system of seizing and condemning Chinese junks is not acted upon; on the contrary Captain Smith gives passports to such as trade in the neighbourhood, or to British settlements, and we have seen persons lately returned from that port, who say that the activity in the Chinese shipping, for the port of Singapore is greater than probably at any previous season. A great number of junks were preparing at Amoy to take in their cargoes of tea and other Chinese articles for the Straits trade, and the greatest activity prevailed everywhere. A report also states, that the portion of the shipwrecked crew of the Nerbuda, 103 in all, were taken to some town, probably the capital of the district, of the island of Formosa.

of H. M. S. Wellesley, and captain Whitcomb, of the Royal Marines.

7. While these operations were going on upon the Amoy side, the Island of Koo-laung-soo was ably attacked by the frigates, and the troops landed. Major Elliot, with some of the Marines and Camerounians, who first landed, climbed up the rocks to the left of the Easternmost battery, and, gallantly driving the enemy from the works on the heights, which were defended with some spirit, continued his progress to the North side of the Island, while Major Johnstone, who closely followed up with the rest of the troops, proceeded across it and carried the remaining works, thus putting us in possession of this very important position. Major Johnstone reports that Lt. Captain Gregg had an opportunity of distinguishing himself in driving a large body of the enemy from a battery, upon which he came unexpectedly with a detachment of 12 men.

8. On Amoy, a chain of steep rocky hills running from the range already mentioned, transversely to the beach, still intercepted our view of the city, though the outer town lay beneath my advanced post. The guns having been landed by the exertions of the Artillery and Sappers, and brought on far enough for support; had a strong force opposed our advance, I decided upon forcing the position in my front, which appeared extremely strong and well calculated to be held during the night. Having made the necessary disposition, I directed the 18th regt. to advance up a precipitous gorge, where the enemy had two small works, while the 49th were to pass through the outer town by the road to the same hills, extending their left, after gaining the pass, to the works above the beach; so as to open a communication with the shipping. This movement was also executed with spirit, the enemy merely firing off their guns and flying; and at dusk, I found myself in position close above the City, and perfectly commanding it.

9. Owing to the boisterous state of the weather, and the delay in the return of the Steamers, the 55th regt had not yet landed, but this was effected at daylight the following morning. I regret to say not without loss, a boat having been swamped and 5 men unfortunately drowned. Thus reinforced, I pushed strong parties of the 18th and 49th regiments down to the outskirts of the City, in the North Eastern quarter of which, upon irregularly rising ground, and closely surrounded by a dense mass of buildings, appeared the walled town or citadel. Having carefully reconnoitred the place, I satisfied myself that, although there was a concourse of people passing and repassing at the Northern gate, the walls were not manned—I therefore thought it advisable to take advantage of the prevailing panic, and having sent a small party with Captain Cotton, the Commanding Engineer, to reconnoitre the approach to the Eastern gate, which he promptly effected; I directed, upon his return, the 18th to advance, having the 49th in support, and the 55th in reserve. The advanced party of the 18th scaled the wall by the aid of ladders found on the spot, and opened the East gate, which was barred and barricaded from within by sacks filled with earth and stones. The remainder of the regiment passed through it and manned the other gates, the enemy having previously abandoned the place, leaving it in possession of the mob, which had already begun to plunder the public establishments.

10. I occupied the Citadel with the 8th and Sappers, placing the 49th regiment in an extensive building without the Public office of the Intendant of Circuit, from whence they could give protection to the Northern suburb and command the communication to the interior by the only road on this side the Island. The Artillery, I placed in a commanding position upon the top of the pass between the City and the outer town, with the 55th in support, occupying a range of public buildings, in which the Sub-Prefect of Amoy held his Court.

11. Amoy is a principal third-class City of China, and from its excellent harbour and situation appears to be well calculated for commerce. The outer town is divided from the City by the chain of rocks, I have mentioned, over which a paved road leads through a pass, that has a covered gateway at its summit. The outer harbour skirts the outer town, while the City is bounded in nearly its whole length by the inner harbour and an estuary, which deeply indent the Island. Including the outer town and the North-Eastern suburb, the City cannot be much less than 10 miles in circumference and that of the Citadel, which entirely commands this suburb, and the Inner Town, though commanded itself by the hills within short range, is nearly one mile. The walls are castellated and vary with the inequality of the ground from 20 to 30 feet in height; and there are 4 gates, having each in an outwork, a second or exterior gate, at right angles to the inner gate. The Citadel contained five Arsenals, in which we found a large quantity of Powder, with store of material for making it; Galleys, Wall-pieces Match-locks, and a variety of firearms of singular construction; Military Clothing, Swords of all descriptions, Shields, Bows and Arrows, and Spears, were also found in such quantity, as to lead to the conclusion, that these must have been the chief magazines of the Province. Within the sea-defences first taken, there was a Foundry, with moulds and material for casting heavy ordnance.

12. All these have been destroyed, and this so much occupied my time, considering too how much the troops were harassed by patrols to keep off Chinese plunderers, and by other duties incident to the peculiarity of our situation, that I abandoned my intention of visiting the interior of the Island. These plunderers flocked into the city and suburbs, to the extent, as the Chinese themselves reported of many thousands, and I regret to say, that several gangs penetrated into the citadel and committed much devastation. Indeed, with the prospect of leaving Amoy so soon, I doubt that our marching through the Island might rather have frightened away the peaceable householders, and led to further plunder by the mob, than have been of any advantage. Such in deed was the audacity of these miscreants, that I was in some cases obliged to fire, in order to disperse them; but I am glad to say but little loss of life occurred.

13. I am most happy to be enabled, to state that the conduct of the Troops has been exemplary; some instances of misconduct have no doubt occurred; but when it is considered that they were in the midst of temptation, many of the houses being open with valuable property strewn about, and many shops in every street deserted, but full of Sham-shu—it is matter of great satisfaction that these instances were so few.

14. During our stay upon the island, I did all in my power to prevail upon the respectable merchants and householders, who had so much at stake, to aid me in protecting property, which they readily promised—but their apprehension of appearing to be on friendly terms with us was so great, that I could obtain no effectual assistance from them, and was unable even to get a Chinese to remain with the guards at the gates, and point out the real owners of houses within the citadel, for the purpose of granting them free egress and ingress.

15. Our departure being determined upon, I could take no measures for permanent occupation, and the wind was strong against us, we were kept on shore four days in a state of constant watchfulness, until yesterday at 2 p.m., when the preconcerted signal for embarkation was given by the Admiral. By 3 p.m. every Soldier and every follower had been embarked (without a single instance of inebriety occurring) on board the Steamers, which transferred the Troops on board their respective Transports during the night.

16. The 3 Companies of the 26th Regiment have remained upon the Island of Koolong-soo which Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary has determined to hold for the present—and I have strengthened Major Johnstone, who is in command, with a wing of the 18th Regiment and a small detachment of Artillery. This little force amounting to 550 men, will, I trust, together with the Ships of War also left behind, be sufficient to hold this small but important possession.

17. To the Commanding Officers of Corps and Detachments, Lieut. Col. Craigie, 55th Regiment, Lieut. Col. Morris, 49th Regiment and Lieut. Col. Adams, 18th Regiment, Major Johnstone, 26th Regiment, Major Elliot, Royal Marines, Capt. Knowles, Royal Artillery, Capt. Anstruther, Madras Artillery, and Bap. Cotton, Commanding Engineer, my best thanks are due; and I have received the most cordial and active support, from the Officers of the General and my Personal Staff, Lieut. Col. Mountain, Deputy Adjutant General, Capt. Gough, Acting Deputy Quarter Masters General, Major Hawkins, Deputy Commissary General, Dr. French, Superintendent Surgeon, and Lieutenant Gabbett, my A. D. C.

18. I cannot too strongly express to your Lordship, in conclusion, my sense of obligation to His Excellency Rear Admiral Sir William Parker, for his ready support and judicious arrangements upon every occasion, as well as for having given me, at the disembarkation and embarkation, and during the whole period of our stay at Amoy, the able assistance of Capt. Giffard, to whom my best thanks are due.

19. I have the honor to enclose a list of Ordnance captured, and a return of the Wounded on our side upon the 26th ultimo, and have no means of correctly estimating the killed and wounded of the Enemy, but it must have been severe, and we know that several Mandarins were amongst the former.

I have the honor to be,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most obedient humble Servant,
(Signed) H. GOUGH, Major, General, Commanding Expeditionary Force.

THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE EARL OF AUCKLAND,
G. C. B., &c. &c. &c.

Wellesley in the Bay of Amoy. 31st August, 1841.

My Lord.—It is with much gratification that I have the honor of announcing to your Lordship, the capture of the city of Amoy, and the Island of Golong-soo, (which forms the West side of the Harbour), together with their strong lines of Batteries and Sea defences, mounting above 223 Guns, by the Combined Forces of Her Majesty, after a short, but vigorous attack, on the 26th instant, with very trifling loss on our part.

The Expedition, comprising the Ships of War hereafter named, and 21 Transports containing the Land Forces, Military and Victualling stores, &c. under the command of His Excellency Major General Sir Hugh Gough, sailed from the anchorage of Hongkong on the 21st, and fortunately arrived off the Islands at the entrance of Amoy Bay, by sunset on the 25th, it was then beginning to blow strong, but favored by a fair wind, and good moonlight, with the advantage of the local knowledge of Captain Bouchier of the Blonde, the fleet were pushed into the Bay, and anchored in security for the night.

A few shots were discharged at Her Majesty's Ships as they passed between the fortified Islands, but no mischief was done.

It blew too hard during the night to admit of our boats leaving the ships to mind, or make observations; but no time was lost after daylight in reconnoitring the Chinese positions, in which the General, and Sir Henry Pottinger did me the favor to accompany me, in the Phlegethon Steam Vessel.

We found the Batteries and Works of Defence on the entire Sea face, strengthened by every means that the art of these active people could devise: presenting a succession of Batteries and Outworks, from the extreme outward points of this extensive Bay, until within about three quarters of a mile of the entrance of the harbour, where a high Barrier Wall was constructed from the foot of a steep and rocky Mountain, to a sandy Beach on the Sea; and from this latter point, a strong ramparted Work of Granite, faced with soil, and occasional small Batteries with Parapets of stone, to afford flanking defences, was continued to the very Suburbs and entrance of the Harbour, from whence were marked Batteries with sand bags, until opposite the North East point of Golong-soo Island, altogether 152 Guns.

On the Island of Golong-soo, which is the key of Amoy, strong Batteries, mounting in all 76 Guns, were also placed in every commanding position for flanking the approach to the harbour (which is scarcely half a mile wide at the entrance) and protecting the accessible points of landing.

As it was of the utmost importance with a view to ulterior operations, and the advanced period of the present Monsoon, that we should be delayed as short a time as possible at Amoy, it was determined that the Batteries within the Barrier Wall, and on the Island of Golong-soo, should be immediately attacked by the Squadron, and the Troops landed within the Barrier as soon as it might be practicable to take the Batteries in the rear; for this object the Wellesley and Blenheim were ordered to anchor against the strongest Batteries on Amoy and as near the entrance of the harbour as possible, leaving the Cruiser Pylades, Columbine and Algerine to engage the extreme point of the line and cover the landing of the Troops, flanked by the heavy Guns of the Scosotis and Queen Steam vessels; the Phlegethon, and Nemesis being appointed to receive the Troops, and tow in the boats for landing them.

The attack of the Island of Golong-soo, where we had reason to apprehend the water was shoaler was assigned to Captain Bouchier of the Blonde with the Druid and Modeste, 150 Marines under Captain Ellis, and a detachment of the 26th Regiment under Major Johnston.

Pending the necessary preparations for disembarking the Troops, and moving the ships into their appointed positions, a communication was received from the shore, requesting to know the object of our visit, to which the answer No. 1 was returned.

About a quarter past one a steady and favourable breeze having set in, the Squadron weighed and proceeded to their Stations. The Scosotis being the most advanced received a heavy fire before any return was made, she was soon joined by the Queen, and both commenced action with good effect.

The Wellesley and Blenheim after ranging along the line of works on Amoy under a smart fire, were anchored by the stern about half-past 3 p.m. admirably placed by Captains Maitland and Herbert in 40 fathoms water within 400 yards of the principal Battery were solely in the position allotted them: and the Cruiser Pylades, Columbine and Algerine, took their stations with equal judgment.

The Blonde, Druid and Modeste reached their positions against the Batteries on Golong-soo, a few minutes earlier, but their Captains found such difficulty from the shallowness of the water in placing them satisfactorily, that, to effect this object they very spiritedly carried their ships into almost their own draft.

The Benthick had been appointed to sound the Channel ahead of the Wellesley as we ran in which Lieutenant Collinson very skillfully performed, and then gallantly anchored the Brig within the entrance of the harbour, where she was joined by the Scosotis, which was placed by Captain Grimsby, in a very judicious situation for relieving her, and the other ships from a flanking fire.

The fire of the Chinese soon slackened under the excellent Gun practice of the squadron. At half past 3, I had the satisfaction of seeing the Marines and 26th Regiment land on the Island of Golong-soo, and the British Colors planted on the Batteries; the Modeste and Blonde then weighed and stood into the inner harbour, and after silencing as they passed the Town Batteries which were out of our reach, they anchored completely inside, and abreast of the City, taking possession of 26 War Junks, with 128 Guns on board, in a state of preparation for sea, but deserted by their crews.

About the same time, the first division of troops were landed under the able direction of Commander Giffard of the Cruiser; and headed by their gallant General Sir Hugh Gough, escalated and took possession of the Works, at the Barrier Wall.

About work beyond this point, which had been previously silenced) was also entered, and the British Colors hoisted by the crew of a Boat from the Phlegathon: and the Batteries immediately opposite the Well-sley and Blenheim being nearly demolished, a party of Seamen and Marines were landed from those Ships under the command of Commander Fletcher, and the Officers named in the margin; by whom the Chinese who had taken shelter in adjoining buildings were put to flight, after discharging their Matchlocks, and possession taken of the Works.

The General having cleared the intermediate space of such of the Chinese as remained, pushed forward, and occupied the Heights immediately above the Town for the night; every point being thus completely in our power.

In detailing this service to your Lordship, I have the highest satisfaction in reporting the gallantry, zeal, and energy which has been manifested by every Officer and Man of Her Majesty's Navy and Royal Marines, as well as those of the Indian Navy under my command; They have vied with each other in the desire to anticipate and meet every object for the public service, and are fully entitled to my best acknowledgments; and the favourable consideration of the Board of Admiralty and Indian Government. I have no less pleasure in witnessing the anxiety which pervades all ranks, to go hand in hand with our gallant Companions of the Army.

His Excellency Sir Henry Pottinger and Suite were with me on board the Wellesley, during the operations of the 26th.

Captain Bouchier's own report will best describe the proceedings of the little Squadron placed under his orders for the attack of Golongoo, which was admirably executed, and I can only add my meed of praise on this additional instance of the gallantry of Captain Ellis, and the Officers and Men of the Royal Marines under his command, as well as of Major Johnston, and the detachment of the 20th acting with them.

The accounts we have received of the force of the Chinese for the defence of Amoy, vary from 5,000 to 10,000 troops; and it is with sincere pleasure I am enabled to transmit your Lordship so small a list of Casualties amongst the crew, and Masts and Rigging of the Squadron. The resistance made by our opponents would have justified the apprehension of greater injury. Under the protection of their well constructed casemated Works, they stood on some points firmly to their Guns. We have no knowledge of their actual loss, more than 80 dead bodies were I believe found in the Batteries; but nearly all the wounded, and many of the slain, were carried off by their countrymen.

His Excellency the Commander of the Forces will probably give your Lordship an account of the Munitions of War and Government Stores which have fallen into our hands, including a large quantity of Gunpowder, and a Battery for Cannon, where some Guns of very large calibre, newly cast, have been discovered.

We have been constantly employed in destroying the Guns; and as far as it has been practicable the Batteries taken on the 26th. The last two days Commander Fletcher with a party of Seamen and Marines, has been also detached to the Nemesis, and with very commendable zeal, has completely disabled the Guns on every Battery on the North East and South West sides of the Bay; and the fortified Islands at the entrance, of which your Lordship will find Official Returns enclosed.

The superiority of the Bay, and Inner Harbour of Amoy has much exceeded our expectations. The anchorage in the former appears excellent; and the latter, so far as our heavy armys have gone, affords perfect security for ships of any class, and to a great extent, with a reasonable prospect of proving a healthy situation; Sir Hugh Gough and myself have therefore entirely concurred with His Excellency Sir Henry Pottinger, in the expediency of retaining possession of the Island of Golongoo, which will at any time give us the command of Amoy, until your Lordship's wishes, or the pleasure of Her Majesty's Government is known. For this purpose, a sufficient garrison will be placed on the Island by the General, and I propose to leave Captain Smith of the Druid, with the Pyrites and Algerine for their support.

The wind is unfortunately at present adverse, but your Lordship may be assured that the Expedition will proceed to the Northward the moment it is practicable in the further execution of our Instructions.

I have the honor to be,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most obedient servant,

W. PARKER, Rear Admiral.

MANIFESTO OF THE OPPOSITION.

September 8.—Sir R. Peel having moved the order of the day to go into a committee of supply:—

Lord John Russell rose, and having opened the subject by re-stating the fitness of the occasion the state of our foreign relations to require the continuance of the present sitting of Parliament, for planning at our foreign relations he assured the continuance of peace—the best understanding existed with France, and he hoped the life of the Prince who ruled that country might be long spared from the attempts of infatuated assassins. The question pending with America was undoubtedly one of great importance; but the two governments had perfectly agreed that it was a question to be debated between nation and nation, and not to be treated as one of a private nature. No doubt the view taken by the judges of the state of New York would be destructive of all amicable relations between the two governments, if it were allowed to be carried out; but he did not believe that the government of the United States would permit any occurrence to take place which would expose any subject of her Majesty to danger. He was convinced that no cause of war would arise in that quarter. He now turned to the appointments made by the new administration in Ireland, and he hailed them with great satisfaction, for he saw in them an evidence of conciliation. Lord Eliot had always desired to confer a condition of equality on the Irish, and he (Lord J. Russell) was sure he would not re-introduce the measure of another noble lord (Lord Stanley) by which the contract entered into with Ireland in 1829 was openly violated. Thus far there was no ground of difference with the present government; but he next came to a part of the subject upon which a wide difference existed. They were now met agreeably to an intimation given by the right hon. gentleman that it would be desirable that Parliament should speedily assemble, to take into consideration the important affairs of the nation; and of the importance of laws which might embarrass trade, derange the currency, and increase the privations of the people, there could be no doubt. Her Majesty was advised by her late ministers to take the corn-laws into consideration. The House of Commons, however, thought proper to address her Majesty for the purpose of effecting a change of government. This advice was promptly acceded to, and the right hon. gentleman opposite constructed the administration which had such an unalterable attachment to the Church and State and the sliding scale. The time was now however come when the corn laws ought to be considered. Far be it from him to look to measures only and not to men; but he did not think that the mere nomination of the men was to be substituted for all measures. Sir R. Peel had stated that the time occupied in forming the ministry had prevented him from considering those measures. That might be a good reason for a fortnight but not for postponing such measures for five months. The truth was, he had four months to consider his course, and now he wanted five more before he would tell them what he would do. These were symptoms which led him to doubt whether any alteration was really intended in the corn-laws. The delay was a symptom in itself that no considerable alteration was intended. There were other symptoms. Sir George Murray had held office under the Duke of Wellington and was in favour of the 8s. duty, or even less but he was not a member of the cabinet, while the Duke of Buckingham was, who had expressed an opinion that a protection such as the present law gave, or even a greater one, was necessary for the agriculture of the country. There was a selection in the cabinet from the ranks of those who were in favour of prohibition, to the exclusion of those who were for free trade. Would the country wait five months? Why not set the expectations of the country at rest? The arguments that had been used against him for a delay of a month to do with tenfold force against the right hon. baronet. As regarded the imputation against the landowners that they were actuated by selfish objects, it was so with all men who had a direct interest at stake. The house should keep this in mind, for while the delay was for the convenience of the cabinet, they could not escape the imputation that the delay was not altogether for the public good. At all events, some case ought to be made out for the delay. What was the state of the manufacturing interest? He did not wish to say anything that might be construed into a declaration of his belief that any law they could enact would prevent the existence of distress in all manufacturing districts, because a fluctuation would arise from the state of their foreign relations from over-trading, or other circumstances. He thought, however, it was the duty of Parliament to be able to say that they had no part in the continuance of that distress. He thought they should be able to show that their restrictions were for some necessary object of the state—that they were either for the purpose of revenue, or for the purpose of placing a certain part of the community, which was over taxed, upon a condition of equality in that respect with other classes. The corn laws, could not be defended on these grounds. Were they necessary for the sake of revenue? On the contrary, they defeated that object; for there would be in the next day or two 1,200,000 quarters of corn admitted at a shilling duty; but if the measure he had had the honour to propose of an 8s. duty had been adopted, the Exchequer would have been 4 or 500,000, the richer. He saw nothing to prevent the House from taking the existing corn-laws into consideration during the present autumn. The noble lord then referred to the prayer of the Manchester meeting, and their address to the throne, praying that her Majesty would not prorogue Parliament until that subject should be settled. This was not the feeling of Manchester only, but of a great portion of the country. It was proposed to meet the distress by increased rates; but the manufacturers might then withdraw their capital to save it, and throw the weight on the land-owners. The noble lord then expressed his fears that if not relieved by greater freedom of trade, the cotton trade would be ruined by foreign competition. These fears might be unfounded, but they afforded sufficient ground for the House to deliberate solemnly on the subject. As for finance some measure must be taken to increase the revenue. He thought that would be best done by throwing open the trade. Had they adopted the course recommended last April, they would have done much to relieve the existing distress, and secure the future peace of the world. He did not intend to make any motion; but he entered his protest as a member of that House, against the course which the new administration appeared determined to pursue. (The noble lord sat down amidst loud cheers, which continued for some time.)

Sir R. Peel had no wish to commence his arduous and harassing duties by controversy of a party nature, but had no wish to avoid the discussion to which the noble lord had invited him. He concurred with the noble lord in his wishes for the preservation of their amicable relations with France, and his aspirations for the safety of Louis-Philippe. As long as the illustrious family now on the throne of France continued to reign, he thought it was sufficient guarantee for peace. He did not think that the change of government here would interrupt amicable relations, because it was his own government that advised the recognition of Louis-Philippe as the choice of the French people. And he relied on the character of M. Guizot for the maintenance of that unity between France and England which was necessary for the advancement of social improvement and civilization. He confessed he looked with some anxiety at the present state of relations with the United States; but he hoped the prevailing good sense of both countries would lead to an amicable arrangement. It was manifestly for the interest of both countries that a hostile collision should be avoided; but, at the same time, he felt the obligation of making no concession derogatory to the character of the country for the sake of a temporary conciliation. To come to the question at issue between the noble lord and himself, he regretted the noble lord had not taken the sense of the House upon the difference of these views; and the propriety of the course he (Sir R. Peel) meant to pursue. He thought it unreasonable, after being only fourteen days in office, to expect that he should come down to the House with measures for the alterations of all the existing laws of trade and commerce. If the Ministry thought that intolerable evils were inflicted on the country by the corn laws—if they thought that so these might be attributed the commercial distress, and the suffering to which the working classes in some parts of the country were exposed, what was their responsibility for not having introduced any measure during the last five years to remedy these evils; until May 1841? Why had they suffered it to be made an open question? He did not mean to follow their example in that; having considered the matter, he did not mean to make it an open question, proposing a thing here that it might be defeated there. They expected him to state the course he should pursue, and stake the existence of the Government on the issue: but how was it that they suffered Lord Melbourne to remain in office holding the opinions he did, and why did they appoint to the Vice-Presidency of the Board of Trade Mr. Sheil, who refused all inquiry on the subject? The greatest mischief which they could do to great principles was to leave them in abeyance as open questions. And finally, why had they reserved their denunciations against the corn laws until they had appealed to the people and been left in a minority of eighty? He took the Queen's speech, not as a vague recommendation to consider the subject but as virtually a recommendation of the definite proposal of an 8s fixed duty; did its proponents adhere to it now? If not, they had to thank him for having stopped it. Had the adverse prospects of the harvest been realized, and the duty been fixed at 8s in all probability Parliament would now have been assembled under the auspices of the Whigs to abate that 8s duty. Was it fair and reasonable, that in the face of a deficiency of seven millions and a half accumulated by the Whigs, which he found on entering office, he should be called on at once to produce his financial scheme? If he adopted the Whig budget would it repair the deficiency? Lord Stendenham had told them that it was not safe to make the proposed alteration in the timber duties, so that the 600,000, which they reckoned upon from that source was gone; the price of British sugar was so much reduced, that there was no prospect of realising 700,000, from the reduced duty on foreign sugar; and to the 400,000, on which Mr. Baring reckoned from the new corn duty, 1,100,000, was to be added for duty on corn included in the receipts of 1840 upon which his estimate of 1841 was founded; so that to make good the deficiency, 1,500,000, would have been required under that head. Then the expenditure had been under-estimated in China alone, the real expense for the year would probably be 4,000,000 instead of the 625,000, in the estimate; and there was an alarming tendency to increased expenditure in the colonies—90,000, was estimated as the expenditure for Hongkong this year, including the construction of a main road; Sir George Gippa had issued bounty-warrants for emigrants to New South Wales to the amount of 970,000, reduced by Lord John Russell to 600,000; 155,000, had been voted to meet South Australian Billa, while bills for 14,000, more had been presented at the Treasury and protested; and a loan of 1,000,000, had been guaranteed to Canada, and 100,000, had been promised for fortifications. Before ministers could be called upon to produce their financial scheme, they ought to have time to revise the state of our commercial relations with the United States, Naples, Texas, Brazil, and France; with all of which countries commercial treaties were pending. Lord John Russell had approved of the constitution of the new government as regarded Ireland, and has hailed it as proof of the impartiality with which his measures would be conducted. He confessed that such was his object in the selection he had made. He had not accepted office from any desire for power or patronage, but from the more ennobling motive of serving his country, and he reserved to himself the power of resigning office the moment he became convinced that he could not satisfactorily discharge his duty to his country and his conscience.

Lord Palmerston had listened attentively to the reasons of the right hon. gentleman for delaying his financial measures till next year, but however satisfactory they might appear to hon. members on the (Sir Robt. Peel's) side of the house, he doubted if they would prove so to the country. The right hon. gentleman had stated that he had not had time to consider the question of the corn laws, but he had been in that house while they had been under discussion for the last ten years, and from his great talents and ability, he was as capable as any hon. member of that house of coming to a sound opinion upon that subject. He was surprised the right hon. bart should use the argument, that the late government had refrained from bringing forward that question for the last five years. No man knew better than the right hon. bart that there were circumstances attendant upon all measures which must influence the time of their proposal. Every measure had its period, and the measures of the budget were now going through their period. Sir R. Peel had repeated the misrepresentations respecting Lord Melbourne's declaration on the corn laws, though Lord Melbourne had not spoken of any alteration, but of the proposition to remove all protection whatever. Sir R. Peel had very odd notions on the effect of a fixed duty on corn. It was a false argument to assume, that if corn rose very high in this country a fixed duty must be abolished. But apart from that, the effect of a fixed duty would be to equalise prices, and to prevent the prices of corn rising very high. The noble lord then referred to the financial measures of the late Chancellor of the Exchequer, and contended that his calculations had been well founded, and that the amount of revenue he had expected to derive from the alteration in the duties on corn, timber, and sugar would have been amply sufficient to meet the existing deficiency. Instead of postponing his measures until the commercial treaties pending with other countries were completed, the right hon. bart might have effected the proposed alteration in the commercial tariff of that country, and he could then with a better grace have called upon these nations to imitate the example of England in removing the restrictions upon trade and commerce.

Mr. Villiers had heard the statement of the right hon. bart, with intense disappointment. They had petitions from the people for the last four years, complaining of distress and praying inquiry, and it had been refused to them, and if the house thus perverted every principle of representation by refusing to discuss the question, they would compel the people to discuss them out of doors. They were playing a dangerous game with the people; a large portion of them entertained an opinion that they could expect no justice from the house; and by protracting the consideration of their condition for five months longer, they were giving a strong impulse to the demand for another alteration in the representation of the House.

Mr. Brotherton regarded the corn laws as unjust, inhuman, and impolitic. A majority was the strongest argument that could be used in the House; but he did not fear the ultimate result of the discussion of the question out of doors.

Mr. Ward did not wish to prolong a one-sided discussion; but he could not help expressing his regret, that Sir Robert Peel refused to enable them to give his measures their respectful consideration.

Mr. Cobden said, it was clear from the decision taken by the other side of the House that they were ignorant of the real state of public opinion, and he was not surprised at that, for they had been returned by their purses and not for the principles they advocated. He apprehended most serious consequence from the agitation which was likely to result when the decision of the right hon. baronet was made known to the country, and he would not be surprised if the privations and sufferings of the people would drive them into collision with their employers and the constituted authorities.

Lord Sandon repudiated the charge of bribery which had been brought against his side of the House by the hon. member for Stockport. The government did not pretend to have any specific remedy for the existing distress, as otherwise they would have brought it forward at once.

After some further discussion, in which Mr. Mawes, Mr. Litton, Mr. Vernon Smith, and other hon. members took part, Mr. Fielden moved as an amendment—"That the distress of the working classes throughout the country was no great that it demanded the instant inquiry of Parliament, and that no supplies be voted until such inquiry be made."

Dr. Bowring seconded the amendment, and on a division there appeared for the amendment, 41; against it, 149.

SEPT. 20.—Sir Robert Peel, in answer to Mr. Otway Cave, said it was not his intention to bring forward a bill similar to that of Lord Stanley's affecting the Parliamentary franchise of the people of Ireland. He wished to have the evil connected with the existing system corrected, but did not wish to limit the franchise.

During the remainder of the month the house was almost exclusively occupied in discussing the estimates, voting supplies, and the Poor Law and other acts about to expire. As all the business ministers intend to enter upon will be finished on the 7th, it is expected Parliament will be prorogued on the 8th of October.

(From the Oxford Edition of the New York Herald, September 10.)

PEACE OF WAR.

Our relations with England are beginning to attract great deal of attention and anxiety, both in Congress and out of it—in the public mans and private salons—in the large cities and in the country towns—in the great squares and at obscure cross roads.

The subjects of dispute are well known—the M'Leod case and the boundary question—but the difficulties that surround them, and the mode of negotiation, seem only to grow worse and worse.

The trial of M'Leod will come up at Utica, before the State Court of Oyer and Terminer, which opens on Monday, the 27th inst. Chief Justice Neilson (of this State) presiding. Willis Hall, the State Attorney-General, conducts the prosecution, and Joshua Spencer, the United States Attorney-General for the Western District, appears for the prisoner. It is now said that evidence will be brought forward that will be sufficient to convict M'Leod of the charges made against him. Heretofore he has generally been esteemed innocent, but if witnesses are brought up, imbued with the spirit of the Niagara borderers, it is very possible that they may swear to facts sufficient to compel a jury to convict him. The Canadian border is full of inflammable materials on both sides of the line, and in such a state of excitement it is hardly possible to tell what a cloud of excited witnesses from that quarter may return as their verdict. National and political feelings, as hot as the condensed steam of a boiler, prevail all round Utica, back to Erie and Ontario, and the very alarms which have been recently sounded seem to prove the increase, instead of the decrease of such materials.

Now, in the chapter of events, only look at the position both countries are placed in should M'Leod be convicted?

The State government has committed itself to carry out the decision of the Court, and to execute M'Leod for murder. The general government assumes a different position which we believe all the foreign ministers at Washington support, and declare to be the public law of Europe. The Russian government has no great friendship for England; yet the Russian minister here, and his government at home, justify the conduct of England; because it corresponds with the public law of Europe. Such a view, we believe, the French and other ministers take—and such a view has been presented by that pure patriot and fearless American statesman, John Q. Adams.

In this position of things, it is very evident that should M'Leod be convicted, the British government will select that affair, on which to open a quarrel with us, rather than the North Eastern Boundary matter, in which the American government has the right on her side. On the conviction of M'Leod, and his retention and punishment by this State, England would have the advantage in every point of view. All the great nations of Europe have recognised the principle on which she has acted, and no reference of the question could be made by our government to any third Power, with any dignity or prospect of success.—Globe, Oct. 2.

LYNCHING GAMBLERS.

(From Gallatin's Messenger, Sept. 21.)

The following horrible account of a wholesale murder is given in the American papers yesterday received:—

"The section of country above and below the mouth of White River, on the Mississippi, has been for years infested with gangs of gamblers and counterfeiters. Islands 67, 68, and 69, were notorious resorts for them. The people of Coahoma county, Mississippi, and from the opposite side of the river, determined to rid themselves of such pests; and our information is, that they succeeded in capturing from 80 to 70 of them. On the 23 August they placed them on board a trading boat, took her to an unfrequented place, so that there might be no witnesses, and shot and drowned them all. A portion of the names of the sufferers have been furnished to us. When the vessel which brings this fact passed the place, the citizens were on their way down the river, engaged in burning the houses lately occupied by the victims of their vengeance. No violence was offered to the families who were in them, but they were ordered to leave their homes for ever. All the implements of execution were found about the premises of the murdered men. A large amount of counterfeit bank notes was discovered, consisting of 50 dollar and 100 dollar notes on the Commercial Bank of New Orleans, not signed; and 1 dollar and 2 dollar, and 5 dollar, notes of the Third Mississippi, New Orleans. The gamblers and counterfeiters, who have thus suffered a terrible death, were so doubt racials of the deepest dye. They may have committed all the offences with which they were charged—murder, the stealing of negroes, robbery—in a word, have violated every law; but, having them in their power, these numerous crimes can offer no excuse for the bloodied murder of so many men. In comparison with this cruel and damnable act of the mob, the crimes of the sufferers sink into insignificance. The laws have received a more dangerous blow than could possibly have resulted from a long life of crime."—Standard.

MAULMEIN.

The Forbes has brought us letters from Maulmein and Arracan, representing the aspect of affairs to be peaceful in the extreme. Tharawaddie was still at Rangoon, but, seemingly, not inclined to quarrel with us. The following is an extract of a letter from Maulmein dated 14th November:

"Since I last wrote you every thing has transpired that could tend to make former confusion doubly confounded, and the daily arrivals of steamers and sailing vessels, crowded with troops, stores, guns and other needful munitions of war, leads us to consider 'the play is about to commence,' and makes 'an appearance of preparation awful to look at, and at which I believe all hands, from Governor and Brigadier down to the lowest coolie, are not only astounded but alarmed. Every one asks who is coming, or with whom are we going to fight, and if an unfortunate gossip answers 'John Burnah,' the very children, in the street laugh at him."

The Proserpine, steamer, has gone to Rangoon on some secret expedition, and respecting which all the wisemen of the many headed monster are at fault. Some say the letter she carries is merely to serve as a passport to her Commander, who has orders to make good use of "eyes and ears;" others that it (the letter) is to say the East India Company will not, at any price, have Tharawaddie's name on their books as king of Burnah; but all agree in deprecating the system pursued throughout, and deplore that a policy so derogatory to the British Government, and shewing such a glaring want of feeling and care for the welfare of an immense country like this, should spring from, or be allowed by, the present Government of India.

The troops lately arrived are quartered nearly within gunshot of each other, like a flock of sheep, and every preparation is on foot for a long and vigorous campaign. Not content with rendering houseless scores of respectable natives, they (the Government) have turned the poor Missionaries out also from their peaceful and happy homes, to make room for mess-rooms, cantines, &c. &c., and the school rooms, where daily prayer was wont to be made, are now converted into emporiums for riot and blasphemy.

Report says, that the Ganges will be dispatched to your city on return of the Proserpine, and by her I will give you further particulars."—India Gazette, 25th Nov.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 5th Feby. 1842.

We have had no arrival during the week, except one from Masatlan, the Sovereign, having left on the 29th November; and although the issue of the trial of Mr. McLeod might by that time have reached Masatlan, we do not hear that any later accounts than we have previously been in possession of have been received. We have copied from the Calcutta papers Sir Hugh Gough's and Admiral Parker's despatches to Lord Auckland, relating the capture of Amoy.

Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, Sir Henry Pottinger, accompanied by Mr. Morrison, arrived at Hongkong in H. M. S. Blenheim, Capt. Herbert on the 1st of this month, having left Chusan on the 24th January and Amoy on the 29th. We publish below a Circular issued yesterday by H. E. relating to the movement made by part of H. M. Forces on Yu-yaou. The object of His Excellency's visit, which it is said will be of several weeks duration, is of course only guessed at; probably the organisation of affairs at Hongkong will engage his attention, and it is likely that the Chinese at Canton will for the present at least escape punishment for their infraction of the truce in building fortifications, and obstructing the river. No news of any interest have been brought from the north by the Blenheim, as far as we have been able to learn, but there are said to be no indications whatever, that may lead to the supposition that the Chinese are inclined to come to any settlement. No overtures of any kind are said as yet to have been made to H. M. Plenipotentiary, and although a number of high officers were known to be at Hang-chow-foo, since fled to Sow-cheo, no communication from them has been received. H. M. S. Cornwallis, Captain Richards, arrived at Chusan after the very short passage of only 31 days from Hongkong.

Another high Mandarin is said recently to have arrived at Canton, and we hear by the last accounts (of 3d inst.) that great activity was prevailing among the Chinese in finishing their fortifications. Everything however remained quiet, and if the Chinese contemplate any aggression, they will probably not make any movement, till after the New year holidays. New year's day is on the 10th of this month.

A good many runaway European sailors of different nations have lately been engaged by the Chinese, to teach them, it is said, the gun exercise. The promised monthly pay by which these men have been deluded into Chinese service is 50 $ and has overcome all scruples or even reflection. We doubt not that the Chinese will soon become aware of having made a bad bargain, for of the majority of these sailors it may be supposed that they know little or nothing of gunnery, and demands will be made upon their skill which they will be unable to answer. But independent of the dissatisfaction the sailors are likely to give their employers, they will find themselves in an awkward position should fighting in this neighbourhood recommence; for in case of the fortifications being attacked by the English, it is, judging from past events, more than probable that the Chinese will soon abandon their posts; should the foreign gunners follow their example, they will draw upon themselves the wrath and vengeance of the authorities, and their lives may be made to answer for the cowardice of the Chinese; if on the other hand the gunners remain on their post, they are as likely to lose their lives—such considerations however have proved too weak, opposed to the temptation of 50 dollars per month!

The French Frigate Erigone, went last week to the Bogue, whence her commander Capt. Cécille, proceeded to Canton. It was said at Canton that the Taou tai was deputed to call on him at the residence of an American merchant, and to invite him to an interview with the Vice Roy of Canton, and other high authorities, in the City. Up to the last account from Canton, this visit had not been made, but was expected to take place in a day or two.—Whatever the object of the Chinese may be in thus shewing attentions to the Commander of a French Frigate, it is evident that their pretensions to seclusion from, and superiority over, the rest of mankind, have already, in consequence of the events during the two last years, been a good deal modified, for they now ask as a favor a visit from a foreign officer, which not many years ago would have been altogether refused, or only granted after much delay, and frequent exchanges of "Chops."

CIRCULAR.

TO HER BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S SUBJECTS IN CHINA.

Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary in China has the pleasure to announce to Her Majesty's Subjects in China, that the District Cities of Yuyao, Tsikce, and Funghwa, distant respectively 40, 20, and 30 miles, from Ningpo, have been lately visited and temporarily occupied by detachments of Her Majesty's combined Forces.

The Chinese Government having thrown garrisons into the Cities in question, and given out that the object in so doing was, to encourage (or perhaps, more correctly speaking, to intimidate) the inhabitants of Ningpo and the surrounding districts to withhold obedience to the British Authorities, and likewise to deter them, as far as possible, from furnishing Provisions and supplies, it was resolved by their Excellencies, the Naval and Military Commanders-in-Chief, to take an early opportunity of dislodging those garrisons; and, on the weather (which had been extremely wet in the early part of December) becoming frosty and favorable for operations, the necessary arrangements were completed for carrying that resolution into effect.

The "Sesostris," "Nemesis," and "Phlegethon," Steamers, carrying about 700 men of all arms, and towing a number of Boats, weighed from their positions at Ningpo on the morning of the 27th Dec. and proceeded up the River. The former Ship, owing to her greater draft of water, was obliged to bring up about two thirds of the way to Yuyao, off which place the two smaller vessels anchored late in the afternoon; when the troops landed immediately, under the personal directions of His Excellency Lieutenant General Sir Hugh Gough, K. C. B., and, having taken possession of a small battery, mounting four guns (which the Chinese had thrown up to enfilade the approaching reach of the river, but which they did not venture to defend), were lodged for the night in a large temple or Joss-house, situated on a hill which overlooked the town at the distance of less than half a mile. At daylight on the morning of the 28th, His Excellency, the Naval Commander-in-Chief, disembarked with the seamen and marines, and preparations were made for ascending, when some of the people came out and declared, that the garrison (stated to have consisted of 1200 regulars and an equal number of militia) had quitted the town during the night, and that the gates were open. Our troops in one division, and the seamen and marines in another, accordingly marched in, and separated at the Southern Gate, to go round the town, along the ramparts. When the naval division had advanced part of the way, a fire of jinnjals and matchlocks was opened on it, by a considerable body of Chinese soldiers, which had taken post outside the walls, at a spot near the N. W. angle, where they were covered by a deep canal. It unavoidably occupied some little time for Her Majesty's forces to gain egress from the town by the Northern Gate, leading over the canal, and in the interim the enemy had decamped across the country. They were hotly pursued for 7 or 8 miles, during which numbers of them threw away their arms and heavy clothes. A military position on which they retreated, about 5 miles from Yuyao, was burned, and a very extensive barrack (Temple), close to that town, containing a magazine of gunpowder, and great quantities of arms, clothing, and other munitions of war, was subsequently set fire to and utterly destroyed. Twenty eight prisoners were taken, amongst whom were several subordinate officers, and it is believed that from 75 to 100 of the enemy were killed and wounded during the affair. Had they only stood to allow Her Majesty's forces to close with them, not a man could have escaped; but their local knowledge of the roads, combined with the fact of the whole country being knee-deep with frozen snow (which covered up and concealed the paths), gave them a decided advantage over their pursuers in their flight.

On the 29th, the City was examined, and an immense Public Granary of Rice discovered, and given to the Inhabitants to carry away. On the 30th, the small Steamers descended the River, and re-joined the "Sesostris" the three vessels anchored that afternoon on the nearest point to the City of Tsikce, which lies between 4 and 5 miles from the left bank, and which was found on the following morning (the 31st) to be deserted by the Chinese Troops, and all the Civil Authorities. The Public Buildings were here destroyed, as far as that could be done without endangering the Town; the population to take the Grain from the Government Granary, which was very large and quite full of Rice; and the combined Forces having re-embarked, the steamers returned to Ningpo on the evening of the 31st of December.

It affords Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary extreme gratification to add, that not a single casualty occurred during these movements. Mr. Midshipman Lock of H. M. Ship "Blenheim," was struck on the foot by a spent Jinnjal Ball, but fortunately escaped with a slight contusion. The cold was intense during the whole period; the Thermometer ranging, at night 10 and 12 degrees below the freezing point; but, notwithstanding this fact and the unavoidable exposure, the Troops, Seamen, and Marines all came back in the highest health and spirits.

An unfavorable break in the weather prevented the intended movement on Funghwa being put into execution until the 10th instant. On that morning, the "Phlegethon" and "Nemesis" started from Ningpo, and were brought up by a bridge across the River about noon. The Land Forces, with the Lieut. General commanding, here landed, whilst the Seamen and Marines, under His Excellency the Admiral, went some miles further up the River in boats. The two divisions arrived simultaneously at the City of Funghwa about dusk, and found it deserted by the Chinese Authorities and Troops. The same steps as were adopted at Tsikce with regard to the Public Buildings and Granaries were next morning, adopted here, and the combined Forces returned to the Steamers, on the afternoon of the 11th, and to Ningpo early on the 12th instant.

Although these operations are of no moment considered in a military point of view, yet their Moral and Political effect is highly important, and on that account Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary deems it expedient to make the result of them public. They evince our irresistible power, as well as extraordinary forbearance so far as the people are concerned; and it has been ascertained, that such was the consternation, on the news of the descent on Yuyao reaching the Provincial Capital of Hong-chow-foo (distant above 100 miles), that the Imperial Commissioners and other high Chinese Officers fled from that City to Soochow, 90 miles further North.

The "Pilegethon" Steamer, and "Bentuck" Brig of War, have just proceeded to examine and reconnoitre the Bay of Hong-chow-foo and the Port of Chapoo.

CHARLES O'MALLEY, THE IRISH DRAGOON.

LETTER FROM F WEBBER TO C. O. MALLEY.

Official Despatch of Lieutenant-General Francis Webber, to Lord Castleleigh; detailing the assault and capture of the old pump, in Trinity College, Dublin, on the night of the second of December, eighteen hundred and eleven, with returns of killed, wounded, and missing; with other information from the seat of war.

Head-quarters, No. 3, Old Square.

My Lord.

In compliance with the instruction contained in your lordship's despatch, of the twenty first ultimo, I concentrated the force under my command, and, assembling the generals of division, made known my intentions in the following general order:

A. G. O.

The following troops will, this evening, assemble at head-quarters, and, having partaken of a sufficient dinner for the next two days, with punch for four will hold themselves in readiness to march, in the following order:—

Harry Nesbitt's brigade of incorrigibles will form a blockading force, in the line extending from the viceprovost's house to the library. The light division, under Mark Waller, will skirmish from the gate towards the middle of the square, obstructing the march of the cuirassiers of the guard, which, under the command of old Duncan, the porter, are expected to move in that direction.—Two columns of attack will be formed by the senior sophisters of the old guard, and a forlorn hope of the 'cautioned' men at the last four examinations, will form, under the orders of Timothy O'Rourke, beneath the shadow of the dining-hall.

At the signal of the dean's bell the stormers will move forward. A cheer from the united corps will then announce the moment of attack.

The word for the night will be, 'May the devil admire me!'

The commander of the forces desires that the different corps should be as strong as possible, and expects that no man will remain, on any pretence whatever, in the rear, with the lush. During the main assault, Cecil Cavendish will make a feint upon the provost's windows, to be converted into a real attack if the ladies scream.

General order.

The Commissary General Foley will supply the following articles for the use of the troops:—Two hams, eight pair of chickens, the same to be roasted; a devilled turkey; sixteen lobsters; eight hundred of oysters, with a proportionate quantity of cold sherry and hot punch.

The army will get drunk by ten o'clock to night.

Having made these dispositions, my lord, I proceeded to mislead the enemy as to our intentions, in suffering my servant to be taken with an intercepted despatch. This, being a prescription by Doctor Colles, would convey to the dean's mind the impression that I am still upon the sick list. This being done, and four canisters of Dartford gunpowder being procured on tick, our military chest being in a most deplorable condition, I waited for the moment of attack.

A heavy rain, accompanied with a frightful hurricane, prevailed during the entire day, rendering the march of the troops who came from the neighbourhood of Merriion-square and Fitzwilliam street a service of considerable fatigue. The outlying pickets in College-green being induced probably by the inclemency of the season, were rather tipsy on joining, and, having engaged in a skirmish with old M'Callister, tying his red uniform over his head, the moment of attack was precipitated, and we moved to the trenches by half past nine o'clock.

Nothing could be more orderly, nothing more perfect than the march of the troops. As we approached the corner of the commons-hall, a skirmish on the rear apprised us that our intention had become known; and I soon learned from my aid-de-camp, Bob Moore, that the attack was made by a strong column of the enemy under the command of Old Fitzgerald.

Perpendicular (as your lordship is aware he is styled by the army) came on in a determined manner, and before many minutes had elapsed had taken several prisoners, among others Tom Drummond—Long Tom—who, having fallen on all fours, was mistaken for a long eighteen. The success, however, was but momentary: Nesbitt's brigade attacked them in flank, rescued the prisoners, extinguished the dean's lantern, and, having beaten back the heavy porters took Perpendicular himself prisoner.

An express from the left informed me that the attack upon the provost's house had proved equally successful: there wasn't a whole pane of glass in the front, and from asportman who deserted it was learned that Mrs. Hufelinson was in hysterics.

While I was reading this despatch, a strong feeling of the line towards the right announced that something was taking place in that direction. Bob Moore, rode by on Drummond's back, hurriedly informed me that Williams had put the lighted end of his cigar to one of the fines, but the powder being wet, did not explode, notwithstanding his efforts to effect it. Upon this I hastened to the front, where I found the individual in question kneeling upon the ground, and endeavouring, as far as punch would permit him, to kindle a flame at the portfire. Before I could interfere, the spark had caught; a loud, hissing noise followed; the different magazines successively became ignited, and at length the fire reached the great four-pound charge.

I cannot convey to your lordship, by any words of mine, an idea of this terrible explosion: the blazing splinters were hurled into the air and fell in fiery masses on every side from the park to King William; I, the bellringer, was precipitated from the scaffold beside the bell, and fell headlong into the mud beneath; the surrounding buildings trembled at the shock; the windows were shattered and in fact a scene of perfect devastation ensued on all sides.

When the smoke cleared away I rose from my recumbent position, and perceived with delight that not a vestige of the pump remained. The old iron handle was imbedded in the wall of the dining hall, and its round knob stood out like the end of a queue.

Our loss was, of course, considerable; and, ordering the wounded to the rear, I proceeded to make an orderly and regular retreat. At this time, however, the enemy had assembled in force. Two battalions of porters led by Dr. Dobbin charged us on the flank; a heavy brigade poured down upon us from the battery, and, but for the exertions of Harry Nesbitt, our communication with our reserves must have been cut off. Cecil Cavendish also came up for although beaten in his great attack, the forces under his command had penetrated by the kitchen windows, and carried off a considerable quantity of cold meat.

Concentrating the different corps, I made an echelon movement upon the chapel, to admit of the light division coming up. This they did in a few moments, informing me that they had left Perpendicular in the hah, which, as your lordship is aware, is a fosse of the very greenest and most stagnant nature. We now made good our retreat upon number two, carrying our wounded with us; the plunder we also secured, but we kicked the prisoners and suffered them to escape.

Thus terminated, my lord, one of the brightest achievements of the under graduate career. I enclose a list of the wounded, as also an account of the various articles returned in the commissary-general's list.

Cecil Cavendish; face severely scratched; supposed to have received his wound in the attack upon the kitchen.

Tom Drummond; not recognisable by his friends; his features resembling a transparency disfigured by the smoke of the preceding night's illumination.

Bob Moore; slightly wounded.

I would beg particularly to recommend all these officers to your lordship's notice: indeed the conduct of Moore, in kicking the dean's lantern out of the porter's hand, was marked by great promptitude and decision. This officer will present to H. R. H. the following trophies, taken from the enemy: The dean's cap and tassel; the key of his chambers; Dr. Dobbin's wig and bands; four porters' helmets, and a book on the cellar.

I have the honour to remain,

My Lord, &c.

G. O.

The commander of the forces, returns his thanks to the various officers and soldiers employed in the late assault, for their persevering gallantry and courage. The splendour of the achievement can only be equalled by the humanity and good conduct of the troops. It only remains for me to add, that the less they say about the transaction, and the sooner they are severally confined to their beds with symptoms of contagious fever, the better.

• Meanwhile, to concert upon the future measures of the campaign, the army will sup to night at Morrison's.

Here ended this precious epistle, rendering one fact sufficiently evident,—that, however my worthy friend advanced in years, he had not grown in wisdom.

While ruminating upon the strange intonation which could persuade a gifted and an able man to lavish upon dissipation and reckless absurdity the talents that must, if well directed, raise him to eminence and distinction, a few lines of a newspaper paragraph fell from the paper I was reading. It ran thus:

LATE OUTRAGE IN TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN.

• We have great pleasure in stating that the serious disturbance which took place within the walls of our university a few evenings since, was in no way attributable to the conduct of the students. A party of ill-disposed towns people were, it would appear, the instigators and perpetrators of the outrage. That their object was the total destruction of our venerated university there can be but little doubt. Fortunately, however, they did not calculate upon the esprit de corps of the students, a body of whom, under the direction of Mr. Webber, successfully opposed the assailants, and finally drove them from the walls.

It is we understand, the intention of the board to confer some mark of approbation upon Mr. Webber, who, independently of this, has strong claims upon their notice, his collegiate success pointing him out as the most extraordinary man of his day.

• This, my dear Charley, will give you some faint conception of one of the most brilliant exploits of modern days. The bulletin, believe me, is not Napoleonic into any bombastic extravagance of success. The thing was splendid: from the brilliant firework of the old pump itself to the figure of Perpendicular dripping with duckweed, like an insane river god. It was unequalled. Our fellows behaved like trumps; and, to do them justice, so did the enemy. But unfortunately, notwithstanding this, and the plausible paragraphs of the morning papers, I have been summoned before the board for Tuesday next.

• Meanwhile, I employ myself in throwing off a shower of small quibs for the journals, so that if the board deal not mercifully with me, I may meet with sympathy from the public. I have just despatched a little editorial bit for The Times, calling in terms of parental tenderness, upon the university to say—

• How long will the extraordinary excesses of a learned functionary be suffered to disgrace college? Is Doctor * to be permitted to exhibit an example of more riotous insubordination than would be endured in an undergraduate? More on this subject hereafter.

DINNER TO LORD MORPETH.

On the 14th of September the Duke of Leinster, as chairman of a deputation, presented Lord Morpeth with an address signed by nearly 300,000 Reformers of Ireland. On the same day the great dinner, to which Lord Morpeth was invited by the Reformers of Ireland, was held in the Theatre Royal, Dublin. The pit was boarded over for the occasion, the stage was covered with an awning of pink and white, and the house was handsomely ornamented and lighted. Before the dinner was served, the lower and upper tiers of boxes were completely filled with ladies in evening dresses. At seven o'clock, Lord Morpeth, accompanied by the chairman, the Marquis of Clanricarde, was ushered into the Theatre by a crowd of stewards. Among the principal guests were the Earl of Howth, Lord Chilton, Lord Lismore, Lord Louth, Lord Lurgan, Lord Carew, Lord St. Lawrence, Lord Talbot de Malahide, Lord Huntington, Lord Ebrington, Lord Altamont, Mr. Shell, Sir William Somerville, Mr. Sherman Crawford, the O'Connor Don, Mr. O'Connell, and a host of Members of Parliament and other public men. About seven hundred sat down to dinner. In proposing Lord Morpeth's health the chairman dwelt emphatically on the ample fulfilment which Lord Morpeth's career had exhibited of the bright promises of his youth; and alluding to his temporary retirement from public life, he said he hoped it would not be long—"England could not do without such statesman; Ireland could not afford to lose the services of such a man."

Lord Morpeth spoke long, in fluent, warm, and forcible language. After having filled the office of Chief Secretary for Ireland during a longer period than any of his predecessors—looking back upon his own misfiring at first, and difficult and delicate duties involved, and not forgetting the errors which had occurred—the brilliant scene before him was his rich reward. He rejoiced to have been the partner and the interpreter of his colleagues' policy; and especially it was his pride to have acted in Administrations headed by the gallant and chivalrous bearing of the Marquis of Normanby and the steady deep-rooted patriotism of Earl Fortescue. But the main source of their strength had been the generous and unswerving fidelity of the Irish people. And if at length the Ministry to which he belonged had been overthrown, that overthrow was occasioned by their endeavour to do justice to the struggles of industry and the wants of the entire people. Looking back upon their government of Ireland, he would rather appeal to their acts than to their wishes or intentions as the excuse for non-performance.

MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR OF HONOUR.

Our recent letters from Malta mention an affair of honour which had just taken place in that island, and which appears to have excited a great sensation in Valetta. The brother of a noble duke (Lord Sussex Lennox) arrived in the "Great Liverpool," under an assumed name, at Malta, and having immediately waited on Major S. H. of the 10th regiment, and all preliminaries having been arranged, proceeded to fight a duel with another military gentleman holding a situation in the staff of that garrison (Captain Norcott, of the Rifle Brigade, Military Secretary). Lord Sussex Lennox fired without effect, and his adversary having discharged his pistol in the air, his lordship was with difficulty induced to listen to an accommodation, the terms of which are said to be of a somewhat singular description. This done, Lord Sussex Lennox left the next day for England. During the time the parties were on the ground they did not exchange a syllable. The circumstances in which the dispute originated, together with the correspondence, will, in all probability, be published.

STATE OF THE COUNTRY.

Sept. 27.—Meetings continue to be held in all parts of the United Kingdom for the adoption of petitions praying her Majesty not to prorogue Parliament till something is done for the relief of the country. Though much distress undoubtedly prevails, mercantile affairs are certainly not in a worse position now than they were a month ago in London; while in Lancashire, and some other manufacturing districts, we are glad to hear there are decided symptoms of amendment. The usual autumn demand for export has given some degree of briskness to particular branches of trade; for instance, the cotton spinners are said to be working upon actual orders for goods, which will occupy them a month or six weeks in the completion. The price of bread has fallen from tenpence half-penny to tenpence, but we can expect no further relief, for the corn speculators having gained their object in procuring the admission of their large supplies of foreign wheat at the duty of only one shilling per qr, they have now reversed their mode of action, and are endeavouring to work the duty up again, in which they will no doubt succeed effectually, as it is already increased to 2s 8d per quarter, with every prospect of going back to 16s or 20s in a few weeks.

CAPTAIN OMMANNEY.

(From the Sing. Free Press, of 23d Dec.)

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SINGAPORE FREE PRESS
Mr. Editor,

It seems desirable that a correct version of certain occurrences in which I was concerned during my recent visit to Manila should be laid before the public; in order to avoid further misrepresentation regarding the illiberal treatment I experienced from General Orosa, the Captain General of the Philippines, seeing that various reports have gone forth on the subject, more or less at variance with the real state of the facts. The following is a plain unvarnished statement of what took place:—

On the 11th of August last, I was arrested by the Town-Major of Manila, acting under orders from Lieut. General and Governor Orosa, whilst amusing myself sketching a ruined house and cargo boats on the Binondo Canal, situated in the Tando district of the suburbs of Manila, leading into the River. I told the Town-Major that I did not understand him, and he very politely accompanied me home, where he expatiated the cause of his disagreeable visit to Mr. Diggle, who interpreted to me that I was seen drawing, and was ordered to be conducted to the Governor's presence; and the interview ended by the Town-Major taking away my drawing-book, and requesting me to be in attendance on his Excellency in the course of the morning. I was not at the time intimate with any person in Manila, and as M. Adolphe Barrot, the French Consul General, had been extremely kind to me, I thought there was no better person to consult with and none more able to advise me, considering the importance of his situation and his knowledge both of the Spanish character and language. At 11 o'clock M. Barrot was kind enough to accompany me to his Excellency's, by whom we were received not over graciously; when M. Barrot explained to him in Spanish what I said; namely, that I was innocently amusing myself, interfering with no person, nor violating the laws of the colony, having obtained information two days previous regarding the extent of a foreigner's liberty on the island from the second Lieutenant-General; that if his Excellency would condescend to look at the drawing book which was seized, he would by his own eyes and judgement be convinced of the harmless nature of the contents, and the truth of my statement. The reply of his Excellency was to the following effect:—"I had been seen on the River moving about, which had a suspicious appearance; that I had transgressed the laws of the country by drawing; that he had seen my sketches, and was perfectly satisfied in his own mind of the design; that his experience convinced him that, as far as he could judge, the sketches in question indicated sufficient observation to apply to military purposes; that they were not of much moment at present, but for what they might hereafter be turned to; that there would have been no impropriety in my sketching 5 or 6 miles distant, away from the town of Manila; that had he done his duty he ought to have put me in prison, but that he spared me this severity out of kindness; that he had handled the case over to Military Law for decision, and that he had no further power to interfere in the matter." His Excellency added that he was doing me a kindness in forbidding me to draw on the River, as the ferocity and suspicion of the Indians might endanger my life, and cause a Revolution.

After this, much conversation passed between his Excellency and Mr. Barrot, and I again requested Mr. B. to interpret that I was ready to declare on honor that my drawings were not military, neither intended to be applied to any purpose of the sort, and that if he had been shown the true drawings it was impossible they could have made such impressions on his mind. I assured him that I belonged to the East India Company's Service and could produce my commission; that he might treat me as he pleased, but that I should appeal to my government for assistance if I suffered any violence or ill treatment; that I had done nothing to subject myself to a military Court of inquiry &c. &c. Much discussion ensued, and Mr. Barrot endeavoured to point out the absurdity of treating so frivolous an affair as one of such importance, and the infelicity of ordering me before a Court of Inquiry. His excellency was inflexible, and insisted that I should stand the order of the Court. He then bowed us out, saying that foreigners had been allowed too much license in the island.

A Court of Inquiry accordingly did sit; and I afterwards applied for a copy of the proceedings, but, for reasons then known to themselves they were refused, and his Excellency had neither the civility to answer my application, or the justice and honesty to furnish or permit me to be furnished with the Proceedings. The following, however, is the Decree pronounced by himself:—

Don Manuel Montano, Regiment Capt. of and Royal Artillery of the Philippine, nominated by the Captain General of these Islands, to act as Secretary in the investigation instituted in consequence of notice having been given to his Excellency on the 11th instant, that on the River Pasig, which runs by the capital, there was in a house drawing, some times opposite the fort, at other times opposite the suburbs, the English Captain Ommannney, and in which investigation the Lieut.-Colonel Vega of the Artillery was nominated (fiscal) prosecutor.

Decree of His Excellency the Captain General and Governor of the Philippines, Manila, 19th August, 1841.

The suspicions which led to the present investigation, instituted in consequence of the notice which was given to me on the 11th instant, that the English Captain Ommannney was passing up and down the river in a canoe, taking sketches, sometimes on the side of the Fort, at other times on the suburbs, having completely vanished, and it having been ascertained that the said Captain was merely amusing himself in taking some views of private houses, &c. of the town of Binondo, the bridge, and various fancy figures of Indians, their hats, &c. and in the book, in which these drawings were made, nothing has been found that has any connection with the fortification; I have come to the decision to suspend all further investigation and order the same book to be returned to the said Captain Ommannney as a proof that nothing is suspected of him.

I order him to bear in mind that he might have avoided the inconvenience and trouble of this investigation had he taken the regular step as pointed out to him by my second, the Sub-Inspector General, who told Captain Ommannney when he expressed his wish to take sketches, that there could be no objection provided he asked my permission; for he cannot be ignorant that a foreigner found in a canoe anchored in the neighbourhood of a fortified place with pencil and paper in his hand taking notes, must call the attention of every one, being prohibited by the General orders of the Army. It was forfortunate however that the person who saw Capt. Osmanney in this situation, considering his suspicious occupation, at once informed me; in which action he showed his prudence and delicacy and probably avoided disagreeable recurrences, had some ignorant and malignant people prevailed on the native character to induce them to atrocious acts to foreigners, similar to those on a former occasion, which arose from dislike though not the same cause,—facts, that ought not to be forgotten in order to prevent all disturbance of public tranquillity, compromise the superior authorities of these islands, the personal security of foreigners and the good understanding and friendship which exists between the British and Spanish Governments.

Make this known to Captain Osmanney, and if he should demand a certified copy of this decree, grant it.

(Signed) MARCELINO ORAA.

A True Copy,

(Signed) Capt. MANUEL MONTOSO.
Royal Spanish Artillery of the Philippines.

(Signed) Lieut.-Colonel VEGA,
Royal Spanish Artillery Fiscal to the Inquiry.

In this Decree his Excellency has endeavoured to attach a suspicious appearance to my morning excursion, and to give it a colouring that might serve as an excuse for the proceedings against me, by the mention of my "taking sketches sometimes on one side of the Fort, at other times on the suburbs" and "being found in a canoe anchored in the neighbourhood of a fortified place with pencil and paper &c. &c." whereas I never stepped or anchored in the Pacific river—I entered the boat at the landing place, about one mile above the fort, and did not stop till I entered the Binondo Canal, nearly opposite the Customs house, about 100 paces from the junction with the Pasig river; and sketching a ruined house and landing place called St. Gabriel, where there happened to be a variety of boats, when the Town Major arrested me.

Again, General Oraa attaches blame to me for not obtaining permission to draw. The pretence must strike every one as childish and absurd, and is moreover without foundation, as could be proved by my kind and hospitable friend Mr James Strachan. "This gentleman was so good as to introduce me to the Governor General the second day after my arrival, but owing to his Excellency being busy, our visit scarcely went beyond the usual ceremonial how before we retired, without my troubling his Excellency with any questions. Our next visit was to the Sub-Inspector General Don Pedro Calaveras Albasas, who received us very politely. I explained to him that I had found his Excellency very busy, but requested the Sub-Inspector General to inform me regarding the laws of the island, and in particular if drawing was prohibited. His answer was to the effect, that I was at liberty to go any where about Manila and draw whatever I pleased, as long as I did not sketch the fort, but that to enter the interior of the island required special permission from his Excellency." This was interpreted to me by the friend I have just named, and I am particular in mentioning it because the Spanish authorities appear to attach great importance to my alleged omission of this point of formality. But I grieve to say, the Sub-Inspector General did not adhere to the strict letter of the fact in his evidence before the Court of Inquiry, wherein he stated that permission would be granted if asked, without having the candour to acknowledge that he had himself told me that my sketching was not contrary to the laws of the island!

The childishness of the whole proceeding, to say nothing of this instance of bad faith, was indeed only to be equalled by the extravagant absurdity of the reports that gained circulation after my drawing book had been seized. Some acute individuals would have it that I was on a secret espionage from the China Expedition! Nor was the sagacity and penetration of the superintending Engineer asleep, but on the contrary displayed in a manner worthy of the magnitude and importance of the whole transaction, as the following example will establish. One leaf of my drawing-book happened to be covered with Chinamen's hands in various postures—some holding chop-sticks, another grasping a pipe, and one as in the act of writing with the usual Chinese pencil. This collection of hands was interpreted by the Engineer to be a hieroglyphic survey of the Fort!—or at any rate, if not the very fort itself, that the hand with the pen must intend to represent their cannoniers in the act of bouching a gun! This memorable investigation lasted eight days; when I was at last required by Colonel Vega who certainly seemed to feel ashamed of being engaged in a transaction so eminently ridiculous, to affix my signature to every sheet of the Drawing Book in his presence. The investigation, however, did not reach this point before I had made repeated, and of course, unavailing protests against the whole proceeding, and the improper and irregular manner in which it was conducted, as my boatmen, Manila Servants &c. were examined as witnesses against me without my being present. I might enlarge upon these and other features of the transaction equally little honorable or creditable to the Spanish authorities, but I believe I have said enough to prove the puerile absurdity of the whole affair, the improper treatment I experienced, and my freedom from all blame in the eyes of every reasonable person.

Yours Obediently,

W. S. OSMANNEY,

Captain 2nd Madras Cavalry.

Singapore, 18th December, 1841.

We publish under the usual head a communication from Capt. Osmanney of the Madras Cavalry, detailing the circumstances under which he was brought before a Spanish Court of Inquiry at Manila, while on a visit there in August last. It seems that this officer had been guilty of the enormous offence of taking sketches in the neighbourhood of the Town of Manila, without the express sanction, asked, had and obtained, of the Captain General of all the Philippines!—at least this is the offence alleged against him, although it will be observed that Captain Osmanney, distinctly and positively affirms that he had requested and received permission to draw from the Sub-Inspector General—being doubtless instructed previously by some of his countrymen residing at Manila to make the request—and that he intimated the fact of his having done so to the Captain General himself in the interview at which Mr. Barrot, the French Consul General, was present. But even were it otherwise, the transaction could not fail to be regarded as evincing a spirit the most contemptibly puerile that can well be imagined, and more worthy of the governments of China or Japan than of any European government in an enlightened age. We doubt indeed if any one ever heard of the inhabitants of the factories at Canton being prevented from drawing the fortifications of the Bogue, or of the tenants of Desima from delineating the strong places of Nangasaki! But, under the government of Her Most Catholic Majesty in the Philippines, if we are to take the word of General Oraa, it seems that a stranger "with pencil and paper in his hand taking notes," runs a risk of giving rise to a massacre, or "causing a revolution!" That the natives are ignorant and savage, and more savage from their ignorance, we believe—but what a state of political decrepitude the government must be in, when a peaceable foreigner, openly, and before the very noses of the civil functionaries, the municipal officers, and military officers of the colony, and courting as it were observation from every eye, cannot pass up and down a river within sight of the fort, using pencil and paper, without incurring suspicion that might give rise to disorders, which could convulse the whole island! What influence can the government have over the natives, and what confidence can the latter have in their rulers, in a country where this can happen? Why are the natives not made to feel that their government is sufficient to protect them against the worst consequences that can arise from gentlemen, who come there on their travels, taking sketches, and that it is scarcely reasonable that the use of a pencil and a note book in and about the town Manila should be tabooed under penalty of assassination? As to the question of permission to draw, the Captain General by no means shews by his decree that it would have protected Captain Osmanney against the danger threatened him. His Excellency indeed says, that had he asked permission "he might have avoided the inconvenience and trouble of the investigation;" but it is any thing but shewn, by what his Excellency further observes, that such permission could have prevented "the atrocious acts" on the part of the natives that he refers to. How, indeed, were the natives to know, when they saw that officer moving about with his sketch book in hand, that he was or was not acting under a permission solicited and obtained at a private interview with his Excellency?—for we cannot suppose that, when the Captain General authorities a gentleman, as a matter of course, to take sketches, he proclaims the same by sound of trumpet, or beat of gong, to the inhabitants! In what way, then, did Capt. Osmanney's alleged omission on this head, operate either the one way or the other, in regard to the danger of a massacre or a revolution from his being seen with pencil and paper taking notes? We must leave it to Spanish logic to get rid of this difficulty. The whole affair is indeed exquisitely ludicrous, from the peculiar activity of the Spanish functionaries catching a gentleman drawing, down to the marvellous discovery of the fortifications of Manila being typified by the fingers and thumbs of Chinese!—Ibid.

BURMAH.

(From the India Gazette, 26th Nov.)

A correspondent at Khyook Phyou, whose letter is dated the 21st instant, sends us the following items of intelligence. All parties are unanimous in representing the aspect of affairs, as far as regards the intentions of the Burmese, to be most peaceful. "Much ado about nothing" has been brought out with a very strong cast:—

"The steamer Forbes came in last night, and I have picked up Maulmein intelligence as follows:—

"Tharawaddy is still at Rangoon, but very quiet, and not disposed to have any thing to say to us. The Proserpine had not returned when the Forbes left. Report says, the commander is rather inclined to pick a quarrel with H. M. of the Golden Foot, and people wonder why no one in authority went in the Proserpine, except the commander, who being a bit of British oak in the R. N. they say, would be too glad to have a rap at H. M. Others say, that it the Calliope and steamers, with a good proportion of European soldiers, had gone direct up to Rangoon, it would have so frightened Tharawaddy, that he would have agreed to every thing. The markets are in a very unsettled state; the natives will neither buy or sell, and they won't even go out to cut timber, as they say there will be a war, in spite of its being explained to them that it is to prevent war, "why then do you bring so many troops" they ask; so that for the sake of the people something ought to be decided on. Every one seems to think that Tharawaddy is very much afraid of us, and he is expected to leave Rangoon on the 30th. I dare say you will have intelligence from Maulmein by the Forbes; but mine may be of use

All quiet at Kyouk Phyou—not an armed man on the frontier or near it, which looks peaceable. The 47th are encamped near the Flag Staff on the beach, and the European Artillery in a very good kind of barrack near them. All our news across the frontier comes with every thing that can be friendly. All our Maulmein news comes via Calcutta, except in this instance. It was well the Forbes had orders to touch here, as on the Commander's applying to the Maulmain Commissioner for instructions, he said "I have no orders to give you, follow your instructions." The Forbes was near three days coaling at Maulmein, and here took in thirty-five tons during the night. It is to be hoped steamers will touch here occasionally on their way to Calcutta.

The following is from another correspondent, who ridicules the Maulmein force, and exposes the true character of Tharawaddy's warlike preparations:—

Kyouk Phyou, 21st Nov., 1841.—"The Forbes steamer arrived here last evening, when all hands expected that the intelligence, which it was supposed, she would have brought, would have set our minds at rest as to the very interesting question of peace or war, and probably have informed us that the terribly bellicose people of Moulmein had fallen upon the demoted Tharawaddy and wholly extirpated him and all his legions, men, women, and children, the two latter of which are said greatly to predominate in his camp; but judge our surprise and disappointment when it was ascertained that in that very important, and to the Indian Government, profitable appendage to the British empire, grandiloquently denominated the Tenasserim "Provincer," all was peace and quiet, and that notwithstanding the hourly repeated rumours of war, by which trade of every description had been annihilated, and the minds of the people of every caste and colour greatly and certainly most needlessly perturbed, not a single shot, with the exception of one fired by Her Majesty's most Excellent Commander of the Children, Captain Halsted, by which an unfortunate boy in a dingee was killed, had yet been fired, and that nobody had the smallest idea when the next would be discharged from the dreaded cannon.

Of Stockade something had once been heard, but on mature inquiry it was discovered, that the rains being over, it had been deemed proper to remove a good deal of the jungle around the old stockade at Martaban, built some 10 or a dozen years ago, and to replace the rotten posts, with timbers of a sounder description, all of which had greatly tended to disturb the peace of mind of the Moulmein authorities, on which Captain Halsted had sometime ago proceeded up the river, to reconnoitre. Whether he saw any thing more alarming than sundry rows of upright bamboo and stakes, probably for drying fishing nets upon, must ever remain a mystery, unless he should indeed be kind enough to enlighten us through the pages of the Asiatic Journal, and in his own peculiarly lucid style, regarding what he really did see; but sure enough the whole place was forthwith thrown into a precious uproar, reinforcements called for, the Government of India frightened from its propriety, troops without end bundled off to Moulmein and Arracan at a moment's warning, steamers engaged, transports hired, gun boats fitted out, and in short such a getting up stairs, as, in these piping times of peace, no man ever dreamt of, and all for what? Nothing at all, unless indeed the circumstance of Tharawaddy, having, with his wife and family, repaired to Rangoon for the benefit of sea bathing and change of air, can be considered a fair and legitimate reason.

Be this as it may, it is now matter of history (and how very pretty it does look) that in compliment to the cockeyed Sovereign of the Golden Foot, our rulers have in the year of our Lord 1641, concentrated at Mouleim a force large enough to conquer the whole Burmese Empire, and that they have also sent to Arracan another force, too large for one purpose and too small for another, and that having got the whole safely deposited at their respective destinations, they have got nothing else for them to do,—but to come away back again. Tharrawaddy having in the meantime, that is provided his sides don't split with laughing at us—quietly retired to the place from whence he came.

This is all very amusing, but who is answerable for it? and who is to pay the piper? It is not to be supposed, that the Mouleim authorities have boiled up this incipient Burmese war, merely for their own pleasure or to remind the world that such a place does exist, and that they are the magnates of the same! It cannot be that to enhance their own importance and to cut out C. B. ships and Baronies (more likely to be obtained in the China seas) they have concocted this precious flare up and put the Government to all this large and serious expense! No, it cannot be for any such reasons, and we must look deeper and wait longer before we can expect to obtain the solution of so queer a problem.

On the Arracan frontier everything is as quiet as an empty church; trade is going on stealthily even with Burmah, and not a soul seems in the least anxious with respect to Burmese politics. The troops are very healthy. Out of two native regiments and Artillery, not more than three score men are sick—of the Europeans not one man; even the poor wretched convicts have. I am told, only about 4 per cent. in Hospital—in short there is neither sign nor symptom of a sick season or bloody war. The station is as dry as a bone, and quite as clean, and the cold greater than usual, a gale having lately purified the atmosphere. Rest assured we shall have no war. Not a step has been taken by the Burmese at least in this direction at all indicative of it. The passes to Ava are neither fortified nor strengthened with troops, and nobody looks for anything but Tharrawaddy's speedy return to his own capital.

THE SEIKH ENCROACHMENTS.

(From the Friend of India, 14th Nov. 1841.)

Various detached notices have latterly appeared in our journals regarding the recent encroachments of the Sikhs in a territory never before visited by them. It appeared almost incredible that this government should engage in distant conquests at a time when the king was so ill able to repress rebellion in his hereditary dominions, and when the crown appeared to be tottering on his head. But there seems reason to suppose that the expedition has been undertaken at the instigation, if not with the resources, of the all powerful Vizier. Raj Dyan Sing; for Zorawar Sing who directs these operations, and who has crossed the snows to conquer Western Tibet, is well known to be the viceroy of that family in their possession in the Hills.

It is now about eight years since the Sikhs made themselves masters of the territory of Ladakh, the capital of which is L^o, lying nearly due east, about a hundred and fifty miles from Cashmere. The chief of that principality had long been apprehensive of the ambition of Runjeet Sing, and when Mr. Moorcroft visited his capital about twenty years ago, he offered to place himself under the protection of the English Government. His overtures to that effect were forwarded to Delhi and Calcutta by that enterprising traveller, but he was severely and rather unfeelingly rebuked for his interference with political negotiation, and the proffer was rudely rejected by our government. The Sikhs at length occupied the territory, which Moorcroft describes as being about two hundred and fifty miles from east to west.

On the eastern frontier of Ladakh lies in an almost semicircular line the province of Chan tan, known to the Bhooteas as the Hun den, or Beeem den, the residence of cold, and to the Tibetians as Nari. It is in fact Western Tibet, and is the chief resort of the shawl wool goat. Moorcroft informs us that it was formerly subject to independent princes, but their authority gradually merged in that of Lassa, and as Lassa is now entirely under the government of China, this province may be considered as virtually, though not geographically a province of the Chinese empire. By virtue of some ancient agreement, the shawl wool of Nari is sold exclusively to the people of Ladakh. The inhabitants of Nari have now, it is said, refused to send their valuable products to be sold via Ladakh, and under this pretence the Sheikh general has overrun the whole province.

If the reader will turn to Moorcroft's map, he will be able to trace the progress of the Sikhs at once from Le, up the Shih kha-bad in almost a direct line south east to the lake Manusurwor, so celebrated in Hindoo mythology. They have brought under subjection three hundred miles of territory, nearly continuous with our own provinces, and have at length reached Joomal, the confines of the Nepaul territory, and there the Sikhs and Nepalese have met, on the other side of the great Himalaya range.

The Government of Lassa has made no effort to ward off the invasion, or drive back the Sikhs, and this is said to arise from the prevalence of dissatisfaction in the Central and Eastern division of Tibet. The Sikhs may now be considered as fairly committed with the Chinese. There is nothing but the wand of Popilius,—an order from the Council Chamber in Calcutta,—which can prevent their moving on and conquering Lassa itself. Of course the Chinese will set this invasion on their western line to our debit, and regard it as emanating from the same impulse which has brought the barbarian ships on their eastern coast. Perhaps the best thing we could do, would be—after of course nipping in the bud the Nepalese and Sikh conference beyond mount Kytan—to allow the Sikhs to go on to Lassa and embroil themselves with the Chinese Government. It may do both good, and can do us no harm.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 12th Feby. 1842.

We have during the week had no arrivals from seaward with later intelligence than we were previously in possession of, nor have we any news to give from Canton, where everything remains quiet, and trade for the present of course, owing to the Chinese holidays, at a stand. Whether the many warlike preparations in the neighbourhood of Canton, to which we have so often alluded, will lead to offensive movements on the part of the Chinese, as soon as the holidays shall have passed over, remains to be seen.

Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary is, we learn, expected to pay Macao a visit. We understand that Sir Henry has taken the management of affairs at Hongkong into his own hands, and orders are issued that no lands are to be assigned, without previous reference to him. The recruits who have so long been kept on board of transports, at an expense far exceeding that of building comfortable barracks for more than double their number, are to be landed immediately, and the transports paid off. This measure was called for long ago, and it seems singular that no more active steps were taken by the Hongkong authorities to have the necessary barracks built, by which a very great saving would have been effected.

We are most happy also to learn that no more seizures of Chinese junks and other trading vessels, in these waters, are to be made. In fact, the injudicious system of making prizes, which has obtained during the last four or five months, was, if any credit is due to the reports commonly spread on the subject, owing to some mistake; it having never been the intention of H. M. Plenipotentiary that these seizures should be made. We have so often pointed out the anomaly of this proceeding as long as Whampoa continued a friendly port, that we need not now revert again to the subject; except expressing our satisfaction, which we doubt not will be shared by every one connected with China, that it has at length been put a stop to.

H. M. S. Nimrod went last week to Manila, to accompany the Ariadne, Steamer to China.

Great activity prevails in Hongkong; house and godowns are springing up in all directions, and in a few months more a new and considerable town will have grown into existence. Not only does the government erect houses and offices for their purposes, but merchants are also apparently gaining more confidence in the permanency of the establishment, while the missionaries of different churches have applied for and obtained grants of land for the purpose of building chapels and schools. We hear that the catholic establishments of Macao are engaged in building, and the Revd. Messrs Shuck and Roberts, of the American Baptist Board of Foreign Missions likewise intend building some school-rooms and chapels for natives, provided they meet with the necessary support from the foreign community, to enable them to defray the expenses. A large native population has already collected, by some estimated at 15,000, but, as may be supposed, chiefly composed of the poorest and lowest classes, among whom morals are at a low ebb, and robberies, thefts, and cheating are of very frequent occurrence; nor is as yet the Police sufficiently organized to repress these, or even to seize the offenders. We believe however that the worthy magistrate does all in his power to render the Police efficient; but this will of course be a work of time, considering what kind of population he has to deal with, and that he must necessarily employ persons of this same population as police men, who, we fear, cannot be much trusted, and who may on the contrary connive at many disorders, or by giving false evidence (a practice very common among Chinese) cause much injustice to be committed and thus impair the efficiency of the Magistrate's exertions. We are told that even now there are Chinese at Hongkong who traffic in false evidences, and it is probable the evil will grow if not soon checked.

Many of the Pirate boats which have within the last weeks committed great depredations in and near the Canton river, are, we are informed by Chinese, owned by parties now living at Hongkong, whither frequently the booty is sent for sale; and we are told that those engaged in this nefarious traffic are well known, since several people who had been robbed have applied to them for restitution of their property on payment of a certain sum, and obtained it. Although we will not vouch for the correctness altogether of this statement, being well aware of the little credit due, frequently, to Chinese stories, yet we think the subject one of such great importance, that in thus bringing it before the public we may draw to it its attention and that of the authorities at Hongkong.

We have copied from the Sing. Free Press a letter addressed to that paper by Captain Cunningham, denoting the treatment he met with at Manila, in consequence of having amused himself with sketching. The remarks of the Singapore Editor on the subject appear to us very just.

The French Frigate Erigone has during the week returned from the Bogue, but during her Commander, Capt. Cécille's stay at Canton, the expected visit from the Taou-tai as mentioned in our last, did not take place, nor had Capt. Cécille an interview with the Viceroy and other high mandarines in the City. The Erigone will, we understand, leave for Manila in a few days.

Her Majesty's ship Wellenley, Capt. Maitland, has during the week arrived at Hongkong from Chusan, and will we understand soon leave again for Singapore on her way to England. She left Chusan on the 31, and met H. M. Troopship Juniper, just coming in from Amoy. At Singapore she will be joined by Lord Auckland, Governor General of India, who goes homeward here.

H. M. Troopship Juniper from Hongkong and Amoy with about 600 men, was met by the Wellenley as she was leaving Chusan, where she would probably have arrived on the 4th. Every preparation was made for a movement on Hang chow-fu, the Capital of the province of Chekeang, which probably by this time is in possession of the English. We understand that at the time of the Wellenley's sailing, reports had reached Chusan of a sedition having broken out at Peking, of which however no particulars were known. Chinese will have the intelligence of troubles in Shanung and several other provinces. Although the evident weakness of the Tartar government leads us to expect insurrections, these reports require confirmation. We hear that a singular document said to have been published at Peking, has lately been received here. This paper refers to the attack by the English on Canton, and states that when they prepared to approach the city, a cannon of enormous size was (like the helmet of Otanto) seen slowly rising from the earth. The people, convinced that the gods by this manifested their power and will to aid them against the invaders, quickly dismembered the enormous machine of the earth, in which it still remained partly embedded, and carried it to the Provincial City, certain that with its assistance they would soon destroy all the barbarians. Their hopes were however most cruelly deceived; at the moment of the English attack, the divine gun turned its muzzle against the Chinese instead of their enemies, and hundreds of thousands became victims to the wrath of the gods, who thus manifested their displeasure of the Imperial family. Subsequently, however, the same paper states, the barbarians were driven back, but whether by divine or human means, we have not learned. Not having ourselves seen a translation of this marvellous document, we can only infer that it may probably have come from the pen of an enemy to the reigning family who, desirous of injuring it the minds of the people, represents even the gods as its opponents. We have during the week had the good fortune to receive a good many Chinese chops from the north, but their being badly printed and written, renders transcription necessary, and owing to the Chinese holidays, this could not be done in time for making any translations for this week's paper.

A young Englishman of the name of Stanfield killed himself about 10 days since at Hongkong, by firing a pistol, which he had apparently held near the heart; for when, a few moments after the deed was committed, people came to the spot attracted by the report, the waistcoat and shirt were found to be burned—the ball had penetrated the heart, and life was extinct. This young man a few months since was employed as clerk in the land office at Hongkong, but dismissed. We have not seen a report of the Coroner's inquest.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.—We endeavour to lay weekly before our readers as correct an account of the shipping as we can obtain; but they must be aware, that no public record being kept of the movements of ships, our information is derived from private sources, and may frequently be imperfect or incorrect. To obviate this as much as possible we circulate a paper every Friday containing the previous week's shipping list requesting that mercantile houses here would be good enough, on our circular to note arrivals and departures of ships, etc. It is of much importance, for the correctness of our shipping list, that movements of ships should be noted down, and we therefore beg to remind our friends, that in doing so, they will not only confer a favor on us, but will likewise ensure more correct shipping intelligence than it is now always in our power to give.

We only late last night received per John Maclellan from Bombay 28th Nov., Bombay papers of the 27th, from which we observe that the Mer arrived here on the 24th, whilst the Shah Alum, Corsair, Falcon, Calcutta, Lawyer Family, & Bengal Packet, were still expected from China. In the Bombay Times of 27th Nov. we find the following vessels laid on for China: Palatine, Strabane, Chusan, James Boorman, Reliance, and Cattle Huntly. We find no other news of interest in this paper.

THE POOR-LAW: MR. ROEBUCK AND THE TIMES.

(From the Spectator, September 11.)

In the House of Commons, on Monday, Mr Roebuck gave notice, that at the proper stage of any bill which should be introduced for the purpose of continuing the present Poor-law Commission, he should move clauses authorizing the Commission, and vesting the discretionary powers of the three Commissioners in the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

On Wednesday, Mr. Roebuck complained of a breach of privilege committed by the Times (in an article attacking him on account of the foregoing notice.) He did not do so on account of his own personal interest, for what the Times said could not affect him in any way: he was of Dr. Johnson's opinion, that no man could be written down except by himself. But although he did not call upon the House to exercise its power in the matter, the article in the Times was so gross a breach of privilege, that for the sake of morality, as well as of the ordinary business of Government, he thought it behooved him to meet in front any attempt of the kind. The Times had attempted to frighten—ay, to bully a Member of the House out of the performance of his duty. On account of the notice which he had given, he had been visited by the virulent abuse of the Times, as a person only "honourable" by being a Member of that House. He defied all the world to bring forward one act of his life that ought to deprive him of the appellation of "honourable."

"Honourable, Sir!" continued, Mr. Roebuck, who evidently, says the Morning Chronicle, spoke under the influence of great and unusual excitement—"why not honourable? They say in this paper that I am of the humble order of society. Suppose I were so, is that any reason why I should be interrupted in the discharge of my duty, chosen as I have been by a vast constituency of my countrymen to represent them in Parliament? Suppose I were not, as I am, distinguished in science and literature by the ancestors who have given me birth—suppose I were not so, is that any reason why I should be put down by an insinuation of this sort? It is said in that article that I am wholly unable, unfit, and improper person to suggest such a proposition to the House of Commons: of that, I think, the 60,000 inhabitants of Bath who sent me here are better judges than the anonymous scribbler of the Times."

He claimed the attention of the House and of the constituencies while he referred to this flagrant abuse of the liberty of the press—

"In the Times newspaper there is a person as accusary to it as the editor; I mean the person who is called its responsible proprietor, and is registered as such. His name is Lawson; but, taking the probabilities as they stand on the cards, he is most likely at present in prison. I say so because the chances are that that individual is in prison; for so libellous is the Times, that any body who represents it may be considered as a general rule to be in prison. This man, however, bears the responsibility of the Times—first, as to the fines which it may have to pay; next, as to the punishment which he may have to bear; and thirdly, as to the cudgellings which he may receive. But the writers of the articles are totally irresponsible. The man who has expended his venom in the article in question is as irresponsible as if he were living in South Australia at this moment, and had penned it there. Do you think, Sir, or does any one honourable Member present think, that he will send me his name to night when I go home? No! He chooses to pen an article in which he declares me to be totally unworthy the name of 'honourable,'—yet he dares not give me his name!"

He asked whether it was for the benefit of society that such proceedings should exist! and whether the abuse was not likely to lead to one of two things—either that society should demand that every man should put his name to the article which he should write, or that a bill should be brought into that House for the purpose? Before he finished he would suggest to honourable Members more sensitive than himself an infallible remedy for the evil—

"The parties who attack us here are totally irresponsible. You cannot get at them by the law or otherwise. I therefore suggest to honourable Members who may be similarly situated with myself, that if any one of them should be attacked by the Times newspaper, and should not wish the attack to be repeated, he should at once horsewhip Mr. Walter, the real proprietor. He may depend upon it that the attack would never be repeated."

Here Mr. Roebuck was interrupted with loud cries of "Order!" and Sir Robert Inglis asked whether he meant to make any motion? Mr. Roebuck had said in the first instance that he did not. Sir Robert remarked, that Mr. Roebuck had spoken about his ancestors having conferred distinction upon him in science and literature, though he had not told them who they were; but on no single ground had he claimed the attention of the House. After a good deal of chaffing as to the right order of procedure, Mr. Roebuck, in order to comply with the forms of the House, moved that the Clerk should read the article upon which an ulterior motion was to rest; but the reading of the Clerk not satisfying him, he went to the table and proceeded with it himself. The whole of the passage which was read ran thus—

"The circumstance that certain small gentlemen, who form a sort of one-shilling gallery club in the present House of Commons, entertain a very mistaken sense of their proper province and duties, is likely, we fear, to prove a material hindrance to public business, as well as a serious annoyance to the honourable circles who wish to behave peaceably in that great political theatre. The House, it seems, is not without its Olympus of disorderly gods, who, ere the curtain is well drawn up, have already begun their noisy and inconvenient interruptions, which will probably continue throughout the remainder of the session; nor, unless some effectual restraints be imposed on them, do we see how their incessant disturbance of the Parliamentary assembly can be otherwise than productive of the most mischievous results. Amidst the pauses which sometimes occur in the melodious voices of Messrs Hawes and Ward and Dr. Bowring, the House is threatened with an interlude by their gallery friend Mr. Roebuck, on the subject of the Poor-law Commission. Nothing could be further from our habitual civility, or more at variance with our known respect for the humbler orders of our countrymen, than to represent Mr. Roebuck as a nuisance. Having been made an honourable gentleman by dint of getting into Parliament, that elevated person has an undoubted right to exercise the privileges of his sphere—we admit it. That those privileges entitle him to fling orange-peel at the principal performers, or to have a sally at the dress-box now and then, might not, if his class-licences were moderately used, be reasonably complained of; Chartists, such as he, are chartered men; and their occasional impertinences are both expected and endured. But Mr. Roebuck and his associates must not be permitted entirely to forget their station. That he should be allowed to injure every thing at his mere pleasure is wholly out of the question. If he do not know his just limits and latitude, the lesson must be seasonably taught him. The evil of seeing important interests made utter havoc of by a precipitate and pert interference is not to be endured. In point of personal and political influence he is just as fit to lead in modifying the new Poor law as the one-shilling gentry of Drury Lane."

Mr. Roebuck then moved, that the printer of the Times newspaper be ordered to attend at the bar of the House. The motion was not seconded.

Sir George Clerk said, that the more regular course would have been for Mr. Roebuck to propose, as a preliminary motion, that the article in question was a breach of the privileges of the House.

Mr. Roebuck was ready to take the course suggested; and he accordingly moved that the article just read was a breach of the privileges of the House.

The motion was not seconded; and the subject accordingly dropped without result.

Mr. Yorke gave notice, on Tuesday, that on the introduction of the Poor-law Bill he should move the insertion of a clause to prevent the Commissioners from enforcing the separation of man and wife, where the application for relief arises from infirmity and not from improvidence or crime.

CORN-LAWS.—STATE OF THE COUNTRY.

(From the Globe, October 2.)

A meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Derby was held in the Town Hall on Tuesday, to memorialize the Queen not to prorogue Parliament until some measures shall have been taken for relieving the depressed state of trade, and the daily increasing distress of her Majesty's faithful subjects. Mr. Maseley moved the first resolution, which the Rev. Noah Jones having seconded, was carried unanimously. Mr. Johnson, the Rev. J. Gawthorn, and Mr. Strutt, M. P., severally addressed the meeting, and the address to her Majesty having been adopted, the meeting separated.

A similar meeting was held at Southampton on Thursday.

KENTISH TOWN.—A large meeting was held at the Assembly Rooms, Kentish Town, on Thursday evening, for the purpose of petitioning the Queen not to prorogue Parliament until the Corn-laws be fully investigated, with the view to the adoption of such remedial measures as shall ameliorate the condition of the poor. Mr. John Moor took the chair. Mr. Somers moved the first resolution, which Mr. Bryan seconded. Mr. Brady moved the next resolution, which Mr. Smith seconded, and which Mr. Hine opposed. The late ministry (he said) wanted to impose a duty of eight shillings on corn, and thousands of quarters had of late been admitted into this country at a duty of one shilling (laughter). Mr. Hine was pushed off the platform. He made his way back again, and insisted upon being heard—great uproar ensued. Mr. Hine declared, in a stentorian voice, that they (the opponents of the present ministry) advocated an 8s. duty, whereas they were only paying 1s. duty. Dr. Bowring said it was only 1s. a quarter when at a starvation price. Mr. Hine was again pushed off the platform and great uproar ensued. Sir Charles Napier, M. P., with difficulty obtained a hearing. If he held any influence over them they would hear the gentleman till midnight, and he would undertake to reply to him. Mr. Hine was then heard. The Rev. Mr. Garney triumphantly replied to him. The resolution was then put and carried, only one hand being held up against it. Sir C. Napier proposed the next resolution, which Dr. Bowring seconded, and which was carried unanimously. Mr. Yorke, M. P., then proposed the memorial. He said, the gentleman who had opposed the former resolution forcibly recalled to his mind the old fable of the wolf in sheep's clothing. He asserted, that corn had of late been admitted into this country at a duty of 1s. per quarter, whereas the Whigs advocated a duty of 8s. per quarter, and if the poor could not obtain bread when it was only 1s. a quarter, would they be bettered to have had it at 8s? If he made that assertion in ignorance, he was to be pitied; but if not, he intended to deceive. That assertion could be met by a very short answer. He (Mr. Yorke) was an independent gentleman, who cared for no party, his sole object being to forward the greatest possible happiness to the greatest possible number. (Cheers.) He replied, then, that the Whigs do not propose an 8s. duty when corn was at 80s. per quarter. That under a system definite and distinct, corn would ever rise to 80s. was to assume an impossibility. The object of the Whigs was to fix the price of corn at about 50s., and to add to that a duty of 8s., which would make it about 58s. Corn would permanently remain at or very near that price, and would not 58s. a great gain upon 81s? (Cheers.) That was the literal fact uttered by a man dependent upon an party, but desirous to hear and diffuse truth through every channel. The Rev. Mr. Gurney seconded the memorial. The Chairman then put the motion, and it was carried unanimously. Thanks were voted to the Chairman, and the meeting broke up. The memorial received a great number of signatures before the separation of the meeting.

MACLEOD'S CASE.

M'Leod was to be tried at Utica on the 27th of September Chief Justice Neilson would preside. Willis Hall, the State Attorney General, conducts the prosecution; and Joshua Spencer, the United States Attorney-General for the Western District, appears for the prisoner. It is said that several Quakers are on the panel of jurors. As General Scott and suite have left Buffalo for Detroit, there was no apprehension of an outbreak on the New York and Canada border, though the excitement, through the whole State of New York, had risen to a greater pitch than ever. The views of the two parties at home, and of the foreign ministers at Washington, all of whom are said to entertain the same view of the matter as laid down by Mr. Fox, are detailed with great avidity. It is much to be feared that if witnesses are brought up imbued with the spirit of the Niagara borderers to give evidence before a jury of Utica, "surrounded by national and political feelings as hot as the condensed steam of a boiler," it is very possible that they may swear to facts sufficient to compel such a jury to convict him. whole affair wears a very unpleasant appearance, and though the adherence of Mr. Webster to the executive, and the nomination of Mr. Everett to the court of London, augur the good wishes of the President, yet it is a topic the amicable settlement of which is devoutly to be wished. The Hon. John Q. Adams, in the House of Representatives, had condemned the course adopted by those who seemed desirous by their remarks to foment discord and provoke war. He declared, as he said, "in the face of the country and the world, that in regard to the affair of the Caroline, a due consideration of all the circumstances might lead to the conclusion that we were in the wrong. Were we sure we could find among Christian nations an empire who would not say that we had been all the while in the wrong?" In commenting on the fact that the state of New York had resolved upon trying M'Leod, Mr. Adams insisted that it was purely a national and not a state affair, adding, "There is not an enlightened nation on earth that would not decide against this idea of holding individuals responsible in a case like this." Mr. Adams closed this speech by paying a tribute of respect to Mr. Webster, and of admiration for the course he had adopted in the M'Leod case. Benjamin Lett, the spirit and incarnation of tumult and crime in the vicinity of the prisoner's place of confinement, has been once more apprehended, and is now in gaol and in irons at Auburn.

IMPORTANT TO MARINERS.
GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATION.

THE FOLLOWING IS REPUBLISHED FOR GENERAL INFORMATION: NOTICE.

Change of Pilot Station for the River Hooghly

NOTICE is hereby given that referring to the impracticability during the last S. W. Moonsoon, owing to the increasing report of Shipping to the Port of Calcutta to supply Pilots at the distant Station off Point Palmyras, the arrangements as noted in the following Memorandum from the Master Attendant, will be adopted for the next S. W. Moonsoon:

MEMO.

1st. A Pilot vessel will be stationed off False Point during the next South West Moonsoon, viz from the 15th of March to the 15th of September 1842, bearing according to circumstances E by N, a S. E. by S. from the Light House, and in from 10 to 15 fathoms depth of Water.

2d. This vessel will exhibit by day, when any others are in sight, besides the usual Company's Ensign at her Peak, a large Danish Jack (red with white cross) at her Main Top Gallant Mast Head, and at night a good Light to the same situation, besides burning a Blue Light every hour, and beating a Gong frequently in calm thick weather, to warn vessels coming from the Southward of her near neighborhood. She will not, however, have any Pilots on board, the main object of her intended Station off False Point being to guard all inward bound vessels from proceeding to the old Station off Point Palmyras during next season, and directing them to a new one in the South Channel between the Tails of the Eastern and Western Reefs, where Pilot vessels will then be found in from 16 to 20 fathoms water and from 6 to 8 miles South West of the present South Channel Buoys, that Buoy lying in Lat. 20° 58' 30" N. Long. 85° 4' East of Greenwich and in 12 fathoms water.

3d. For the purposes of more distinctly marking the new Station, the Commanding Officer's Vessel there will always wear by day, when other vessels are in sight a large St. George Jack, (white with red cross) at her Main Top Gallant Mast Head, besides the usual Company's Colours at her Peak, and at night be distinguished by a constant good Mast Head Light, by Blue Lights and Maroons used alternately every half hour and also by Guns fired every four hours, say 8 P. M., midnight, and 4 A. M., with good Rockets discharged at the same time.

4th. All vessels are recommended to be most careful in coming over from False Point to the New Station by constant attention to that safe old Guide the Lead, and thereby correcting their Steerage as Tides or Currents may or may not set them out of their proper course, and they are also advised not to come under 16 fathoms, a night especially, till they reach the Pilot Station and get their proper Pilots on board.

5th. Lastly, All vessels are directed not to approach the Pilot's Station at night without giving due warning, and only by the exhibition of Lights, say 2 Vertical where best seen, but also by the discharge of a Gun, if they have any on board, as soon as they descrie the first Pilot vessel near them. They are further recommended to be most careful not to come into collision with any of the Pilot vessels at the Station, on their own accounts, no less than that of the Public, as they will be held responsible for all Damages, and called upon afterwards to pay for all that may have arisen from bad Look out, inattention to duty, or carelessness of any kind whatever.

HONGKONG.—We hear it said that a plan for laying out the town of Hongkong is now near completion, and that to its not having been finished earlier is owing the present reluctance of the Hongkong authorities to grant any more building lots. We of course consider the non completion of the plan a very good reason for withholding grants for a while, as otherwise the town might be so irregularly built, as materially to affect the convenience and even health of the inhabitants, even were it not desirable for the sake of beauty and symmetry that a regular plan for building the streets should be strictly adhered to. A circumstance which deserves the particular attention of the magistrates, with a view to its prevention in future, is the frequency of fires occurring at Hongkong among the mathouses in the bazar, which have, although hitherto fortunately confined to them, on several occasions greatly endangered the newly erected brick houses. It is to be hoped that some regulations, ordering the mathouses to make room for brick houses within a reasonable time, will soon be framed. These would be no great hardship to the Chinese, whose towns and villages are invariably built of brick or stone, and not of bamboo and other inflammable materials, like the houses of Malaya and Indians. To show the frequency of fires as now occurring at Hongkong, we quote the following from a letter dated Hongkong 18th February, and hope that the subject already occupies that attention of the Hongkong authorities, which its importance so well deserves.

"Two fires have taken place within two days of each other, one on the night of the 8th, the other on the 10th inst. The first took place just below Capt Caine's house. It was quickly got under, doing little damage, only five mathouses were destroyed. The latter occurred on the forenoon of the 10th, in the bazar stretching up a hollow, running along the side of M. Fearon's house. The fire at first raged with considerable fury, threatening the entire destruction of a great many newly erected houses in this now large and important bazar; fortunately, however, it was extinguished with comparatively trifling loss. About 15 houses were burned, none of the recently built brick houses suffered. The frequency of these fires is truly alarming, and one would really suppose that they would induce the authorities to interfere, and adopt some measures to force the Chinese to build more substantially, or to remove to sites where parties, building brick houses, would not run the risk of having their property burnt at any hour. The risk incurred from the carelessness of the Chinese is really fearful, and calls for prompt preventive measures. These might be easily managed, were the authorities only to take a little trouble, and issue proper regulations; but this is perhaps too much to expect, as no regulations whatever exist relative to building town or roads. All appears to be guess work. I believe, however, that the plan of the lots and for a town is at last to be made."

A friend has kindly looked over the Chinese papers which we mentioned as having received, last week, with a view of translating such as should prove of interest; but we are sorry that after a most careful examination, he did not find any, although most of them official, that contained the slightest allusion to public matters connected with the war, on which subject on the contrary a most studied silence seemed to be affected in them. The only item of some interest, is the son of Keshen having been made a public officer by imperial favor. Keshen himself or any of the other Commissioners are not mentioned at all.

We give below "Notes of an Idler" concerning affairs at Hongkong. The strictures contained in these notes on the bad taste displayed in the public as well as private buildings, are, we dare say, correct enough, but there are, we believe, many reasons to excuse this want of taste; despatch in finishing many of the buildings having been a consideration of the utmost importance; and the want of professional architects allowed the Chinese bricklayers to display their art in the composite order, so as somewhat strangely to amalgamate their own predilections with the instructions given by their employers. The want of professional architects is much felt, and we fear it will be some time before Hongkong can lay claim to the possession of buildings of any architect-tural pretensions. However, as the saying is, Rome was not built in a day, and we ought not too impatiently to expect perfection in everything and at once.

A subject which however, to our mind, deserves the immediate attention of the Hongkong authorities, and to which we already alluded in our last, is the piracy committed in the neighbouring waters, since it is not without good reason, we believe thought, that the movements of the pirates are controlled by some six or seven Chinese living at Hongkong, who also take charge of the booty, and sell it there. It would be difficult, we believe, under the circumstances, to obtain sufficient evidence in a magistrate's court to convict these men of their offences, they being well able to fee the nature of understrappers about it, and to suppress evidence injurious to them; but might not a threat publicly made, that the law would visit such offenders with the utmost severity, be of some use, and might not sufferers thereby become emboldened to prosecute?

A few days since three French gentlemen, Mr. Chaillye, French Vice Consul, Mr. Mouge and Mr. Jeanneret, when returning from Whampoa to Canton in a Chinese dollarboat, they, wishing to examine half way pagoda, imprudently went on shore, where they were immediately surrounded by a mob of soldiers and country people, who seemed to have every inclination to maltreat them, had they not fortunately been protected from violence by two mandarines, who, content with their explanation of their being French, permitted them to re-embark in their boat. This however by no means suited the inclination of the soldiers, who on the boat attempting to leave, fired into her with their matchlocks, and being thus in imminent danger of their lives, they were obliged again to land, whilst the soldiers plundered the boat of everything in it, and also carried its Chinese crew off prisoners. The three gentlemen, against whom the mob seemed to be much excited, were again protected by the mandarines, and taken into a house, where they waited until night-fall, when under an escort of about 150 soldiers they were marched across the country, to the temple at Honan, and thence after some communication had been sent to the authorities of Canton, were taken across the river to the City-gate, where after having waited some time, and after having explained themselves to two Hong merchants, and their being French having been ascertained beyond doubt, they were at length set at liberty, and reached the factories by about 3 o'clock in the morning.

Sir Henry Pottinger, H. M. Plenipotentiary, accompanied by Major Malcolm and Mr. Morrison, arrived here on Tuesday last in the H. C. Steamer Hooghly, from Hongkong. No communication has, as yet, been made by H. E. to British merchants respecting the prospect of the permanency of Hongkong as a British settlement, as seemed to be expected by many. Up to this time we believe no positive directions regarding Hongkong have been received, but judging of the expense authorised by the authorities there in the building of Offices and roads, little doubt of the permanency of the establishment need be entertained. We hear it stated that the Superintendents' establishment will, with the expiration of the lease of the house now occupied by them, be entirely removed to Hongkong.

By the Bombay Castle the remainder of the October Overland mail has been received, and the arrival of the November mail is daily looked for in the Jeanyne. We have had no news of interest later than we had previously been in possession of. The new forts in and about Canton on the river's banks are now nearly finished, and many of them have lately been unmasked. The report that European engineers and artillery officers are in Chinese pay continues to be repeated, and it is even said that the Chinese have, under their tuition, attained already to great proficiency in firing with precision. We think however that the truth of many of these reports may well be doubted. From Canton we have nothing new to report, except that it is said that the Hong-merchants have again been squandered of a considerable sum, which circumstance must have somewhat embittered their holiday enjoyments.

H. M. S. Wellington, Captain Watland, called from Hongkong on the 18th for Singapore on her way home. H. M. S. Alligator, now a troopship, left these roads for Ceylon and Bombay on the 17th. The French Frigate Erigone, Captain Océille, left for Manila on the 16th, whence it is supposed she will proceed to the northern coast of China with the return of the southerly monsoon, and after that will visit Polynesia.

The Dutch Brig D. du. Capt. Griffin, last from Amboyna, early in the morning of the 14th inst. during thick weather, ran upon the Great Lema Island, nor was her close approach to the land observed, until after her jib had been snapped off by touching upon the rocks. The boats were immediately hoisted out and the Captain and crew arrived here on the following day. The vessel is a complete wreck, and no part of the Cargo has been saved, although a day or two since her hull had not entirely disappeared.

H. M. B. Chin came into the roads yesterday from Hongkong, and proceeds this day to Chusan with despatches from H. M. Plenipotentiary.

We hear that Mr. A. R. Johnston, hitherto Deputy Superintendent of Trade, and Deputy Governor of Hongkong, has by Sir Henry Pottinger been appointed Lieutenant Governor of Hongkong. We have yet seen no official notice of this appointment.

THE IDLER IN HONG-KONG.

If it be true, as I hold it is, that national character is evidenced by public buildings, I am puzzled to determine what in that of the Hongkongians, who have no forum, circus, agora, theatre; and, worse than all, no Temple of religious Worship: albeit the settlement has been occupied more than twelve months, and boasts a population of at least 18 000 souls!!! If there be none of these, there are temples dedicated to the worship of Mercury, Morpheus, and Venus; as is too obvious from their positions, which compels them to be the "observed of all observers." The bard of Twickenham, has said something like this:—

Vice is of so hideous a mien,
To be hated needs but to be seen.
So doubtless think the not-ables of Hongkong, as the shrines of the Paphian Goddess are permitted to occupy a most prominent position; commanding the anchorage, from whence one can discern their meretricious adornment, flaunting audaciously to the public gaze; whilst are wasted to one's ears, discordant sounds of the rude revelry, or drunken orgies of the inmates and frequenters.—Enough—I blush to say these newly erected structures occupy the first rank in the public buildings of Hongkong. Next, in pretension and importance, is the Government House; (which has changed its name to the Record Office since the late acting (?) Governor has been metamorphosed into a Lieutenant Governor) then the magistracy and prison—Shades of Vitruvius, Palladio, and Wren, what can we say? How fitly express the utter disgust we feel at such immaturities? First, as to situation, the Record Office so conveniently placed for reference, on a steep ascent, and so far removed that an ardent inquirer must, to arrive there, expose himself to the risk of solar martyrdom; alias a coup-de-soleil. This edifice, moreover, boasts a pediment which is emblematically adorned, or rather hieroglyphically enriched; but the meaning thereof is wholly inexplicable to the builder and the Hongkong savans. It is said, the Chinese artificer who executed it, was a wag, and that he has blazoned a sly hit at his obtuse and barbaric employers—on the whole, the facade struck us as an unfortunate, although able, and elaborate plagiarism on that interesting, itinerant exhibition, yept Richardson's Show, as displayed in all its glories at Bartemey Fair. The prison most strikingly resembles the portion of Wombwell's menagerie, which is appropriated to the elephant and polar bear. The magistracy—the mention of this mass of brick and stone, produces a feeling of nausea, so utterly revolting is it to every rule of good taste and fitness. Its position for business is still more inaccessible than the Record Office. The prison is however placed most happily vis-a-vis, and quite close to it; either with a view to its adornment, or for a fine "moral and political effect" on the frequenter of the Court:

Note 1. Vide the Plenipotentiary's Circular in your's of the 5th February, and you will appreciate this allusion. To us the advance on Yuyao, Tsikie, and Fungshwa, after the occupation of Ningpo, was about as important in "moral and political effect" as if the French, after occupying London, were to advance on Stoke Poges, Mudding, and Little Puddington, plunder the maltsters, distillers and corn factors, and like him of old who
In the night of his will,
Went up the hill,
With full ten thousand men
When he was there,
He found the bill bare,
And then walked down again
By the way was it not too bad in your last to quote the dispatch, from the O'Malley Papers?

for "the bane and antidote are both before them." As to private buildings, on entering the harbour you perceive the most commanding site, disfigured by a hybrid erection, half New South Wales, and half native production, and which is a forestate of the architectural absurdities to be perpetrated on the Island. The bungalows,—the builder seem to have caught the capricious and fantastic style of the celestials; but which most resembles to our un-sophisticated taste, a very feeble imitation of the rat trap or bird cage orders.

The godowns are structures on a grand scale, and seem every way suited for their objects, and their erection certainly shames the undecided and timid policy which has hitherto been fated to prevail in China, and which may for a time stifle, but cannot kill, the indomitable energy of British merchants.

The Chinese shopkeepers have evinced much good taste in their buildings, and if the plan in progress is carried out, the bazaar will soon surpass China Street in Canton; indeed, if the proposed width of street is adhered to, with the sanitary regulations suggested; the China town at Hongkong will be among the most striking features of the new settlement.

In dismissing the subject, I may truly say the government bunglers, and the bungalow builders, have meritoriously earned the epitaph; which was written on the architect, sir John Vanbrugh:

Lie heavy on him earth; for he Laid many a heavy load on thee.

I shall avail myself of an early opportunity to notice the fortifications, barracks, roads, and the land regulations.

The papers congratulate the friends of peace in both countries on the prompt manner in which an affair which might have led to difficulties between Great Britain and the United States had been settled.

The New Cabinet had been completed. The following are the names and the offices of its members:—Daniel Webster, of Massachusetts, Secretary of State; Walter Forward, of Pennsylvania, Secretary of the Treasury; Abel P. Upshur, of Virginia, Secretary of the Navy; John C. Spencer, of New York, Secretary of War; Hugh S. Legare, of South Carolina, Attorney General; Charles C. Approaching accouchement of her Majesty.—The interesting event for which the nation has been looking forward with so much anxiety to the month of November to bring about, may now be almost hourly expected. Dr. Locock, at the desire of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, has taken up his residence in Buckingham Palace, in order to be ready at the shortest possible notice to attend upon his royal mistress. We understand that the doctor will not again quit the palace until another accouchement shall have been aided to the house of Brunswick. The deepest anxiety is felt on all sides, and every passing moment is observed with interest.

A report states that the event of Her Majesty's accouchement is likely to be more distant than has been surmised.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

HOUSE OF LORDS

October 4.

THE NAVY.—The Earl of Minto said that his eye had been caught by two notices of motions which had been given in the other House: one for a list of commissions issued, and another of the ships put in commission from June 4th up to the date of the report to the present Admiralty distinguishing the appointments since Aug. 30th. These returns were not wanted. They could be of no service to the public, but as they appeared to sanction certain charges made against the late Admiralty on the subject of navy patronage, he felt bound to allude to them. The promotions in the navy were made—1. by death and succession; 2. by patronage arising to flag officers on station; and 3. by special minute of the board, expressing its approbation of the officer's promotion. There had been large promotions lately, for the events of Acre. &c. in Syria. Left many vacancies to fill up. Twenty-five mates had been made lieutenants, of whom all had served nine, and sixteen of them twelve years. Commander Crosier had been promoted to a captaincy on the special recommendation of Sir John Ross, for his conduct on the Arctic expedition. Commander G. Elliot, of the Hazard, in whom he naturally felt a strong interest, was promoted on the strong recommendations sent from Syria. Captain Grantville was appointed on the recommendation of Sir C. Adam, on his taking the command of a foreign station; and the fourth commander promoted was Capt. Parker, the oldest commander on active service. Lieutenant Scott had served with distinction under Walker Pacha, and was recommended by the Porte. (He was of a family strongly opposed to the Elliotts, in local as well as general politics) Lieutenant Lowe had been promoted in compliment to his uncle Sir Thomas, who had performed such service to the country by directing the practice of naval gunnery; the seven others were equally worthy. The sixteen mates, nine commanders, and four captains recently appointed; they might speak for his general practice, and would at once disprove the general belief that a certain local partiality and political influence had prevailed in his time at the Admiralty. No remark followed.

5th.—Corn-laws.—The Earl of Radnor, in presenting some petitions against the Corn-Laws, took occasion to remark on what had fallen from the Duke of Wellington in two recent discussions.

The Duke of Wellington repeated that he had not said there should be no change in the Corn laws, but that the subject ought to be deeply considered before any alteration could be proposed, and in the present Session there was no time for such consideration. The noble duke explained a former speech, in which he had stated that though there was great distress, it did not arise from a scarcity of corn.

Lord Kinnaird referred to the speech by the Duke of Richmond, found great fault with the shortness of the Session, and concluded by giving it as his opinion that the prorogation of Parliament would be an insult to the country.

The Duke of Richmond, after stating that he presumed the noble lord must have been out with the stags bounds when the speech was delivered on which he professed to comment, explained what he himself had really said on the occasion referred to. His grace, alluding to fall of the Melbourne Ministry, had attributed the event to their proposal of a fixed duty on corn, and added that the opposition of the agricultural interest would be directed with equal vigour against any administration by which a similar measure might be brought forward.

Slavery.—Lord Bragham rose to introduce a subject on which both Houses were singularly agreed. Nay, he believed there was no class of men in the kingdom who did not desire to see the slave trade suppressed, and the condition of slavery totally extinguished. Every British subject in any part of the world, whatever were the laws of the country he inhabited, whether slavery were condemned or ennobled, was liable to a penalty and to banishment for fourteen years if he interfered in any way with the slave trade or the holding of slaves. The sale of a cargo of fetters or any other matters decidedly and palpably intended for slave traders was an act of felony. Again a British subject might buy two slaves and land in a foreign country, but could he buy slaves to continue his plantation or mining work? No, it was distinctly a felony. Now, he had presented petitions showing that these felonies had been largely and widely committed by men of capital in England, who were not aware that their capital was illegally expended; but what could they say who had associated with the Society for the Abolition of slavery, on the ground, not of its illegality, but of its inhumanity? supposing the act legal it would not cover their inconsistency in so seeking profit. This had been done in Cuba and in the Brazil. He would not now press the House to a pledge that next session the Houses would enquire into these violations of the law, but he begged his noble friend (the Earl of Ripon) would consider the subject, and, by proclamation forbid all future violations, and put down such as existed. Why, he begged to ask, had not the report of Dr. Madden been laid on the table? He hoped the noble lord (Ellenborough) would issue an order in council putting down slavery in Malacca, where the slave-holders had agreed to emancipate their slaves next December. He would call his attention also to Ceylon, but especially to the continent of India, where it was proved that an absolute trade existed, in which women were employed to decoy travellers who had children to a particular place, where a gang of men were ready to murder the parents in their sleep, while the women took care of the children until they could be sold!

The Earl of Ripon said he heard these facts for the first time, and confessed his horror at them. He regretted that Dr. Madden's valuable dispatches were of a nature so confidential and delicate that the Government had decided against their production. The Secretary of the Colonies was busily engaged with the application of the Abolition Act, and the crimes exposed by the noble and learned lord, and as soon as Government could procure the legal advice he recommended, they would apply the law, if applicable, or come to Parliament for an Act more stringent.

Lord Ellenborough said the report on India to which the noble lord (Brougham) alluded had been printed a few weeks ago, and had been laid on the table of the House of Commons since the 6th of April; he was astonished that the noble and learned lord was not aware of that. He (Lord Ellenborough) had just laid on the table a very valuable report from Lord Auckland, which he recommended to the consideration of the noble and learned lord. The horrors he had cited as characteristic of India were not fairly so imputed, for in the most moral part of the United Kingdom, in Scotland, murder had been committed on a large scale for the sake of selling the bodies of the dead. (Hear) In India the murderers (Thuggees) committed the murder from a false notion of religion and mercy. The matter was before the Indian Government, which had been directed to take the initiative in the matter.

Lord Brougham said the persons he mentioned as murderers of travellers for the sake of their children were not Thuggees; as to the atrocity committed in Edinburgh, it arose from the high price of twenty-five guineas then paid for subjects for dissections. Subjects were made cheap, and the crime ceased.—Adjourned.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

Parliament was this day prorogued by commission with the usual formalities; the Commissioners, the Dukes of Buckingham and Wellington; the Earls of Ripon and Shaftesbury, Lords Brougham, Ellenborough, Wharfedale and Campbell; the Bishop of Worcester, &c.

Business of the House—The house met at two o'clock, and Lord Brougham presented petitions on the state of the colonies, for the abolition of slavery in India, and against the dissipation, excitement, and corruption of the late election.

The Royal Speech—The bills on the table were read a third time, and the Commons were summoned. The Lord Chancellor then read Her Majesty's speech:—

"My lords and gentlemen.

"We are commanded by her majesty to acquaint you that it appears advisable to her majesty to bring to a close the present session of parliament.

"In conformity with the advice of her parliament, and in pursuance of the declared intentions of her majesty, her majesty has taken the requisite measures for the formation of a new administration, and the arrangements for that purpose have been completed by her majesty.

"Gentlemen of the house of commons,

"We have it in command from her majesty to thank you for the supplies which you have granted to her majesty for those branches of the public service for which complete provision had not been made by the late parliament.

"My lords and gentlemen,

"The measures which it will be expedient to adopt for the purpose of equalising the public income and the annual expenditure, and other important objects connected with the trade and commerce of the country, will necessarily occupy your attention at an early period after the recess.

"Her majesty has commanded us to repeat the expression of her deep concern at the distress which has prevailed for a considerable period in some of the principal manufacturing districts, and to assure you that you may rely upon the cordial concurrence of her majesty in all such measures as shall appear, after mature consideration, best calculated to prevent the recurrence of that distress, and to promote the great object of all her majesty's wishes—the happiness and contentment of her people."

The noble and learned lord laid particular emphasis on the words "after mature consideration."

The commission for the prorogation of parliament was then read, after which.

The lord chancellor declared it was her majesty's command that the parliament should be prorogued to Thursday, the 11th of November—next, to be then and there broken, and that parliament was accordingly prorogued to the 11th day of November next.

Their lordships then separated.—The London Mail, Nov. 6.

THE OPIUM CLAIMS.

The following paragraph from the Bombay Times gives a fuller account than we printed the other day of the interview between the opium deputation and lord Aberdeen.

THE OPIUM CLAIMS.—We understand that a deputation consisting of Mr. Lyall M. P. for the city of London, the chairman of the East India Company, sir George Larpent, Mr. J. A. Smith, and Mr. Horsley Palmer, had an interview with the foreign secretary relative to the opium claims. The object, we believe, was the endeavour to get the government to apportion a part of the six millions of dollars taken from the Chinese towards the opium sufferers, who were represented by the deputation—and truly so—as chiefly natives of Bombay and Calcutta. The deputation was well received by lord Aberdeen, who stated, that one of the acknowledged objects of the instructions of captain Elliot was to obtain compensation for the opium; but that from an ambiguity in his (captain Elliot's) despatches, it was not clear the money was for that object or as a ransom for Canton. He further observed, that the government considered part at least as droits of the crown, and to be applied, as usual, to the capture—"naval and military"—that it was, however, only 'a first instalment,' it being the object of an armament to obtain more from the Chinese; and that it would be within the discretion of the government, to appropriate the money (beyond what might be appropriated to the ransoms) between the opium sufferers and the government for the purpose of defraying part of the expenses of the expedition—capt. Elliot's bills for the purchased opium having been paid.

The deputation then pressed his lordship to get a portion of the six millions awarded to the opium sufferers; he admitted the reasonableness of the request and promised to consult the treasury, but no reply had been received up to the departure of the last mail, although it was daily expected.

Private letters from parties who had conversed with his lordship on the subject, subsequent to the date of the interview, state that he assured them that part of the money would certainly be applied to the liquidation of the opium claims.—Calcutta Englishman January 9.

Commercial Intelligence.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—TEA.—The market continues firm. Company's Congou 1s. 10½d. to 1s. 12½d. per lb. cash.

HEMP. MANILA.—38½, 10s. and 8s. 9d. to 2½d. per ton—sales.

MOTHER O'PEARL SHELLS.—In Manila little alteration to be noticed.

CHINA SILK.—2400 Bales Bengal and 784 China have been offered, a part of which only found buyers, to a reduction of 6d. to 1s. per lb.—London Mail, Nov. 6.

THE TEA TRADE NOV. 1.—The deliveries of tea last week were rather considerable, amounting to 521842 pounds. The trade seems steadier, the fluctuations as far as private business is concerned having been recently of no particular moment, but at the public sales there has been not much briskness, and prices for all qualities have been rather lower. Although there is far less excitement in the market than there was a few months back, the advice by the next overland mail are looked for with interest.

LATEST LONDON COMMERCIAL REPORT.

(From the Morning Herald, November 4.)

The Tea market is firmer do-day. Company's Congou 1s. 10½d. to 1d. per lb. cash. The overland mail is expected this week.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Sept. 6.—Among the notices of motions which now stand in the order book of the House of Commons for the next Session, there is one by Dr. Bowring "To call the attention of the House to the case of the Rajah of Sattara, and one by Mr P. M. Stewart, to submit a motion respecting our commercial relations, past and present, with the Island of Java."

OVERLAND COMMUNICATION.—EXTRAORDINARY DELAYED.—A letter written by a friend of ours, on the 2nd of July last, was forwarded to Calcutta, via Marseilles, by the Overland Mail of the 5th of that month, reached its destination by the express from Bombay, on the morning of the 17th of August; the bill it enclosed was cashed, and a return remittance was made by Messrs Cockerell and Co. of that city, the same evening, arriving in London on the morning of the 9th, October, making a total of 95 days for correspondence out and home with Calcutta—unsurpassed for rapidity even to the annals of steam.

BRITISH TRADE WITH INDIA.—By a comparative statement of the number of British ships entered inwards and cleared outwards from and to places within the limits of the East India Company's charter from the 1st of January to the 30th of September, in the years 1840 and 1841, it appears that there have been entered inwards, from Calcutta, in 1840 and 1841.—from Madras, 22; from Bombay, 115; China, 34; Ceylon, 33; Singapore and Penang, 66; Philippine Isles, 30; Siam, 4; Java and Sumatra, 31; New South Wales, 127; Mauritius, 161; Madagascar, 3; Cape of Good Hope, 96; South Seas, 82. Outwards—For Calcutta, 335; Madras, 35; Bombay, 184; China, 40; Ceylon, 80; Singapore, 70; and other small places in proportion; New South Wales, 472; Mauritius, 106; Cape of Good Hope, 95; South Seas, 30. The increase on previous years inward and outward is material.

The British India Society has presented a petition to both Houses of Parliament, which concluded thus:—Your petitioners pray that your honorable House will interfere; that you will cause an impartial inquiry to be made into the case of the Rajah of Sattara; that if wrong has been done to him; your honorable House will restore him to the throne, which it is declared, he so worthily filled; and that in justice to the natives of India, as well as for the honor of the national character you will take steps to prevent in future the perpetration of such acts as these."

LAUNCH OF THE EASTERN STRAITS NAVIGATION COMPANY'S SHIP "PRECURSOR."—On the 20th of October, a very large and beautiful steam-ship was launched from the building-yard of Messrs Heddewick and Rankin, at Kelirinabang, about two miles below the Glasgow bridge. The vessel which is named the Precursor, is built for the Eastern Steam Navigation Company, and is the first of a line of mail and passage steamers which are intended to ply between Calcutta, Bombay, and the Red Sea, in connexion with the route by the Isthmus of Suez, and the steamers which complete the journey, by the Mediterranean from India to England. She is the largest steamer ever built out of dock, and launched from ways; the British Queen the President, &c., having been built in dock, and simply floated out. The following are her dimensions:—Length, over all, allowing 17 ft. of projection to the cutwater, 216 feet; length of keel for tonnage, 230 feet; length from stern head to taffrail, 241 feet; extreme breadth on deck, 41 feet 6 inches; breadth over paddle box, 62 feet; depth of hold in mid ships, 25 feet: the register tonnage, including engine pits, is 1,780 tons.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.—At a meeting of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, held on the 20th ult. at Leaden-hall street. Lord Ellenborough was unanimously appointed Governor-General of India, in pursuance of an intimation from the Board of Control, that the noble lord had been selected by Her Majesty's Government to fill that high and important office. Lord Ellenborough, we believe, intends to proceed to the seat of his Government by Her Majesty's ship Cambrian, Capt. Chads, c. a., to sail about the 15th instant.

We understand it is very probable that Lieut. General Lord Fitzroy Somerset, Military Secretary at the Horse Guards, will be shortly appointed to the Government of Madras.

Lieut. Colonel Orlando Felix, on the unattached half pay, has been appointed Deputy Quartermaster General to the Queen's troops at Madras.

On October 20th, the Rev. Walter Whiting A. M. was sworn in as chaplain to the East India Company's service on the Bengal establishment.

Lord Ponsonby having procured from the Sultan, at the instance of Lord Palmerston, the required firman for the removal of the antiquities discovered in Asia Minor by Mr. Fellows, orders have been sent out to Captain Graves to ship them and bring them to England for the British Museum collection. Mr. Fellows left England a few weeks ago to superintend their removal.

The Staff of the new Governor General of India, Lord Ellenborough, consists of Captain Somerset of the Grenadier Guards (son of Lieutenant-General Lord Fitz Roy Somerset), as Military Secretary; Lieut. Colville, gazetted last night from 85th to the 10th Foot (son of General Sir Charles Colville), and Lieut. Durand of the Bengal Engineers, as Aide-de-Camp. A gentleman from the office of the Board of Control, it is understood, will accompany the Governor-General as Private Secretary.

AFFGHANISTAN.

Bombay Times Extra.

TIMES OFFICE, 1 O'CLOCK, TUESDAY.

We had set up the various extracts given below when news reached us tending greatly to mitigate the alarms the communications of our North West contemporaries are calculated to produce. We lose not a moment in laying it before our readers.

Letters have this morning been received by express from Cabool the 3d, Kelat-I Ghiljee the 18th, Candahar the 14th, Dadur the 20th, and Kurachee the 30th ultimo.

From these we are rejoiced to learn that although a serious insurrection of the Dooranees existed at Cabool on the 3d ultimo, and the surrounding country was in a very disturbed state, the reports which have appeared in the Agra Ushbar and Delhi Gazette are highly exaggerated. The Kuzilbashies are not concerned, and the insurrection does not extend to the Kohistan, Taghow, or Nijrow.

The Shah and the Envoy were in the Bala Hissar, and it had been found necessary to fire on the insurgents, by the Shah's orders, from the fort, who were in possession of parts of the town of Cabool.

We are rejoiced to state that no mention is made of Sir A. Burnes, so that we may confidently hope that the report of the death of that valued Officer will prove unfounded.

In consequence of these disturbances, the troops under orders to return to India via Shikarpore, under Lieut. Col. MacLaren, had been ordered to make the best of their way to Ghizni and Cabool. These we believe consist of the 16th, 42d, and 43d Regiments Bengal N. I. and a Troop of Horse Artillery, and some Cavalry.

Candahar and the whole of the extensive countries under Major Outram's charge remained perfectly tranquil, though of course it is impossible to foresee what effect the disturbances at Cabool may produce on the turbulent tribes in these countries. In the interior, measures will of course be taken to secure tranquillity. The Kakar tribe are distrusted, because they have never been subjected to the authority of the Khans of Kelat.

There is now no chance of Sir Wm. McNaughten being able to quit Afghanistan before the spring.

SUKKUR.—The following is an extract of a letter just received, dated Sukkur, 24th November:—
"In consequence of the dismissed Kakura being in force in the Bolan, a party of the 25th N. I. were dispatched to overtake the Bengal Artillery, from apprehension of their falling into danger. Major Outram was to proceed to Debeson the 21st of Nov. The present state of that part of the country will now give full exercise to his well known energies."

AGRA UKHAR EXTRA.

Monday, November 28th.

We hasten to lay before our readers, the following intelligence communicated in a letter just received from Ferozepore, and which, we fear, is too true. We give it in the words of our letter:—

"Dreadful news from Afghanistan. General Sale has written to Mr. Clerk to say, that unless aid be sent speedily, he will be obliged to lay down his arms. At Jellalabad, they were already on quarter rations,—the whole country is up in arms, and no communication open with Cabool, the insurgents having put to death every man who attempted to carry a letter. They are most vigilant. A rise en masse took place towards the end of October, when Sir A. Burnes and every Officer in the town of Cabool, eight or ten always being present, were massacred; names are given, which we, for the present, withhold. The insurgents attacked the Bala Hissar; but were repulsed with great loss.—our guns and mortars did great mischief in the town and numbers of the enemy's horse were cut up in dashing style by our Cavalry. A son of Zameen Shah had been proclaimed King by the insurgents, and several of Shah Soujah's family had joined him. The general opinion seems to be, that the Shah was a party to the rise, in the hope of its releasing him from our thrall."

Besides the above, a Kurnaul Correspondent informs us, that the 19th Regiment Native Infantry were to march on the 29th of this month, and the 3d Buffs on the following day for Ferozepore, being a reply to Mr. Clerk's demand for two brigades. It is probable that an immediate movement will be made from Agra and Meerut. Mr. C. was at Loodianah, where he met the Lahore Vakeel who talked mysteriously about our recent losses in Cabool. An express from Mr. C. to his honour the Lieutenant Governor, reached this (Agra) last night, and has been duly forwarded to his camp between Coel and Muzra. The communication from Cabool via Candahar is clearly closed, for letters dated the 1st instant, have been received from the latter, when they were ignorant of the recent occurrence in Cabool. Letters from Cabool, via the Bolan Pass, dated 22d Oct. have been received, but none since. At Candahar they had executed Akhrim Khan, a very inopportune time to display severity.

If all this do not cause Lord Auckland and the Commander-in-Chief to appear at their proper posts on the N. W. Frontier—why—they will not be where they ought to be.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 28TH, 1841.

Since issuing our Extra of yesterday, we have received further accounts of the late disastrous occurrences in Cabool, which confirm what we have already received, and add the following:—

"Ferozepore.—Authentic intelligence has, at last, arrived. Letters from the Envoy from Cabool to General Sale and Lieutenant Mackison, give accounts down to the 9th instant. The insurrection broke out on the 2d, and was not quelled on the 9th, the date of the Envoy's last letter. Brigadier Shelton, with a Company of the Queen's 44th, and two Regiments Native Infantry and one of the Shah's were in the Bala Hissar. The rest of the Troops with the Envoy, were in our camp. The insurgents are still in possession of Cabool. The list of killed as yet received is as follows:—Sir A. Burnes and his brother; Captains Swayne, Robinson, and Raban, H. M.'s 44th; Moule, Wheeler, Salisbury and Broadfoot, Shah's Service; Gordon and Robertson, 37th Native Infantry. Letters from General Sale call for aid speedily; he had only six days' ration supplies, and all the country up in arms. Ali Musjid was attacked, and Dacca plundered by the Khyburies. Sale has little if any ammunition."

Another account says, "Sir Alexander Burnes and his brother killed, also Captains Broadfoot, Moule, Wheeler, Gordon, Swayne, Raban, Robinson, Rattraf, and Salisbury. Lieutenant Sturt, of the Engineers, is dangerously wounded. The town is still in possession of the enemy, the Fort is occupied by the 44th Foot, the three Regiments of Native Infantry in a walled cantonment, but by no means a strong place. General Sale is at Jellalabad without ammunition or food, but the former has been sent to him by General Avitabile, tho' God knows if the Sikh Troops will ever arrive with it, as all the Khyburies are up in arms, in fact, the whole country. The Buffs and the 19th Native Infantry leave this as soon as they can march, and H. M.'s 9th Foot and a corps of Native Infantry also proceed from Meerut."

CALCUTTA.

AFFAIRS AT CABOOL.

(From the Englishman, December 5.)

We are very sorry to say that the Peshawar report of a victory at Cabool proves to be unfounded, for by advices from the latter place itself, dated the 18th instant, no mention is made of any such circumstance, nor do they appear to have had any recent fighting, and lamentable to say, the force still continued divided between the Bala Hissar and the Cantonment. We deeply grieve to find also that the gallant little Goorkah corps in Kohistan has been annihilated, but captain Pottinger and another officer had reached Cabool. The Envoy cries out to pour troops into the country, forgetting that it is not so easy for them to reach him; but our four sepoy corps now on the way there, are marching through the Punjab in the highest spirits. Writing late at night, we have no time for further comment.

By a letter from Candahar, of the 15th ultimo, we find that positively "M'Larne's brigade marches tomorrow," that is, as we may here say, that it marched on the 16th of last month, and our further information from that quarter leads us to the, we feel confident, correct conclusion that General Nott was very averse to the measure, and only executed it in consequence of General Elphinstone's orders—a concoction, we presume, between the (in matters of this sort) weak heads of himself and the Envoy. In his disapproval of the movement, which is decidedly a false one, General Nott manifests a considerable military judgment; but in allowing it to have been made, we hesitate not to say that he has lost one of those opportunities of proving his superiority to ordinary capacities, which is rarely afforded to any man even once in a life time and which the great majority of men never are afforded at all. He had the homely but emphatic alternative of "making a spoon or spoiling a horn," and had he discovered the order—the horn would not have been spoiled. We must now hope for the next best thing, which is that something may occur to induce him to recall the Brigade ere it has got many marches on its way to Cabool.

We did not think it necessary to comment on the report of a victory having been gained over the rebels at Cabool, which reached Government on Monday from Peshawar, because though at the first blush we did not consider it improbable, still it was but a rumour, and on further reflection the circumstance of so kind of written account having been received from the Envoy caused us to doubt the truth of the story, as we considered that a victory would have occasioned at least a temporary confusion among the enemy, and that one of the several messengers who would have been despatched with the good news would have succeeded in reaching capt. Mackeson or General Sale. Very sorry we were, indeed, to find from our Tuesday's information, that our view of the case was confirmed; for such prolonged inactivity on the side of our force has in it much from which ill-management is to be inferred, and also something of the effect of positive triumph on the side of an enemy who can compel us to such passiveness. We have before now expressed our opinion of the injudicious manner in which our troops were weakened by being divided between the Cantonment and the Bala Hissar, and on the little co-operation which all along appears to have taken place between them, and we again record our judgment that there would be greater military skill evinced by a concentration of the force in the Cantonment, which would enable it to act more decidedly on the offensive, and thus shake the confidence of, and strike error into, the besiegers; then there is in maintaining the present divided system with actually paralyses a large proportion of the forces. There may be obstacles thrown in the way of concentration by the ally obstinacy of the Shah, and the weak compliance of the Envoy with his wishes; but these are the Gordian knots (and several of them have been cut in these late outward events), which a resolute sword would cut in two, instead of letting weak hands fumble, away and waste precious time to unravel them, and we feel certain that if General Elphinstone were an able and vigorous man, he would in the event of any such impediments to proper military action in such a crisis, assume the whole power, and issue his orders to the king the same as to any private soldier; for the emergency is one in which the friebbling of mere court etiquette, or mere diplomatic trimming, is just folly and impolicy. But instead of adopting measures which, as a General, he has the means of adopting with his troops upon the spot, we find him committing the gross blunders (in connexion with the Envoy) of now calling on Sale to return, and now on Nott to send a reinforcement,—movements which can only tend to the detriment, if not to wholly compromise, our cause elsewhere, without the probability of their producing any benefit to the force at the capital—and in short doing whatever betrays unfitness to cope with the adverse circumstances in which he is, in a military sense, involved. It is deplorable to find valuable lives and valuable interests dependant on the resources of such political professional mediocrity as is now charged with the chief care of our cause in Central Asia,—but the lament is in vain, for there cannot at present be any remedy applied. It is impossible not to feel very uneasy about the Candahar detached brigade, as well as regarding the corps at Ghuzni; for we apprehend they are placed in a situation from which mere skill may not suffice to extricate them, and in which even devoted courage cannot long sustain them. McLaren is a good officer and was brought up in a good school, and the best that can be done in the circumstances we make no doubt he will effect; but the best will avail little in the midst of a hostile country, in the winter season, cut off from supplies, and surrounded by active and elated enemies. As to Ghuzni, we have no notion as to what extent it is provisioned, but at any rate one corps is too small a garrison, save for mere peace duties, and the people of the town we presume are hostile. If Colonel Palmer remain there till he is blockaded by the insurgents, our opinion is that he will be beaten before he can be relieved; so that altogether we cannot reasonably take any but a gloomy view of the whole case, upon the information we possess, though, as we have already said, we feel perfectly confident of the ultimate result.

We have seen a letter from Jellalabad, of the 26th November. "Questions that they write in good spirits from Cabul, (November 18th,) although several are added to the list of deaths whose names have not, we think, appeared in any public print as yet. Capt. Macrae of H. M.'s 44th, Lieut. Rose, and Lieut. Westmacott, (37th) are in the list now given by our correspondent. They have three months supplies at Cabul, and feel confident of being able to hold their own until troops arrive from India; but we fear that three months' supplies (from the middle of November) would not suffice. At Jellalabad, the cantonments and Sir W. Macnaghten's house had been completely destroyed by the insurgents. Nevertheless things were a favorable aspect. All the troops, camp followers and cattle were comfortable in the Balla Hissar, (a wretched mud fort adjoining the town,) and in the town itself. The brigade had been hard at work at the defences, and there was no doubt existing of its being able to maintain its position until the enemy abandoned the blockade or succours might arrive. Two sorties had been made (as already stated) with good effect, and for some days previous to the 26th, the troops had not been molested. Asaf Khan and Gool Mahomed were still at Bala Bagh with 1000 followers but were very quiet.

THE UNION BANK.

(From the Englishman, Dec. 20.)

There was a run upon the Union Bank yesterday owing to a ridiculous report of the insolvency of the Bank raised by a Mahajan who applied for the payment of a draft on Saturday evening after hours!—The officers of the Bank were actively engaged paying away up to the latest hour yesterday, and as there was a sufficiency in the chest to pay liabilities over and over again, we take it for granted that, by this time, the constituents of the institution are pretty well satisfied of the absurdity of crediting for a moment the rumour raised by folly and propagated by malice.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"Oh, that mine enemy would write a book!"
(Proverb)

"Please sir honor it war the Beer wat done it"
(Mornings at Bowstreet.)

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—There is a letter under the signature of Gauntlet in your Contemporary's paper of Tuesday, relating to one of the greatest achievements of modern times, to wit, the second Battle of the Barrier, which requires a word from "authority." It is a rule in all civilised warfare, whether of the sword or pen, to respect the fair sex; and the writer in question has additional claims to tenderness, from the letter shewing, by internal evidence, that it is the production of an elderly female "much bemused with beer." The free use of those dangerous weapons the tongue and the pen has always been conceded to ladies in general; and may be considered the especial privilege of respectable old ladies in this predicament, but as their high authority, Mrs. Malaprop, in her advice to Lydia, lays it down as a law that "LYING does not become a young woman," I may be allowed to infer that it is not allowable in an old one; and I am sorry to be compelled to tell our satirical friend that she has "said the thing which is not." All the noble knights engaged in that celebrated "passage of arms" did ride through the scene of their glory the following evening, "armed at all points," and have continued to do so since. In fact, the object of their great undertaking having been rather of the "utilitarian order," than the attainment of glory and renown attendant on deeds of arms, the destruction of the barricades was immediately followed up by maintaining possession of the disputed territory; and I venture to hope our respectable friend may resume her walks without fear of molestation. If in addition to this friendly hint, I might be allowed to add one word of advice, it would be to call her attention to the mottoes prefixed to this paper; to suggest especially her eschewing in literature the "comic line" and a too free use of "Hodgson;" the following of which prescription, coupled with a total abstinence of those dangerous articles, pen, ink and paper, and a copious administration of watergruel, it is to be devoutly hoped, may drive away the foul fiend which has betrayed her into a composition exhibiting "the melancholy madness of poetry without the inspiration."

THE GHOST OF SCROGGINS.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 26th Feby. 1842.

On the 18th instant, too late for our last week's paper, arrived the Red Rover, from Calcutta 8th January, with a portion of the November overland mail, and was followed a few days after by the John Brightman, bringing most of the papers and letters by that mail. We have by them received Calcutta papers to the 7th and Singapore papers to 30th Jan., and made copious extracts of Europe and Indian news. The former present little of interest, except it be the acquittal of Mr. McLeod, who was able to establish a strong alibi. A great proportion of the tower was destroyed by fire; 200,000 stand of arms were burned, and many naval and military trophies. The loss is by some estimated at a million pounds. From India the news from Afghanistan is of a very unfavorable nature; for particulars we refer to our extracts. The first opium sale went off with some spirit as follows:

Patas 4000 cheets, highest 300, lowest 715, av. 737½
Benares 1500 " " 780, " 760, " 764½

It shortly afterwards advanced 305 for Patna and 790 for Benares.

Thirteen transports had been taken up by the Bengal government conditionally, to be discharged after Feb., if not wanted, by paying two months time.

It will be seen from our extracts that hopes are held out to the opium scrip holders that a part payment may probably be made them out of the Canton ransom money, of which another portion is to be prize money to the army and navy engaged in the attack on Canton.

The 37th Regt. Madras N. I. and the Bengal Volunteers are immediately to leave Hongkong for their respective Presidencies.

We have received the 6th number of the Hongkong Gazette just in time to extract from it Sir Henry Pottinger's memorandum declaring Hongkong, and Chusan free ports pending H. M. pleasure, and inviting shipping to Kolangood. It will also be seen that Capt. J. Ricketts has been appointed agent for the British government in Macao, and that the establishment of H. M. Superintendent is forthwith to be removed to Hongkong. Sir Henry and suite will leave this for Hongkong in the steamer Arcticon to-morrow morning.

We are obliged to an "Idler in Hongkong" for another paper, and hope that he will continue his valuable communications, which will tend greatly to keep our readers and us de full of what is going on there.

We have during the week had no news from Canton; nor from Chusan and Amoy.

Our readers will find with pleasure among our extracts that honors have been conferred on many officers in the Army and Navy, and that many promotions have been made in the latter, as a reward for the movement upon Canton.

HONGKONG—We have to apologise to our readers for the delay of 24 hours in the publication of our paper, occasioned by our having, during the week, paid a visit to Hongkong, whence we returned too late, considering that during our absence the November mail had arrived, and that the important events in Afghanistan, required copious extracts to be made, for the issue of the paper in its regular time; an inconvenience which we hope will be compensated to our readers, by our now being personally acquainted with the new settlement of Hongkong, the rising importance of which must naturally cause frequent mention of it to be made in our columns, and we shall no longer, comparatively, be liable to much error, when in future offering our remarks.

Although to our local readers a description of Hongkong may be of little interest, most of them having either been there lately, or compelled to live in Hongkong Bay on board their ships, after Lin forced them to leave Macao, in August 1839 yet to those at a distance, a slight outline of its most striking points, as far as our observation of a few days enabled us to make, may not be unacceptable.

The projecting town of Hongkong extends along the shore of the bay in a direction almost due east to west, about four miles, the last now occupied point in the east being the peninsula on which Messrs Jardine Matheson & Co. are building, and to the west a barrack now occupied by the Bengal Volunteers. These two extreme points of the town are connected by a road, the cutting of which, from the inequality of ground must have been a work of considerable labour, but which from the convenience it affords the settlers amply repays the trouble and expense. This road is so easy as to leave generally enough space between it and the water, for the erection of godowns, and this space has been parcelled out into water frontage lots, of 100 feet frontage each, and many of them were last July disposed of to merchants at auction for a certain annual quitrent, while the government reserved a great proportion for their own purposes. Great bustle and preparation is at present observable on these water-frontage lots; on five or six of them substantial godowns, built of brick, with a foundation of granite, which of a good quality abounds everywhere on the island, have already been erected; whilst almost on all the others belonging to private individuals the ground is levelled, foundations for building are being laid; and piers of granite run out into the water for the greater convenience of landing goods. One of the largest warehouses as yet erected, has lately been purchased by government. On one part of the road the space between it and the water is occupied by one of the Chinese bazaars, which still chiefly consists of marshalls but brick buildings are fast rising, and we doubt not that in a very short time no others will be seen there, since the great danger from fire will suggest to the occupants the greater economy of substantial buildings, even were the authorities not to interfere.

The ground immediately contiguous to the road on the other side away from the water is divided into what are called town lots, and their number and depth along the road varies according to the nature of the ground, which sometimes, rises abruptly, not affording building rooms, whilst at other places, buildings may be erected a considerable distance in land. On these townlots several dwelling houses have already been erected, and the applications for lots, particularly from the Chinese, are very numerous. Two streets forming a bazaar, built of brick houses are in a state of great forwardness; these houses, generally, we believe, 15 feet street frontage and about 35 feet deep, pay an annual groundrent of five dollars each, and other town lots pay the same in proportion to their size. The prices realised for the water-frontage lots are much higher, and those proportioned since the public sale, are to pay quirent in proportion to the prices realised at that sale.

Beyond the townlots, are the suburban lots, and these, we imagine, extend over the whole island; their value is much less, and will of course be governed by circumstances.

The government buildings consist at present of a Magistracy, a large and convenient brick building, just finished; the post office, record and land office, the jail, and several other small brick buildings, some warehouses, and several barracks either finished or building.

We have thus given in a few words an imperfect outline of the town of Hongkong, and from what we have said, it will be seen that a very large sum of money must already have been laid out by government and private individuals, of course under the conviction that Hongkong will remain a permanent possession of the British Crown; no orders from the government concerning it are however as yet understood to have been received by the British authorities in China; and although we firmly believe that it will never be restored to the Chinese, yet the uncertainty on this head has considerably retarded the success of the establishment, which cannot however fail it in the end. Its situation for mercantile purposes is admirable; it skirts along a magnificent bay, in which ships of all sizes and numbers may find shelter at all time, and although in July last year the typhoons did considerable damage all the ships that had paid due attention to the signs of the weather, and taken the necessary precautions escaped unhurt. It is in the immediate neighbourhood of Canton river, and cannot, as long at least as the present difficulties last, fail to attract a great portion of the trade of Canton; it is within a few days sail as the monsoon may be, from the mercantile province of Fuhkeen, several of whose junks have already gone there, and there is little doubt that a considerable trade would already at this moment be carrying on, had not that most injudicious measure of seizing the junks, and condemning them as prizes, driven for the present all commerce away; and although, since the Plenipotentiary's return from the northward, orders in future not to molest Chinese trading vessels have been given and to restore such as had not at the time of his arrival been sold, yet it will be some time ere confidence can be restored. Just now, whilst the trade at Canton continues open and unmolested, that carried on at Hongkong is of little consequence, and chiefly confined to Opium, and here and there a few manufactured goods may be disposed of, or a little tea and cassia purchased. The trade now carried on by the Chinese population is with the exception of salt, of which already Hongkong is said to have become a depot, chiefly confined to their immediate wants. This population, composed of mechanics, shopkeepers, and labourers has, we think been overrated at 15,000. We are aware that without a census it is almost impossible to arrive at numbers with any degree of correctness, yet we should think little more than half that number to be nearer the truth.

If, however, in a mercantile view, the situation of Hongkong be so very desirable, considering it as a place of residence, its locality offers many drawbacks to its other advantages. It stretches as before said along the bay from east to west, with a southern aspect; it is consequently open to the piercing northwinds in winter; whilst in summer the very high hills which rise abruptly immediately behind it and behind which the setting sun now disappears to the Hongkongians before four o'clock, preclude the possibility of its being cooled by the southerly winds, prevailing during the south west monsoon. It must therefore be very cold in winter, and almost insufferably hot in summer. We have hardly yet obtained sufficient experience to know whether this formation will be favorable to health or otherwise; the latter may be apprehended, and indeed, a good deal of fever prevailed during the warm season and till late last year, but there were several causes then besides the climate to account for its appearance. At the time of our visit the place was perfectly healthy. A great advantage is its being so well supplied with very fine water. Wherever wells have been dug, water has been found of good quality at a small depth; and in a well lately dug behind the magistracy, although at a considerable elevation, water was found at the inconsiderable depth of 8 feet. Besides the wells there are numbers of rivulets, which give a sufficient supply at all seasons.

The road running through the town of Hongkong is continued all through the island to its southern coast, where it ends at Tytam bay, at the village of Cheekchuen. It is a work of great labor, for during its whole extent of about 9 or 10 miles, it is cut into the sides of hills, or leads over ravines, and manifests considerable engineering skill, not however wholly ascribable to the English engineer, as some part of it had already been made by the Chinese, and has only been improved and enlarged at present. The interior of the island presents scenes as wild as can be; it is with the exception of a few small valleys, from which the industrious Chinese reap scanty crops of rice and wheat, nothing but a wild jumble of hills, that generally seem to rise in an angle of about 45 degrees, and in many instances are even much steeper. They are covered with a scanty vegetation of brushwood and fern, and stunted shrubs may be found here and there, although where there is any cultivation, fruit and other trees seem to thrive well. It would be therefore a work of immense expense, if at all feasible, to make the road fit for carriages; at present, with the exception of a few spots, gullies over which the bridges have not been completed, a horse may be rode in Tytam bay. This bay, near which and the village of Cheekchuen there is plenty of ground for building a considerable town, is as far as regards climate, much more favorably situated than Hongkong; it is sheltered from the north, and open to the south winds, but unfortunately the bay though capacious, is not sufficiently sheltered from the southwinds, to allow of ships anchoring there during the south monsoon. Another place, Cheekpewan to the south west of the island, is said to offer a situation for a settlement more favorable than either Hongkong or Tytam bay; but the shortness of our visit did not permit us to go there. At Cheekchuen one barrack for 30 men, and an officer's house is already completed, and the foundations for an other barrack of the same size laid down.

THE IDLER IN HONGKONG.

As promised in my last, I now send you some remarks on our fortifications &c. Beginning eastward of our projected town, you will find a Fort is now building on Kellett's Island, which was intended, but certainly does not command the Lei moon passage. The value of this fort will be only estimated, when I say that it is regarded with a contemptuous smile of derision by the competent authorities of Hongkong; who have christened it "Gough's Folly" and who confidently averred that the arrival of the Plenipotentiary would be the signal for the abandonment of the work. The reason now alleged for its prosecution is, that a contract had previously been made for its completion; no completed it will be, and thus heedlessly are the public funds wasted, for it is now found that the point beyond must also be fortified, as a work there would command the Lei moon passage, and thus protect one of the entrances to the harbour. It is rumoured that fortifying Kellett's Island, is a pet project of Sir Hugh Gough's; whose prepossessions in this respect are shared by our Lieutenant Governor and by no one else.

A casual observer would say that this fort, was specially constructed to protect the magnificent establishment of an eminent firm, which is proposed to be erected on the point immediately contiguous I know not whether Sir Hugh Gough be an Irish man, but certainly this erection is a practical bull, as he ought to have built, not a fort, but a magazine, in such a position. In reference to a similar blunder the witty Dean of St. Patrick's, extemporised as follows:—

"A solid proof of Irish sense,

Here Irish wit is seen,

For where the fools have built the Fort,

They should have built their magazine."

But to resume. Going westward we encounter a half moon battery or platform, which is to mount some half dozen heavy guns on carriages. This work is in front of the barracks, now occupied by the 37th native Infantry; and a similar one is constructing, at the extreme west of the town, to protect the barracks there, and at which are stationed the Bengal Volunteers.

The battery eastward is dignified Pottinger, whether commemorative of the Plenipotentiary's rapid advance, and glorious successes in the north, or his speedy and prudent return to the south, we have not yet discovered. We would venture to suggest that the battery westward should be named Ochterlony, in compliment to the talented superintending engineer officer of that name who, on all and every occasion, has most unequivocally shown his thorough identification with the best interests of Hongkong.

With regard to the barracks now occupied by European troops, and so much complained of, it is but justice to Captain Mylius (the land officer, and director of public works to say, they were originally built, and intended for sepoys, and in point of convenience are fully equal to any similar erection in India. That barracks adapted to European troops, with proper officers quarters, have not been erected, is not the fault of Captain Mylius, as from his professional reputation, coupled with the enormous charge of the transport service, he could not fail to have pointed out to the authorities the expediency of this measure. And we are assured that fully 140,000 dollars have thus been misapplied; during the last four or five months; a sum fully adequate to the construction, in the best manner, of all requisite barracks, commissariat godowns, &c. &c.

We shall be grievously deceived if some very stringent queries are not put in St. Stephens touching this matter; as also about the seizure of the junks. Flogging of China men. Ningpo prize money, and other matters which shall be at present nameless—such interrogatories, will, we are afraid, place some of our magnates in no very enviable position at home; where we defy them to be able

To prove by reason, in reason's despite,

That white is black and black, is white.

That right is wrong and wrong, is right.

We believe that orders have at last been given by the Plenipotentiary for the disembarkation of the troops, paying off of the transports, and erection of barracks: If so, then his visit to Hongkong will not be altogether useless.

The barracks on the other side of the island are situated at Chek chuen, and seem admirably adapted for the purpose, and every way creditable to the judgement of captain Mylius, who, we are sorry to hear, is soon to leave this to join his regiment in the north, and whose departure will be much regretted; as to an untiring zeal and industry, he surpasses far more intelligence and businesslike attention than is ordinarily found in a temporary occupant of a colonial office.

It is not yet known: who is to be his successor in an office the importance of which cannot be over estimated, whether we regard the health, comfort or prosperity of the future Colony.

The intended town of Hongkong should be one of the most salubrious in the world, and, as respects the health of its inhabitants, no site more eligible, provided proper local regulations be made and enforced by the authorities: in respect of whose duties, we shall not (if asked what they are) reply as the present premier, Sir Robert Peel, did viz: "It will be time enough to offer advice when it is asked of us in office" but we shall most patriotically inform them what to do and how to do it, that is, if we are not better employed.

Before concluding, we are compelled to remark that the deepest dissatisfaction is felt by the Hongkongians, at the ominous silence of the Plenipotentiary, relative to the permanent occupation of the island. In many, perhaps in most cases, silence is wisdom, and the well known aversion of the colonial office at home to new settlements, on the score of expense, is as regards Hongkong deemed no valid excuse for the dogged taciturnity, and which, if persisted in will cause us to ask "what does he in the south when he should serve his sovereign in the north."

We should ourselves say, from some consideration of the matter, that Hongkong as a Free Port and without any exclusive rights or privileges could not fail (except under the most deplorably inefficient government) to pay ab origine all the expenses of the necessary establishments and officials which are now, or may hereafter be required, thus costing John Bull not a farthing. And we would further add, that only the dominance of the most egregious ignorance of the true principles of political economy, and modern colonization can prevent Hongkong from becoming, other than a self sustaining colony, and one of the most important commercial entrepôts in the east.

(From the Hongkong Gazette of 26th Feby.)

The following proclamation issued on the 14th day of December last, by Her Britannic Majesty's Plenipotentiary, &c., &c., in China, is now published for general information.

PROCLAMATION.

The undersigned, Plenipotentiary, &c., of Her Britannic Majesty, publicly notified, by a Proclamation, dated on the sixth day of October last, that the city of Tientsin, and the island of Chusan, and its dependencies, would not be restored to the Emperor's authority until the demands of England against China should, not only be acceded to, but carried into complete execution; and the inhabitants were therefore invited to resume their usual occupations and trades, under the assurance of being protected and kindly treated, so long as they should conduct themselves as peaceable and obedient subjects to the existing government.

It has been lately brought to the notice of the undersigned, Plenipotentiary, &c., that some of the inhabitants of the above named city of Tientsin as well of other places, are laboring under a feeling of apprehension, that they will hereafter be punished by the Imperial government and the mandarins, for having returned to reside under the authority of the British government, and also for having held intercourse, and dealt with its officers and its subjects. It therefore seems to be expedient and necessary, to adopt measures to allay and remove the above described feeling of apprehension; and with that view, the undersigned, Plenipotentiary, &c., hereby further announces, that (if they ever are restored) one of the stipulations on which the restoration of the said city and island, and its dependencies, is to depend, will be, that the Emperor shall, under His Imperial sign manual, confirm and promulgate an edict of amnesty and indemnity to all and every one of the subjects of China, on account of his or their residing under, or holding intercourse and dealings with, the British government, its officers and subjects.

This proclamation is now issued for general information, and the special assurance of all persons whom it may concern.

God save the Queen of England.

Dated at Ningpo on the 14th day of December, 1842.

(Signed) HENRY POTTINGER.

By order, J. ROBT. MORRISON,
Chinese Secretary and Interpreter.

PROCLAMATION.

Her Britannic Majesty's Plenipotentiary, Minister Extraordinary, and Chief Superintendent of the Trade of British subjects, in China, deems it advisable to notify, that pending the receipt of the Queen's Gracious and Royal Pleasure, the harbours of Hongkong and Tientsin (Chusan) and their Dependencies, shall be considered "Free Ports," and that no manner of Customs, Port Duties, or any other Charges, shall be levied in the said Ports, on any ships or vessels of whatever Nation, or sailing under whatever Flag, that may enter those Ports, or on their cargoes.

Her Britannic Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary, &c., further notifies, that every facility for loading and disposing of merchandize, as well as ample protection under all ordinary circumstances, will be afforded to all ships and vessels, of whatever Flag or Nation, that may visit the anchorage of Koolangsoo in the harbour of Amoy, and likewise that, in the improbable event of H. M.'s Forces being withdrawn from the Island in question, a sufficient period will be allowed for all merchants and others to remove their Goods, as well as to adjust their accounts.

God save the Queen of England.

Dated at Hongkong, on the 16th day of February, 1843.

HENRY POTTINGER,

Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary.

NOTIFICATION.

Various applications having been made for sailing letters for the protection of British-owned vessels not entitled to the privileges of British Registry:

Notice is hereby given that such sailing letters will be furnished to any vessels bona fide British property, but not entitled to Registry, on application and proof of property, at the office of the Superintendent of British trade in China. A fee of five dollars will be charged on every sailing letter furnished to any vessel.

By order,
J. ROBT. MORRISON,
Acting Secretary and Treasurer.

bid.

NOTIFICATION.

Her Britannic Majesty's Chief Superintendent of trade &c., &c., in China, being about to remove his establishments from Macao to Hongkong. It is hereby notified that JOHN RICKERS, Esq. has been appointed government agent at the former place, with authority to open all mails that may come to the address of the post-master or other British functionary, to make up packets of letters sent to him for dispatch on the departure of vessels, of which the government agent will in all ordinary cases give due notice, and to be the medium of transmitting references and communications which Her Britannic Majesty's subjects residing at or visiting Macao or others, may wish to have sent to the Chief Superintendent or his Deputy at Hongkong.

It is further hereby notified that it is the intention of the Chief Superintendent, &c., to address letters by the earliest opportunity to the governments of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, and Singapore, as well as to Her Majesty's Post master General in London, suggesting that letters intended for and specially addressed to Macao or Canton, shall as far as possible, be henceforward made up in separate packets, whilst the great bulk of the correspondence will, as heretofore, be forwarded in the mails generally addressed China, and which latter it is proposed, shall only be opened and assorted at the post office at Hongkong, so soon as the arrangements now contemplated have been carried into effect.

All merchants, and others interested in the above described arrangements, are requested to note the same, and recommended to instruct their agents and correspondents in Europe, India, and elsewhere accordingly.

By order,
J. ROBT. MORRISON,
Acting Secretary and Treasurer.

DUBLIN.

ELECTION OF LORD MAYOR.

After the election of Daniel O'Connell as Lord Mayor, yesterday, he addressed the assembly. I give extracts from the important parts of his speech:—

The Right Hon the Lord Mayor said—I am proud indeed of the honour which has thus been conferred upon me—(great cheering), and all I fear is that I may be supposed to be guilty of partiality in permitting that ebullition of feeling—"no, no," from the opposition benches). I am glad to see the kindness and generosity with which you have received my contradiction of the apprehension of my being considered partial; however, if I am guilty of partiality now, it is in all events my first fault—(a laugh), and I hope it will be my last (laughter). No man ever accepted the office which I now hold—that high and important office, with a deeper sense of the duties of it than I do—its obligations its practical utility even in the details of working out its operations, and above all the importance of the example of unanimity which I trust we will give to the country at large—the practical proof I hope we shall give that Irishmen, although differing in religion and in other respects, can set together quietly, honestly, and wisely, for the benefit of their common country—(hear, hear). It shall be my most anxious desire to endeavour by my conduct to palliate if not to justify the eulogium which have been bestowed on me by the gentlemen who proposed and seconded my nomination to-day, and to show those who would have voted against me, if a division had taken place, that they were wrong in the opinions they entertained respecting me—(hear, hear). The honour of being elevated to fill the office of Lord Mayor of the city of Dublin, I was certainly most anxious to aspire to. It having been conferred without a division renders it more precious to me—(loud cheers), and I confess that I do feel very considerable gratification at my success, particularly when I reflect upon the rank and station of the hon. gentleman who was proposed to be my rival—(hear, hear), a gentleman who could not be exceeded in integrity and honour—(hear, hear), but your choice has fallen on myself, and I thank you most sincerely for the honour you have conferred on me. I have also to thank Mr. Alderman Butt most heartily for the manner in which he has opened the opposition; he has feelings which, as long as he cherishes them, he has a perfect right to express freely; but he has given expression to them to-day in phraseology the most mitigated and in terms the most inoffensive that could be—(hear, hear). Indeed it shall be my pride to imitate that good feeling which he has evinced here to-day—(cheers), and if I shall be able to do so, then I hope I shall have but little difficulty in working out my intentions in reference to this assembly. With regard to the present officers, there were some of them entitled to compensation which of course would be imperative upon the corporation to give. One of them was Mr. Dickenson. Four of them were the four junior Aldermen who were entitled to compensation. He believed the assembly were disposed to be as saving as possible of the public money, though he was one of those who thought that it was highly unjust, first to make a man quit all other pursuits and give himself up to one, and then turn him out when he was not able to apply himself to any other line of business. It was never his feeling to do that. Even if the act of Parliament were not mandatory upon the assembly, he was sure they would feel it incumbent upon them to compensate those officers of a certain standing who would be removed. Whoever were removed should be compensated. It would in the first place be incumbent upon the assembly to appoint a committee who would report what officers are removable, and what compensation should be given to them. He was not at all surprised that those who had been hitherto excluded from those, not spoils, but public advantages, he would call them—(a laugh)—should be anxious to participate in them now. That was not at all surprising—it was quite natural—(hear, hear). From the radical benches—but then all removals and changes must be made with perfect justice to those removed. He would not be a party to anything else, and he was sure he but echoed the sentiments of every person in the assembly when he expressed that opinion—(hear, hear). There are two principles to be carried out under the Municipal Reform Act—one is the publicity of all the proceedings of the corporation, and the other is particular economy in every thing they do—(hear, hear). He was sorry to say that great distress, approaching to famine, prevailed in the south of Ireland. If that were the case, men of every creed and denomination should join in relieving it; and should he be called upon to convene meetings of his fellow citizens, he would do so with the most perfect confidence that no motive would actuate them but that of charity. As chief magistrate he would call meetings for charitable purposes whenever it was necessary; but he never would convene political meetings. He did not intend, as Lord Mayor, to call meetings except for charitable purposes—(hear, hear). He had then stated in detail all the objects to which the attention of the assembly should be directed, and he would next proceed to regulate the precedence of the Aldermen and Councillors who had the same number of votes. He would leave the chair with the utmost anxiety that the slightest trace of party feeling should not be seen in his conduct; it should be his anxious desire to reduce taxation, to encourage trade and domestic manufactures, and, above all things, to preserve the liberties of the people—(cheers).

Sir John Power and Mr. McKenna were then elected Aldermen.

After some further routine business, his lordship proceeded to the room formerly appropriated to the late Lord Mayor and Aldermen, and addressed the immense assemblage of persons who thronged the streets and were anxious to get a glimpse of his lordship. No language could convey an idea of the cheering and tumult which prevailed during his address. It was impossible to catch a syllable of his lordship's observations. He then left the room, and was attended to his private carriage by a number of persons. Mr. O'Neill Daunt accompanied his lordship. Mr. Thomas Reynolds sat in the coachman's seat, and Mr. Atkins, Mr. Ray, Mr. Cress, and Mr. Rawson occupied the dickey. The crowd pursued the vehicle as it was driven in the direction of Stephen's green.

The streets were densely crowded during the entire day in the neighbourhood of the castle, College-green, and the City Assembly House. After the election had terminated the mob went to College-green, and commenced throwing the newly-laid down shingle at the statue of King William III. The shutters had to be put up for the protection of the shop windows. The police force was quick get into requisition, and further annoyance of this kind put an end to. The entrance to the university was closed, and those inside had to depart through the back gate in Brunswick-street. After nightfall all noise and apprehended disturbance had ceased.

STATE OF PARTIES IN SPAIN.

(From the Morning Herald, November 3.)

Some communications have reached us from a source, to which we are accustomed to attach the highest confidence, wherein we find it pledged that the position of Espartero and the real state of political parties in Spain are very inaccurately appreciated by a majority of the "British public at this moment." We apprehend that there is no doubt of the continued existence and vigorous prosecution of a negotiation which has been for some time pending between the two extreme parties in that distracted country,—the Moderados and the Carlistas. How irreconcilably severer their political principles may have been heretofore opposed, they have always concurred in a common feeling of strong dislike and opposition to Espartero. The recent abortive attempt of Christian, wicked in its scheme and precipitate in its execution, has completely dismembered the section which was well disposed to favour her pretensions until their own connections and leaders were offered up, a precious but fruitless sacrifice to projects not less guilty, we fear, than unattainable, and is at this moment, we are told, submitted to the leaders of the parties in question; and it turns upon these conditions: 1. That Don Carlos shall formally abdicate his pretensions to the throne in favour of his son; 2. That this young Prince shall espouse Isabella II.

The relations of Portugal with Spain, too, which appear at present as distrustfully and even angrily maintained, may be fanned soon to assume new features of European interest. Some of our readers may have heard of the white diffusion and growing influence of a secret society which has long been in active operation, throwing out subordinate lodges and communities of a similar character and operating to the same common point, the establishment of a republican form of government in Spain. We think we may assure the public that important discoveries have, very recently indeed, been made in Portugal, from which it would appear that the parent society has largely diffused its branch members, for effecting the enlarged project of incorporating Portugal with Spain, in the most extensive of European republics (since that of France at the close of the last and the beginning of the present century) under the imposing title of New Iberia. How it may be proposed to overcome the extremely active principles of repulsion which at present exist in all their vigour between the hazy natives of both countries throughout their respective frontiers and frontier provinces, has not been explained to us. We confess as the result of our own personal knowledge and observation, in those regions, of the marked differences moral and physical, of temperament and genius, between the two races, we are at a loss to understand by what process of political amalgamation it can be hoped to unite two families of the European stock, so singularly distinguished the one from the other, by permanent national features, into one nation. We give these rumours, without offering any opinion on the matters to which they relate, precisely as they have reached us.

PRECIS.

(From the London Mail, November 4.)

Oct. 26.—From the results of the census which has just been concluded, it appears that the population of Great Britain and Ireland in the present year, amounts to upwards of 27,000,000 souls. The return for the three kingdoms, the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, is as follows:—

England and Wales	25,001,361
Scotland	2,624,386
Ireland	8,205,382
Guernsey, Jersey, and Isle of Man	124,078

Total, 26,855,028

This is exclusive of the army and navy, of merchant seamen abroad, and of all persons travelling abroad, or not under roof on the night of the 5th of June. Including these classes, the population may safely be taken at 27,000,000; which is an increase of about 2,000,000, since 1831. If to this is added the population of the colonies dependent on the country, it will be found that the subjects of the British crown are more numerous than that of any other civilized monarchy or republic on the face of the globe. An office communication has been made from the treasury to the bank, that of 60,000l. Exchequer bills sent up yesterday, the result of the finding operation, the whole are spurious and have been impounded. It is now established clearly that there are fictitious bills in circulation to a very large amount, 350,000l., but the full extent it is as yet impossible to estimate, and which are forgeries. This remark applies, however, to the signature only. The paper on which they are printed and the type used, which are both peculiar in their kind, are the same as those issued by the government. This is a circumstance which may prove fortunate to the holders in fixing a liability upon the treasury; in fact the opinion rapidly gains ground to day, that if resisted, the parties, if shown to be innocent holders, will have their legal remedy against the government.—The greatest activity prevails in the dockyard at Chatham, in preparing the ships for sea which are already in commission, and getting ready others. Nearly all the men are withdrawn from the slips to work in the docks, which contain at present the Thetis, 42 guns; the Cantor, 36; the Wolverine, 18; and the Eagle 50; this last, a very fine ship, is spoken of as the next for commission. The Lyre and the Harlequin are ready for sailing, and only detained by the contrary wind. The Isis frigate is to sail for Liverpool, there to complete her manning: her ultimate destination is said to be China, unless a declaration of war with America should render a naval armament necessary in that quarter.

EGYPT.

Alexandria 18th November, 1841.—H. B. M.'s Steamer the Medea, commanded by Warrin, whose term of station at this port had expired upwards of 3 weeks, started on the 19th Oct., under canvas for Malta. The Gordon Steam Frigate are sent to relieve her several days previous, having touched at Beyrout en route. It is the intention of the Lords of the Admiralty to keep a vessel stationed in this port so long as the French have one; at present there is the Corradine Frigate. The French Government, we understand, will shortly run a French Government steamer twice a month between this and the coast of Syria, where their correspondence increases and appears to be important to the Government. It had been hoped that the P. and O. Company would have ere this placed one of their smaller Steamers on, instead of as at present the sailing Government packet "Eusebe." We doubt not but that Captain Englefield who had made a stay of one month in Egypt will have represented the propriety of the Company's so doing.

The "Nile" Steamer, belonging to H. B. the Pasha of Egypt, sailed on the 20th ult., having performed 5 days quarantine in this harbour previous to her departure. She had on board H. E. Tefric Bey (Envoy of the Sublime Porte and private secretary to the Sultan) H. E. Mustafa Bey, so long a resident here, sent by the Porte to assist Col. E. Napier in the pursuit of his mission respecting the restoration of the Seria Troops in the Pasha's service, was also passenger in this vessel. The Pasha remitted by this opportunity Talari Effective Sp. Dra 250,000—equal in British currency to £50,000, besides the Sp. Dra. 15,000 he made a present for the expenses of his voyage to H. E. Tefric Bey. The crew of this Steamer were equipped Ala Strambolus. The Nile arrived at Constantinople on the 26th ultimo, from whence she has not yet returned. The Russian Consul General, Count Kraemer, started for Cairo, as also did Count Rohan de Chabot, the French Consul General: Count Rohan de Chabot will shortly quit for France, as new Consul General is expected on the 24th of this month.

As an early hour this morning, the 31st, October, the "India mail" per Geopatra reached Alexandria. Along with it came a despatch from Commodore Bremer to the Officer in charge of mails on board the Liverpool to stop the steamer four and twenty hours, while a similar one came post haste to the Hon. E. C.'s Agent. The Commodore however, soon followed, and then came another on the part of Captain C. Elliot from Col. Barnett, our Consul General in Cairo, stating that Captain E. was the bearer of most important despatches for H. B.'s Government. This was a little too much for the passengers with the exception of Col and Mrs. James, were on board—besides the mails had also been upwards of 30 hours in the vessel. The Liverpool not under weigh in time to save her safe exit out of the harbour before sunset. In doing so she was stopped to receive on board the hero of the Bogue and his lady.

Capt. Englefield then resigned the command of this fine vessel to Commander Cowper (formerly a mate in H. M.'s service) receiving eleven guns and three hearty cheers from the men on the rigging. Col. James and lady lost their passage chiefly on their own account and from an neglect of Hill and Co. for this gentleman wished to take it more leisurely. Col. James proceeds home in the Oriental.

The last of the Serian Troops below Cairo and in Cairo, were shipped off to day, the total amount of the number shipped amounts to 8,518. There are more in Egypt, amounting to as many as have already been shipped, but no appearance of the Pasha being willing to give them up. There are also none in the fleet. It is currently believed now that 5 ships of the line will be laid up in ordinary and the crews of these ships be disbanded or sent to the Pasha's villages. Great reductions are taking place in the army; a heavy discount on all arrears due to the Europeans in the service has been made to defray the loss of material in the Syrian campaign. The navy will be the first to adopt the Turkish costume and then the army.

Mr Stoddart, our new Consul here, has been in constant correspondence with H. E. Gough Bey respecting the freedom of trade, while Col. Barnett in Cairo has been equally active in pointing out to the Pasha the necessity of destroying all monopolies—and also that boats constructed by Europeans for the purpose of navigating the river Nile and the Mahmoudie Canal, should bear the respective colors of the Nations to whom they belong—against which the Pasha had issued a prohibitory notice. The Pasha however continues at his old system, and gives no sign of deviation from the "olden time."

The plague made its appearance on the 23d and 24th in this city, and it has shown itself in the village of Rosetta—and in one or two higher up. A large sale of gum took place on the 31st, and the Oriental is chartered to take a part of the purchases to England on account of Mone, Pasteur.

To HENRY WRIGHT, Esq.

Dear Sir,—After a residence in China of upwards of 17 years, you are now on the eve of revisiting your native country, and we should be justly open to the imputation of ingratitude were we to permit you to leave these shores without conveying to you the expressions of the mingled emotions of pleasure and regret with which we contemplate a separation that as regards the great majority of us, may, from the nature of our social and political institutions, contain no remembrance of any renewal of our intercourse. That intercourse, we need hardly say, has, to this painful moment, been one of unalloyed satisfaction to us; and though we cannot but rejoice for your own sake, at the prospect now before you, of a happy reunion with the friends and associates of your earlier years and predilections, we find it impossible to refrain from telling you how sincerely we deplore the loss of one, whose sympathies have been so frequently awakened for our advantage. Your benevolence, in truth, has not been satisfied with merely speculative tendencies, but its characteristics have been invariably substantial and practical. In circumstances of difficulty, you have listened to us with the patience of a tried friend, and you have consoled and assisted us with equal sagacity and liberality, though the presence of superior claims upon your attention and resources might have supplied reasonable grounds for the avoidance of all consideration of the many appeals we have had occasion to address to the clear energies of your mind, or the warm impulses of your heart. It would ill become us, therefore, to allow you to pass from amongst us without declaring the sentiments of attachment with which we are animated towards you; and though these feelings may be concentrated in our hearts by a moral endurance, we desire to perpetuate them in your own remembrance by some testimonial illustrative of the scene and subjects of our philanthropy. With this view, we have concerted arrangements with Messrs. Magnus, Smiths and Co. for presenting a piece of plate to you in our names, on your arrival in England; and we intend your to receive it, and preserve it in your family, as a sincere though inadequate memento of our affectionate esteem, and of our deep appreciation of your numerous good offices to us.

Cordially wishing you a prosperous journey to England, and a joyous meeting with all dear to you, we respectfully bid you farewell, and remain, Gentlemen,—It is with feelings of much pride and satisfaction that I have received your address on the occasion of my leaving this country.

After a residence of many years, it is pleasing to retire with the approbation of my surrounding friends, and particularly to think that I enjoy the friendship and good-will of such a numerous respectable body of Parsee merchants, with whom I have had so long an intercourse.

Permit me to say that much of the merit you attach to my conduct, has been aided by the friendly feeling of those with whom I have had the good fortune of being associated, and who will, I am sure, ever feel the same considerations, so essential to mercantile success.

The token you have given me of your warm regard, has my esteem, and will call to my recollection many events of days gone past, and will cherish the hope, which I shall ever retain, that every prosperity may attend you commercial pursuits, and all happiness accompany you, on your withdrawal from active life, to join the society of your families and friends. I remain,

Gentlemen,
Your most obedient humble servant,
HENRY WRIGHT.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—It is probably scarce worth while to pursue, an investigation and occupy the time of "my pensive public" by further attempts to discover whether the productions of Gauntlet and Perdu, (the latter name being interpreted is supposed to signify "the lost sheep") derive their existence from two unfledged boys or one old woman; but I may be allowed to him, that the ex Cathedra style in which the "lost mutton," a self-constituted lucus a non lucendo representative of the "thinking public," pronounces judgment on my ghostly advice to his supposed twin brother, is, as Sam Weller would say, "rather strong." If, as seems to be asserted, the real Simon Pures are two young gentlemen in frocks and trousers, it is to be hoped their nurses will stop their bread and butter till they learn to behave themselves with more propriety to their elders, not forgetting, in case of need, the wholesome advice of Solomon for the management of precocious but unruly genius.

The object of the "Ghost rising" was principally to assert a fact, which amidst all the mawkish fourth form eloquence of the first writer was likely to be overlooked, viz. that the proceeding of the "belligerents" was simply to keep open a road, "which the Chinese were evidently about to close and to deny the story of their having been afraid to go there afterwards. The real truth is as I before stated; and it is so abundantly notorious, that nothing but folly or knavery could have attempted to construe one or two accidental absences into a general defection.

It is quite competent to the timid young gentlemen, or frightened old ladies, to keep their valuable persons out of the way of mischief by confining their perambulations to the walks recognized in the "autent Régime"; but if, with unhappy perversity, they persist in trying to profit by a proceeding which they so vehemently denounce, and by trespassing on forbidden ground, and thus running their noses into the danger, should get their scowls cracked for their pains, it remains to be hoped that the thinking public will by this means have the comfort of clearing up a point on which their literary productions, and Quixotic defence of those whom they poetically describe, as the "sons of Han" may at present leave some doubt;—to wit—"Whether the honest gentlemen have brains."

The public are probably as tired of the controversy as the writer; and therefore, in the words of the "great master"

THE GHOST—VANISHES.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 5th March 1842.

We have had no arrivals whatever during the week and no singular occurrences of interest in or from any quarter. Nothing has interrupted the quiet at Canton, business continues extremely dull there, and can hardly be said to have yet been resumed since the new year holidays. A disposition among the populace to insult foreigners when walking in the backstreets has been for some time manifested, and the last letters from Canton mention it to have lately increased, so that any single foreigner, whom his occasional may call to those parts, is pretty certain of being insulted.

Our readers will find that an "Idler in Hongkong" has favored us with another communication, and although we wish not to be understood to subscribe to all of his opinions, yet we doubt not that our readers will derive the benefit from his pen of being kept au fait of what is going on at Hongkong, and of becoming better acquainted with men and things there. We have, however, during the week received a communication from a highly respectable source of which the following is an extract:—"No body knows positively here, as far as I am aware, that the project of erecting a fort on Kellett's Island is 'a pet one of Sir Hugh Gough's' and it is therefore unjust as well as improper to style it by so offensive a cognomen as that which the Idler (in his No. 2.) furnishes for the purpose—"Gough's Folly." The fort is to be condemned for certain reasons which I need not take up your time with, but for none which the Idler seems to consider so absurd, and the way in which he handles the subject, altogether will satisfy any military reader that he is quite ignorant of the nature of "forts" and "platforms" and "guns upon carriages," which he so strangely mixes up together."

We have great respect for the professional knowledge of this last correspondent; but in calling the fort in question "Gough's Folly" we really believe the Idler in Hongkong could have meant no disrespect to the gallant Commander-in-Chief, as we certainly at the time of allowing it to appear in our columns were not conscious that the expression was at all reprehensible "In China" where, from the peculiar pronunciation of English words by the natives, it has long been the practice in conversation and even in writing to call every fort "folly"—witness Dutch folly, French folly, Napier's folly, Howqua's folly, &c. &c. We hope therefore that our correspondent will acquit the Idler as well as ourselves of any intention that the objectionable appellation given to the Fort on Kellett's island, should be an "offensive cognomen."

It is with much pleasure, we insert above the address from the Parsee merchants to HENRY WRIGHT, Esq. on the occasion of his returning home, after a residence in China of about 17 years and after having been actively engaged in the China trade during a period of nearly 44 years; Mr. Wright having first arrived in China as purser in the service of the Hon E. I. Company in the year 1804, since which time until his final settlement here, he continued in the same employ. After having been confidential assistant of Messrs Jardine Matheson & Co. several years, he became a partner in their house eight or nine years since. Mr. Wright embarked for London on the 24th of last month in the Earl Grey, Capt. Mollison, and we are confident carries with him the best wishes of all members of the community, whose esteem and respect he has earned by his many amiable qualities and his assiduous and constant attendance to business.

PIRACY.—We have of late several times had occasion to mention the frequent piracies committed in and near the Canton river, and we are sorry to learn from native informants that the Pirates are continually increasing in daring and numbers, and no longer confine their depredations to vessels on the river, but land and attack houses and even villages. About three weeks since the crews from a flotilla consisting of four large boats, landed in the villages of Bongkong and Syheut, about 3 or 4 miles below "hampoa," and there openly attacked the pawnbroker's shops, from which they carried away everything, and obtained booty in money and effects to a very considerable amount. On this occasion the soldiery and police considered the pirates too formidable to attack them, but on reembarcading, two of their party were cut off, and taken prisoners before the mandarins. During two days they steadily refused to answer any questions ending to compromise their companions, but their tortures being increased by degrees, their fortitude at length gave way, and it is said the magistrate is in full possession of all particulars which may probably lead to the apprehension of some of the parties, and possibly to the recovery of the property.

Arrivals from the east coast describe the coast of Canton and Fokien provinces as likewise swarming with pirates. It is impossible to say what disorganization this country may yet be thrown into before the question between its government and that of England is finally settled. There are even rumours now of seditions having broken out at Peking, and conspiracies to change the present dynasty are spoken of—it must however be confessed that as yet these rumours are of the vaguest kind, and probably not deserving much notice.

The attack which after the arrival of reinforcements, by H. M. S. Cornwallis, it was expected would forthwith be made on Hang-chow, is, it is said, for the present deferred by Lieut. General Sir Hugh Gough, owing to strong detachments of Chinese troops having again collected in the neighbourhood of Yuyao, which the commander in chief intends to disperse before making the intended movement on the capital of Chekiang.

We know not what credit is due to the reports which are generally spread, and which have not been traced to any satisfactory source so as to deserve full credit, of the presence at this moment in Canton of a number of Europeans, now said to be Russian officers come from Peking, who are, teaching the Chinese the art of fortification, of military tactics, and instructing them in the use of artillery. We merely give the report as we received it—one of the officers is said to hold the Chinese military rank of Kwang-heep, which is the title of the commandant of the garrison of Canton. Several rumours have of late been spread that the Chinese were again fortifying the Bogue; those that have latest passed through it, observed no indication of this. We believe there is no intention at present of sending the two steamers up the river to reconnoitre, as was stated last week would be done.

THE IDLER IN HONGKONG.

No. 3.

The complimentary but unmerited remarks in respect of my lazy merris, and idle jottings encourage me to send you some more; and if I should fail to amuse your readers, believe me, I fail not to amuse myself which is a grand desideratum with the Idler in Hongkong.

The great event of the week in our microcosm, was a banquet afforded given to our Functionaries on Tuesday last; and I am told the viands and wines, as is uniformly the case, were worthy of the gallant host, and gave unmixed satisfaction to the guests. It would be an outrage on the acknowledged rights of such generous hospitality, to repeat even one of the many good things, which were ushered into the world under such kindly auspices. Suffice it to say, that our officials, (to whom such an event has now become a novelty) discharged their several duties, with a devotedness of purpose, and determination of action, beyond all praise: for let me tell you, if ignorant of Ethics and Aesthetics, they are truly great at Dietetics, and if they should be unlearned in political economy, they are yet very profound in the nobler science of Gastronomy and Manducation. It is needless to say that the guests took their departure well satisfied with themselves, and every body else, and the functionaries were landed at the wharf facing Laptrap's Dram Shop (O profanum Vulgus) misnamed the Victoria Hotel.

I may mention that recently the same salon was the scene of a drunken debauch, stimulated by the presence of beauty both frail and fair; and the rivalry of two embryo heroes for the monopoly of the smiles of a celestial nymph "the cynosure of wandering eyes" led to an affair of honor, as such really despicable rencontres are nicknamed by the worldlings. Two shots were exchanged, but without injury to the perhaps brave, but certainly brainless Quixotes.

I find Mr. Editor you paid us a visit last week, should have been glad to have made your acquaintance, and could have furnished you with some facts vivâ voce, which you could have used à discrétion.

No doubt you were furnished with full particulars of the outbreak we had among the Chinese and the serious conflict that ensued—as an eye witness I may say that the principal positions, like Ligny and Quatre Bras, were contested with the most obstinate severity; taken and retaken several times. "The main columns of the combatants were armed with Swords, Spears, Half Moons, Tridents, and Bambos, flanked by a numerous light artillery of stones and brickbats. I need not add that the Chinese police was driven back, but at the sight of a few soldiery and the English policemen, to adopt the classic language of ran circular in yours of 5th ult., The enemy decamped across the hills. Had they only stood to allow her majesty's forces to close with them, not a man could have escaped; but their local knowledge of the roads, gave them a decided advantage over their pursuers in their flight."

See SUPPLEMENT.

You have perhaps not seen a translation of the very interesting despatch, sent by Mr. Kew Yang the carpenter to his old pal and timehonored, companion in arms, Mr. Clun Leang of Whampoa describing this desperate engagement; I have only room for the last paragraph: "It affords your bellipotentissime extreme gratification to add that not a single casualty occurred during these movements. Mr. Wan Shing of 'Lowpan's' shop was struck on the foot by a spent Brick Bat, but fortunately escaped with a slight contusion."

Some of your critical readers may civil and remark, my version is verbatim et literatim that adopted by a distinguished personage in his ever memorable circular. I reply, like produces like, and philologists say, that many translations to be faithful must be literal, and if so, analogies would some times startle us did we not know our mental idiosyncrasies should be estimated as such, and as such only.

If other evidence were wanted to remove a lingering doubt as to the accuracy of my translation; I would gladly refer the matter to the interpreters of the expedition (whose merits are becoming appreciated in England) and who, seeing said circular is neither correct nor idiomatic English, would I am sure confirm my version and pronounce the verbiage used in the circular to be a literal translation of the Chinese phraseology and circumlocution which has obtained with them from time immemorial—Query—Did they write it? "C'est bien drôle" as the French would say of the Proclamation cited from the Hongkong Gazette in your last number, and unaffectedly speaking it must be held inexpressibly ludicrous by the Chinese, to see it promulgated that their great Emperor "shall" under his imperial sign manual "do so and so"—mark, they are important words uttered by important persons by whose joint obsequious instrumentality they have been given to the world. As a practical politician I ask will such, can such conditions be hereafter enforced and ratified? The presumption is preposterous. How many times in our diplomatic annals have we promised the same and how rarely have we been able to fulfil such stipulations, vide Genoa in 1814, and Naples where Nelson was compelled to forfeit his pledged word and surrender to death the noble Caraccioli, as did the Duke of Wellington Marshal Ney. This is held to be a blot on Nelson's and on Wellington's fame; and the character for national perfidy which the English have unfortunately acquired among foreigners, is mainly referable to having made similar indiscreet promises to those now under my animadversion. The proclamation alluded to, is dated Ningpo the 14th Dec. 1841, and appeared in the Hongkong Gazette of the 26th Feb. I presume it was published in Chinese, or else another blunder is added to the already crowded list concomitant on the China war. If there be a Chinese original and there must be, for the proclamation to be of the slightest value, its issue should not have been so long delayed in Hongkong (some ten weeks since it was published at Ningpo) and it ought to have been placarded and distributed in the Chinese bazaars.

At some pains I explained this valuable document to one of our aborigines, whose grinning exclamation was "Het ya, mak tow so kean," which most of your readers know means—Oh yes, it is a wooden headed affair. Should my native friend in his sentiments, fairly represent the native feeling generally, the philanthro;ist need not shudder at the probable atrocities which might ensue on the restoration of peace to our Chinese auxiliaries, arising from these impracticable and, hence, delusive promises.

Having paid some attention to the science of politics and international law. I would venture respectfully to tell even so old a political as his Excellency that the energetic saxon "Shall" can never be properly used unless backed with coercive powers, if necessary, to make that "Shall" a reality, an entity; all else is bombast and froth unworthy the merest tyro in diplomacy. Were I disposed to force a bad pun, I might say that the predilection H. E. manifests for the potential word is solely because he is the Pleni-Potentiary and moreover assumes in China full power over the Queen's subjects and the Queen's English. As a Briton I fervently pray he may never be reduced to use other than the imperative mood whilst he is in China, although better informed persons than myself confidently say he will soon adopt the subjunctive mood, and seek refuge in the imperfect tense.

Upon complaint on oath, or solemn declaration, made by the master, or other person in charge, of any merchant ship or vessel, in any port or harbour of Chusan or its dependencies, against any seaman or seamen, mariner, or mariners, for insubordination or refusal to work, or inciting, or attempting to incite, any other person or persons on board any ship or vessel as aforesaid to the commission of any such offences, it shall be lawful for the Marine Magistrate of the port of Chusan to summon the party or parties so charged before him; or, should he think it necessary, to have them apprehended and brought before him; and the said Marine Magistrate shall then inquire into the matter of such complaint, and upon full proof thereof, by sufficient evidence, or on the voluntary confession or admission of the party or parties so charged, it shall be lawful for the said Marine Magistrate to commit the offender or offenders, to any jail or prisons in the island of Chusan, for a period not exceeding fourteen days, with or without hard labor, or to fine such offender or offenders (according to the degree of his or their guilt) in any sum not exceeding five pounds sterling (£5), or both, should the gravity of the case call for the punishment.

Dated on board H. M.'s ship Blenheim, in Chusan harbour, this 22d day of January, 1842.

LANCELOT WILKINSON, ESQ.

Hindoo Talent.

"Mr Lancelot Wilkinson, the agent, died here on the 13th of November, and was followed to the tomb by thousands, literally, thousands of lamenting natives, amongst whom were the nabob and minister of Bhopal's.
Agra Ubbhar, Dec. 9.

Upon this notice the Eastern Star observes—
"The above is from Belore, and the testimony it bears to the high respect with which Mr. Wilkinson was regarded by the natives of Bhopal, will, we are sure be read with satisfaction by the friends of that lamented gentleman. Mr. Wilkinson, himself an accomplished scholar, was one of the most zealous as well as most active labourers in the great cause of native education, and it is something to see his exertions appreciated by those who were the object of them."

The Friend of India, of Dec. 9th—also observes, on the death of Mr. Wilkinson—

"He died at Sehoré on the 13th of last month. In him government has lost one of its most eminent servants, the service, one of its brightest ornaments, and India one of its most indefatigable benefactors. He came out to India about seventeen years ago, and could not therefore have been much beyond the age of thirty five at the time of his premature death. After having served in several minor appointments, he was nominated political agent at Sehoré. The talents he there displayed in the management of public business brought him the frequent commendations of government, and led to the offer of a secretary's bureau at Bombay, which he, however, declined, under an apprehension that his health would not stand the confinement of such an office.
There can be little doubt that if his valuable life had been prolonged, he would have attained the highest distinctions which the service can bestow."

Mr. Wilkinson was a civilian on the Bombay establishment; he interested himself greatly in the cause of the marriage of Hindoo widows, and wrote a pamphlet on the subject; and we think it is Duskranath Tagore, who has offered rupees 10,000 to the first couple who shall break through the tyrannical, unnatural, and absurd restraint—imposed by immemorial custom—on the second marriages of Hindoo widows.

In one of his last letters to the editors of the Friend of India, he thus speaks of the wonderful talents of a Hindoo youth,—one of his pupils,—for mathematics.

You have been paying me some ill-merited compliments in some of your late issues. But still the zeal and success of my pupils has been very admirable. I have two or three youths who are extremely anxious to master English. One youth possesses a wonderful talent for mathematics. He is utterly ignorant of English, but he has lately learned our letters and numbers. I lent him a copy of Euler's Algebra, and knowing our numbers and letters, he has been enabled to follow every calculation in the book—many of which are complete puzzles to me. He tells me what the question must be merely from reading the equations—even in the case of the most intricate of problems of the 2d or 3d degrees.
I have taught him his own Astronomical system, in which it is complete. If he was sent to Benares or to Sanseerit college at Calcutta, he would soon isolate some of the most prejudiced of his fellow students, in the mysteries of English science, and have an opportunity of gratifying his own thirst after a knowledge of the English language, but as yet I can hardly afford to lose him. I had picked up a few gems before, and thought them, as they are, unequalled by other Sanscrit scholars elsewhere, but this youth is destined to be the centre jewel of the necklace. My pundits are all now admirers of English science, but they became so after years of discussion. He got all his doubts of the truths of the Ptolemaic system, &c. removed, and in a few months, and is now all anxiety to make himself as ripe and thorough an English as he is a Sanscrit scholar.

He is a bit of a Chemist too; can extract sulphuric and nitric acids, &c. He is also a lithographic printer. Dr.
O'Shaughnessy would make an Hippocrates of him in a short time, if Dr. Duff would teach him English. Three or four lessons or so sufficed to make him an faist in spherical trigonometry; and to crown all, the modest boy has never got or demanded more than 30 rupees from me.—(an too much noted as a friend of the vernacular, and daily deemed, though no great Sanscrit scholar, a blind admirer of that language, to have now the dispensation of all the patronage in the educational departments. If you have any interest with any of them and there are vacancies in the Sanscrit and vernacular departments at Benares or Calcutta, you could not exercise it in behalf of a more worthy or able man. Mr. Maseni, who saw him lately, was enraptured by witnessing his varied attainments, high talent and zeal. His acquirements since Mr. Maseni saw him, have been almost doubled. I was through him that the Marathi essay on second marriages evolved me, and I find him as keen to discern the defects of their moral and religious codes as of their scientific systems. Even Dr. Duff himself might exclaim that he and one or two others here angelt forest angelt forest. He is now preparing a work on Algebra in Marathi; in this he gives all Bhascara Acharya's rules as given in his Breja Ganita, and he also generally quotes the Sanscrit text to ensure the acceptance of his work by the learned, and then he adds all that Bland, Bridge and Euler have since made plain to us in Europe.
He writes too with so much judgment that I cannot find a word even that I can displace to put in a letter. I dared he is more fit to be my gourou (teacher) than my shishya (scholar) in all mathematical questions.—Friend of India, December 9.

The monument to the memory of the late gallant and lamented Sir Humphrey le Fleming Senhouse, R. N. C. B. and R. N. C. B., has been erected in the English Protestant burying ground, under the superintendence Peter Young, Esq.

The tomb is a square erection of about three feet each way, on a raised platform of two steps, surmounted by an obelisk about six feet high. On the east face of the tomb is the following inscription:—

injay as in the arms, with a helmet in its beak, inscribed—

In recording the foregoing we must again express the great public sorrow which was occasioned by the death of this distinguished officer, who died at a fatal hour for his country and at a time when his services were most peculiarly wanted and which would most surely have elevated him to still greater distinction.

Ningpo City, January 31st, 1842.

My dear major Ellis,—I cannot allow you to leave the expedition without some assurance on my part, of my regret at losing you, and of my best wishes for your welfare.

As you have been repeatedly placed, by the naval commander in chief, at my disposal for active operations in the field, I have had occasion to notice the gallantry and steadiness of your little battalion, as well as the zeal, spirit, and judgment, with which you exercised the command. The subsequent period of your service in the garrisons of Ningpo and Tinghai, has only tended to increase the satisfaction I shall always feel at having had you, and a portion of the royal marines, under my orders, and I will, beg you to convey this expression of my sentiments, to the officers, non commissioned officers, and men under your command.

Believe me very faithfully yours,
H. GOUGH, Lieut. General.

Major S. B. Ellis, Royal Marines.

The shipping report of yesterday announced the arrival of the Brig Anagmas, from Bombay the 6th ult., touching at Point de Galle, which she left at daylight on the 23d ultimo. On arriving at that port she found the Swarth Steamer had brought on the December Overland Mail from Bombay, and Captain Vaux having been kind enough to hand us a Ceylon Extra containing some scraps of intelligence, we proceed to lay the same before our readers—the most interesting item being the birth of a Prince on the 9th November.

ROYAL ACCOUCHEMENT.

BIRTH OF A PRINCE.—On the morning of the 9th November, at twelve minutes before eleven o'clock, the Queen was happily delivered of a Prince; Prince Albert, the Duchess of Kent, several Lords of the Privy Council, and the Ladies of Her Majesty's Bedchamber, being present. As soon as the event became known, the Tower guns thundered forth the proclamation of the royal Birth, with a hundred guns. Orders were in the first instance given that the guns in the Parks should not be fired, but they were subsequently countermanded at the desire of the Queen. Her Majesty having remarked that she had not heard the guns in honour of the birth of an heir to the throne of England, was immediately informed of the orders having been issued, whereupon the Queen remarked that the guns would not disturb her, and that it was desirable the people should not be led to think, by the observation of unnecessary silence occasioning the breach of a recognised custom, that she was in any state of danger. Her Majesty expressing a wish that the usual salute should be fired, an intimation was dispatched to the Horse Guards, and the Park guns were fired accordingly.

Shortly before one o'clock the following official bulletin was published:—"The Queen was safely delivered of a Prince this morning at forty eight minutes past ten o'clock. Her Majesty and the Infant Prince are going on well." In the country every where the deepest delight was manifested at the news. The safety of the Queen was matter of warm congratulation and thankfulness, and the birth of a Prince opened a long vista of hope, which was regarded with gratitude and joy. The Infant Prince, as eldest son of the Monarch, inherits the title of Duke of Cornwall, and at once enters upon the enjoyments of the ducal revenue for his sole use. In a few days he will be created Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester; George the Fourth was so created when he was seven days old, the other titles usually attributed are, Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, and Lord of the Isles, because they were formerly borne by the eldest son of the Kings of Scotland. The Prince of Wales is a constituent part of the order of the Garter; hence he becomes a Knight of the Garter as soon as he is created Prince of Wales. None of the Prince's privileges, for obvious reasons are the same as those of the King; to compass his death, or to assail the chastity of his consort is equally high treason.

Immediately on the birth of a Prince becoming known, the event was celebrated on the instant with such impromptu modes of rejoicing as were accessible. The bells of the Metropolitan churches were set ringing, and the steeples were adorned with the Union Jacks. As the news spread abroad through the country the same demonstrations of joy were manifested. In the evening, according to ancient custom, both regal and bacchanal, on the birth of the heir apparent, the household of Her Majesty were plentifully regaled with "Royal Punch," of which many a bumper was quaffed to the Prince's health and long life. There were illuminations, brilliant though few, amongst the most conspicuous of which were the Reform Club, with the brilliant pyramidal lights; the Carlton, with a stair and the letters "P. W." and the Adelaide gallery from its roof "Drummond's Light."

Lieutenant Colonel George Macdonald, half pay 16th Regiment, a veteran officer of 34 years full pay service has accepted the appointment of Governor of Sierra Leone.

Nov. 24.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint His Royal Highness Prince Albert K. G. The Right Hon Lord Lyndhurst; the Duke of Sutherland K. G.; the Marquis of Lansdowne, K. G.; the Earl of Lincoln; the Earl of Shrewsbury; the Earl of Aberdeen, K. T.; Lord John Russell; Lord Francis Egerton; Viscount Palmerston, G. C. H.; Viscount Melbourne; Charles Shaw Lefevre; Sir Robert Peel, Bart.; Sir James Robert George Graham, Bart.; Sir Robert Harry Inglis, Bart.; Henry Gally Knight, Esq.; Benjamin Hawes, Junr., Esq.; Henry Hallam, Esq.; Samuel Rogers, Esq.; George Vivian, Esq.; and Thomas Wyne, Esq.; Her Majesty's Commissioners for inquiring into the best mode of promoting the Fine Arts in the United Kingdom.

Nov. 27.—The Earl of Harewood died suddenly near Bramham on the 25th while on his way home from hunting. His Lordship was in his 74th year, having been born in December 1767.

Sir Francis Chantrey the celebrated sculptor, died on the night of the 26th at his residence in Eaton Square. Sir Francis who had for many years suffered from a disease of the heart, was seized with an oppression on the chest in the early part of the evening.

Dec. 3rd.—The gradual course of the Queen Dowager's improvement has not it seems, been impeded; and the daily progress made by her Majesty in convalescence gives rise to well founded hopes, that, by the blessing of Divine Providence, her Majesty will gradually recover. The following bulletin is most satisfactory, for the gratifying information it conveys, that in consequence of the improvement which has taken place in the Queen Dowager's health, it is not deemed necessary to issue another bulletin "under the continuance of the present favourable symptoms."—"The improvement of the Queen Dowager's health, as announced in the last bulletin, has continued up to the present time, and there is every reasonable prospect of her Majesty's gradual recovery. Davies, M. D."

SCOTLAND.

The Right Hon'ble Thomas Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, died at Paris, where his Lordship had of late years resided on account of his health, on November the 14.

Died at Tulloch Farm, five miles west of Inverary, Duncan Munro, in the 108th years of his age, the eldest tenant upon the Argyll estate, he and his forefathers have possessed the same farm above three hundred years. The number of persons depending on public charity for existence in the town of Paisley, and other places in the Upper Ward of Renfrewshire, amounts to 10,870.

IRELAND.

The Solicitor-General, Mr. Edward Pennefather, has been appointed Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, and is succeeded by Mr. J. D. Jackson, the tenancy vacant by the promotion of Mr. Jackson, which it was thought would be given to Mr. West; has been conferred on Mr. Warren Q. C. Dr. Lefroy is a baron of the Exchequer, in the room of Baron Foster, who takes his seat in the Common Pleas.

The Right Hon Daniel O'Connell Lord Mayor of Dublin, has been appointed by the Master of the Rolls, sequestrator of the property and effects in dispute between the old and new Corporation.

On the Sunday after his election, Lord Mayor O'Connell went to mass, in procession. The streets were crowded with spectators. Arrived at the porch of the church, in compliance with a Law which forbids the Lord Mayor to "recort" to the mass in official costume, Mr. O'Connell doffed his robes, resuming them again when going out.

Mrs Fitzsimon, daughter to the Mayor of Dublin, will discharge the duties of Lady Mayoress, in the Mansion House, during the Majority of her illustrious father.

EAST INDIA INTELLIGENCE.

Lord Ellenborough embarked at Plymouth on the 2th of November, on board the Cambrian, 26 Capt. A. D. Chade, and sailed immediately for India.

The belief now seems to be, that Sir R. Jenkins will be the new Governor of Madras.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

Dec 4. The Queen is sufficiently recovered to resume her daily drives in the Park. The Infant Prince is quite well. In the state of her Majesty the Queen Dowager, there is a slow but uninterrupted progress towards improvement.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Most Noble Walter Francis, Duke of Buccleuch and Queensbury, K. G. to be Lieutenant and Sheriff Principal of the shire of Roxburgh, in the room of the Marquis of Lothian deceased.

LONDON MARKET.
From the London Mail 4th December.

TEA. The prices at present ruling in the market exhibit a decline of 3d. to 1d. on common and 1d. to 1 1/2d. on the blackish leaf of Congou; and 1d. to 2d. on the low qualities of Green Tea. The last accounts from India, though producing little effect on a public sale of about 3000 packages then proceeding, which went off with spirit at full rates, caused a decline of 3d. in Company's Congou, which was confirmed by the simultaneous announcement of a considerable public sale for the 19th and 23d ult.—these, as well as the other sales went of as follows:—On 15th November of 2,000 offered, 1,700 sold with much spirit, at the fullest rates previously current. On 19th and 23d of 33,600 offered, 18,600 sold heavily. Congou at a decline of 3d. to 1 1/2d. Twankay of 3d. to 1d. low Hysons and Gunpowders of 2d. to 3d. on the sales of 1st and 3th November. On 30th 4,700 offered, 2,600 sold heavily. Twankays of 3d. to 1d. lower than at the sales on the 19th and 23d, Congous without alteration. Though these sales passed off heavily, with a disinclination on the part of the Trade to purchase largely, prices were well supported by the merchants, and a fair proportion was sold at a less reduction than had been generally looked for before the sales commenced. The present prices are:—Bohea 1s 6d, Congou, mid. leaf kd., 1. 0 1/2 a 1. 1 1/2; blackish leaf, 1. 1 1/2 a 2. 0 1/2; do. strong Pekoe flavored 2. 1 a 2 1/2 10d; Souchoong common, 1. 8 a 1 9d; good to fine 3. 7 a 3. 4d; Pouchong, 1. 1 1/2 to 1. 1 1/4; Caper, 1. 1 1/2 a 2. 1d; Orange Pekoe 2. 2 a 3. 2 1/2; Bick. If Pekoe none; Flowery Pekoe, 3 7 1/2 to 4s; Twankay, 1. 8 1/2 a 2s; Hyson skin 1. 6 a 2. 1d; Hyson 2 a 3s; Young Hyson 1. 7 a 4. 6s; Imperial 2. 1 a 2. 3d; Gunpowder 2. 0 1/2 a 4. 1d.

CASIA LIGNEA.—The eagerness of importers to realise has caused a further decline in prices of 3s per cwt; still, a good demand has prevailed, and the whole of 1200 chests at public sale found purchasers, fine thin quill at 98s, good 95s to 96s, middling 88 a 90s 4d, low middling 86 a 88s, good ordinary 82s 6d to 84s 6d, mouldy and broken ends 81 a 84s, loose and broken 74 a 82s 6d, and mouldy 81s 6d a 83s per cwt; notwithstanding the late arrivals, the stock is small, and a reaction in prices is expected to take place shortly.

RAW SILK.—The demand during the past month has been free. In Bengal a fair business has been done at a trifling advance upon public sale prices. Brussa Silk, especially for lower qualities or short reeled, may be quoted a trifle higher. In Persia Silk but little business has been done. The arrivals during the past month are considered rather light, China 178, Bengal, 511.

NATIVE STATES.
CANDAHAR.—Intelligence from Candahar has been received to the 10th December: so far as the state of our troops in this quarter is concerned, it is highly satisfactory. A force of ten thousand men well provisioned, nearly equal to that with which Lord Keane approached it at first—which according to the official returns, amounted in June 1839 to 10,400—is, it seems, concentrated on the capital. We give an extract of a letter of the date just named, from a writer whose views are deserving of the utmost consideration:—

"In this neighbourhood all continues quiet, but Atta Mahomed, the chief of the Dooranees, is in the district endeavouring to incite the adjoining tribes to rebellion.

A proclamation bearing the joint seal and signature of Gooroo (the principle Ghiznie leader) and Jubber Khan (Dost Mahomed's elder brother) has just been seized, calling upon all true Mussulmans to unite, and exterminate the hated Feringees, and representing our present position as most favourable for the execution of their project; in fact they assert that both Cabool and Ghiznie are already in their hands, and that an ejection from Candahar only remains to be effected to give the death blow to our power to the west of the Indus. This of course is the usual exaggerated tone of such effusions, but it seems to shew the universal feeling of enmity to us and our king, and ought to open the eyes of the authorities to the utter hopelessness of holding a position in Afghanistan.

This garrison is well prepared to repel attack, having already 10,000 troops of all arms, in and around the city, with ample provisions for their support, and I fully expect ere long to hear of the march of an overwhelming force both from Bengal and Bombay; but although it is of vital importance to crush the present rebellion, I question the policy of remaining here when that object is accomplished, as the same force will have to be enacted yearly, draining our Indian resources, and expending our Eastern possessions to maintain a fatally foolish struggle.—Bombay Times, Jan'y. 1.

We have just been favoured with the following communication—from a well informed Agra correspondent, to whom we beg to acknowledge our especial obligations. He gives no dates, but we are afraid his communication is too correct:—

Agra, Dec. 21st 1841.
There had been a fierce engagement at Cabool. The enemy led on by Ukhhar Khan, a son of Dost Mahomed. They took a gun, which some say was recaptured, but all agree that by some accident it had been previously rendered unserviceable. We had killed Colonel Oliver and Captain Macintosh of the 5th Bengal N. I., Walker of the 4th Irregular Company and Lieutenant Laing, 27th N. I., and some add Lieut. Buckenyoung of the 5th. The enemy were of course repulsed, but feebly. They had attempted to flood the entrenched camp, but succeeded to the extent of one foot only, beyond which it is impossible to inundate it. But what a state of things for our native troops? Maclaren's Division from Candahar had reached Guznee, or near it. Their camp followers deserted, carrying off what they could. The road to Cabool became bad, difficult, and impracticable. Maclaren is now retracing his steps to Candahar. The Affghans have offered Rs. 50,000 to the Khyburees to stop our Brigade now advancing, but we have sent large sums to open the way. The word for "money" in the Punic must have been mistranslated for vinegar when they talked of Hannibal crossing the Alps. Our Brigadier M. General Pollock has ordered back to Perozepoor, and thence to Peshawar to take command of the Brigade. He is an amiable high spirited gentlemanly and kind Officer, but it is hard with us when he is the only one they can pitch upon to retrieve affairs. On dit—Col. Sutherland Aymere Pol. Agent succeeds McNaughten. He is not the man for such work. He will now even prefer the sword to conclusion, when the latter is not plain and easy.

AFGHANISTAN.
(From the India Gazette, 14th Jan'y.)

We have as yet no authentic intelligence from Cabool of a later date than the 9th ultimo. On that day, Mahomed Ukhhar Khan was in treaty with us; but, the Native reports of the subsequent engagement, and the occupation by our troops, of the Balla Hissar, have any foundation in truth, the terms proposed by him were no less unreasonable than those proposed before, and it was required, therefore, to make a desperate effort to make good, at any risk, our way to the citadel. It appears that, in the earlier stages of the insurrection, Zemana Shah, or his son, was proclaimed King—and Jubber Khan (the Dost's brother) Wazir; but that on the arrival of Mahomed Ukhhar Khan, he was exalted to the chief honor, and Zemana Shah appointed Wazir. The latter, early in the month, seems to have had a regular army in his pay; and it is stated, that on the 12th of November, he paid his troops, three lakhs of rupees, at the rate of ten to each soldier, and seven to each footman. The cavalry are described as being well mounted and well armed; and not less than 2,000 in the field; but the infantry were mostly their interiors, and little to be dreaded in war. They had sent the Shah's elephants into the Kohistan for the guns left there: these had been spiked, and their carriages destroyed, but the enemy expected to do great things with them. They had got some guns, as we have before stated, on commanding ground; and have been firing into our camp, using our 9th shot, which they work into egg-shaped balls, to send back to us. The insurgents had been suffering much from want of fuel, and our troops too had been sadly pinched with cold, as well as with hunger. The sick, however, were doing well. There had been several heavy falls of snow during the month.

In the cantonment provisions had been scarce—but ammunition plentiful. In the Balla Hissar ammunition was scarce. On the 19th of November, a supply had been safely conveyed thither; but an unsuccessful attempt was made on the 8th of December, to throw further supplies of ammunition into the citadel, and a large quantity fell into the hands of the enemy. It appears that the cantonment party had drawn their provisions from a small village, in the neighbourhood, called Dehvern—the only place from which grain was procurable, after our commissariat godowns had fallen into the hands of the enemy; but, a strong guard not having been sent there for its protection, Meer Musjedee, one of the rebel chiefs, with a thousand followers, succeeded in capturing the village, and 300 mounds of grain fell into their hands. Subsequently a party, under Major Swayne, of the 5th N. I., were sent to recapture the village; the enemy evacuated it, but it seems that our party, for some unaccountable reason, did not occupy the position; and it was found necessary to send out a still stronger party, consisting of eighteen companies of infantry, a large body of cavalry, and a six pounder gun, under Brigadier Shelton. The enemy mustered in great force, on the hill, charged our troops vigorously, and captured our gun. The gun was retaken and the enemy dispersed; presently they reformed, and drove our troops from the high ground; but a fresh troop of the 5th cavalry charged the Affghan horse, in noble style, drove them back, and our troops retired in order. The 44th lost 19 men killed, and 40 wounded—the 37th about 40, in all—and the 5th not more than 5 or 6. This was the affair of the 23rd November, which has already been often alluded to. It seems that it was a badly managed business, and that advantages were given to the enemy, of which they made but too good use. On the 28th it escape that they shelled Dehmera from the cantonments, and that the enemy evacuated it; but it again fell into the hands of the insurgents. Ever since we first lost it, provisions had been growing scarce in camp; and though the grain had been served out with a most niggardly hand—some days none having been given even to the natives—on the 5th ultimo, the date of the last authentic intelligence, there were only three days provisions in store. Up to that period, twenty-three officers (including those with Sale) had fallen, and above thirty had been wounded. Among the latter, whose names have not been mentioned, are Capt. Best, 4th Cavalry—Lieutenant Eyre, Artillery, Lieut. Evans, H. M. 44th and Capt. Macbride, of the Pay department. Colonel Murrell and Capt. Westmacott, were cut to pieces by a charge of cavalry. Capt. Drummond is said to be under the protection of Shah Zemaun, and Esquire Rose (before said to have been killed) a prisoner in the town. Captain Bygrave, whose death has been reported, was alive, and doing good service; and Lieut. Sturt of the Engineers had, on several occasions, exhibited the most conspicuous gallantry. Such are the principal items of intelligence, derived from an authentic source, which we have been able to glean since our last. We have some further anecdotal details, which we shall give in our next—in the present state of affairs there is an interest attached to the smallest scrap of information.

AFGHANISTAN.

From the Eastern Star, Jan'y 23d.

AFGHANISTAN—DEATH OF SIR Wm. MACNAGHTEN—Many of our readers will already have learnt the disastrous occurrence of Sir Wm. MacNaghten's death at the hand of Mahomed Ukhbar Khan. As however some of them may not have met with such details as are possessed and as our Moslem friends will look for their usual modicum of information, we shall briefly recapitulate as much as has been published, of the various accounts that at each themselves to the, but too well authenticated, statement of the calamity. Negotiations having been set on foot between the confederates and our ministers, auspicious arose that Mahomed Ukhbar Khan was more intent upon making terms in his own especial favor, than comported with the general desire of the insurgent Chieftains. To correct such an impression Ukhbar Khan, it is said, determined on the murder of Sir William, and was able to put his nefarious project into execution by treacherously inviting his victim to a conference without the camp, at a spot indicated, and where both parties repaired. Sir William was shot dead with a pistol suddenly fired at him by Ukhbar Khan, Captain Trevor was cut down by the Afghans, and Captains Lawrence and Conolly wounded and taken prisoners. On the death of Sir William the charge of the diplomacy devolved on Major Eldred Pottinger, who, in a letter dated the 25th December, writes that he is in treaty for the evacuation of Cabul. Thus much is considered authentic; but with it goes a great deal of rumour, of which the whole is unfavorable, and a portion dishonorable to us, if true. It is declared that our Corps are in quite their present position and fall back on Jullahabad—but that they will be attacked on the road, and in all probability annihilated before they can succour it; this, we fear, must be looked for—the time and the circumstances reducing the retiring body to every conceivable disadvantage, while in a proportionate degree they will stimulate an enemy who is glibly withheld by any honorable considerations from perpetrating the most infernal acts of treachery. Additional to this is the report that the gates of the Bala Hissar were thrown open by some disaffected companies of H. M. 44th Foot, and that the King was cognizant of the whole affair from the commencement to the fatal catastrophe we have just related. Placed as we are, we can neither receive the intelligence with confidence nor utterly reject so much of it as appertains to the King, of whom not a syllable is uttered in any account of which we have heard. There can be but one possible means of his personal safety, if he too is in the hands of the rebels in consequence of their occupying the Bala Hissar—namely, his thorough knowledge of what was transacting, and a collusion between himself and confederated chieftains. Nor is the measure of safety yet complete. No less than six and thirty ladies are affirmed to be present with the corps under General Elphinstone; and if the march to Jullahabad at this inclement period is insisted on and attempted, it is harrowing to reflect on the privations, the hardships, sufferings and horrors they must undergo. To be mere spectators of what will ensue would be more than trial enough for their fortitude; but we shrink aghast from contemplating that they will, in all probability, be participants in every subsequent misfortune; and with our little faith in the force of any treaty now to be made, in our conviction of the ruthless character of the Afghans, we anticipate nothing but the most deadly and revolting misfortune from an endeavour to retreat upon Sir Robert Sale's position. What is it likely the negotiation will produce? Say that arms are retained, will this include artillery and ammunition sufficient to work through a succession of contests? for it may be depended on that if one single assault is made, the division will be harassed at every step along the whole line of march. Already dispirited by the course which events have taken, the men will be unavoidably affected by the loss of that supremacy which has hitherto been conceded to them, but which they necessarily relinquish by the very circumstances of retirement—under a necessity, if not total disclosure of all our plans. It is difficult to say from any thing we know, what weight would be given to the wishes of our party at any conference, or in any communications for a definitive treaty. If however it is still believed that we are to be drenched in open attack, it is just possible that the enemy may seek to avoid pushing us to extremity, and under such a view consent to our retiring upon Ghuzni—at least we are of opinion it would be the more military resolve to move in that direction than upon Jullahabad—for the distance is shorter, the country more fertile, and the local difficulties infinitely less. No doubt the object of the insurgents will be to push us back upon the frontier as soon as they can, and the bearing of the treaty will also be an entire evacuation of the territory. Hence it is not probable that the southward march will be assented to, and that the attempt will depend solely on the resolution of the Commander. It is natural to suppose that the Chiefs will endeavour to include all our troops in the terms to be granted to those at the capital. How far will this be considered binding? The safety of a portion of them may be guaranteed only by a pledge on the part of the diplomatic agent that the entire country shall be abandoned;—will honor in such case, demand the fulfilment, or will the Generals in the East and South (Sale and Nott) take on themselves the responsibility of resisting its obligations? The solution of this question is a matter of extreme difficulty. Loss of honor will be charged upon us either way—fulfilment of a pledge in the one case and abandonment of a proud and hitherto constantly preserved superiority on the other. For ourselves we are of opinion that the Jullahabad and Candahar divisions ought not be affected by the provisions of any treaty made under the peculiar situation of the troops at Cabul. They are so placed that no effort of arms is likely to shake them, and that of itself forms a right to have a voice in the result of operations with which they are so intimately connected. Being masters of their own movements, we conceive they have a fair title to consent or reject as may seem best to their judgment, with reference, as much, to the interests of the state they serve, as to those of the party jeopardized. The total abandonment would be so broad an acknowledgment of an inferiority which does not exist, even as affairs stand, (since Jullahabad and Candahar are both well defended) that we cannot admit of any expediency which should countenance the measure, nor counterbalanced by expediency in resisting it. The Officers in command at the above-named places are fully aware that, with the return of the good season reinforcements must pour in; already, we trust, they have been received by one of them, and the other is strong enough for the occasion, if his supply bears any proportion to the number of his soldiery. Besides, the insurrection is, in itself, opposition to an authority the Chiefs had pledged themselves to obey; the first breach therefore was on their side, and it may be brought forward to excuse the opposition upon ours. Pushed to the last point the agent at Cabul may stipulate for any terms that give protection to life; but it does not follow that they are binding on forces removed from his danger and acting as far independently of him, that they are what, at this moment he cannot be deemed, free agents, powerful in their means, compact in body, confident, and prepared for immediate action. Again, by the destruction of Sir Wm. MacNaghten, who as accredited Envoy of the British government made it responsible for his acts, there is an end to all faith—for the act was one of treachery, and with his death the powers of the Envoy ceased. Major Pottinger, as the senior diplomatist present, could carry on any negotiation for the evacuation of the city, and so far as that isolated event is concerned, it would be legitimate; but we not only doubt his power to include other divisions in the terms, but are further of opinion that by their treasonable condnet throughout, and particularly in the last instance, (for we have no doubt the thing was planned before hand) the chiefs have placed themselves beyond the pale of international relations, and are liable to the heaviest penalty we can, hereafter, inflict, and which we hope to see yet inflicted by the pouring in of such an army as shall render all defence fruitless. There should be no wavering; the die is cast; and henceforth we stand or fall on the ground of our ability to restrain that of which a too great confidence on the one hand, and the most infamous treachery on the other, have deprived us. It is no longer a question of simple political interest; our vitality hangs upon it, and corps after corps must be dispatched and kept, till the Afghans are taught the lesson of experience by examples as clearly bought as those by which, through their agency, we have been made to suffer.

Touching the report of the 64th we can only say we do not believe one word of it. Major Pottinger writes on the 23rd December, to intimate his having taken charge of the diplomatic office. Yet he does not even allude to the loss of the Bala Hissar at all—and this we think is quite conclusive as to the falsity of the thing. The act would have been too glaring, if real, for attempted concealment respecting it.

The following is the account of Sir William Macnaghten's death which reached us on Friday:—Very distressing intelligence has been received in letters from Jellalabad to the 3d instant.

It appears that conference, with a view to a withdrawal of our troops from Cabul had been opened between Sir William Macnaghten and the Afghan Chiefs. In the course of three, discussion arose between Mahomed Akbar Khan, and the remaining Chiefs, who suspected Mahomed Akbar of intending to form some separate arrangement for himself. To clear himself, so far as appears from Native accounts received of the transaction, of this suspicion, Mahomed Akbar determined to murder Sir William Macnaghten, and he executed the bloody intention with his own hand, shooting Sir William with a pistol at a private interview which had been settled between them.

Captain Trevor, of the 3d Cavalry, attached to the Shah's service, was also killed on the same occasion by Mahomed Akbar Khan's Sowars.

Major Pottinger assumed charge of the Mission, on Sir William Macnaghten's death, and writes on the 25th December, that negotiations with a view to a withdrawal were in progress.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao 12th March 1842.

By the arrival of the Anonyme from Bombay, Point de Galle, and Singapore, accounts of the arrival of the December mail at Bombay on the 16th January have been received, but the Anonyme having left Bombay on the 6th close net, of course, bring the China portion of it. This vessel, waiting at Point de Galle to the 23rd January, the steamer Sanforth arrived there from Bombay with the mail, and as far as we are aware only one single London Mail of 4th December has been sent on by her. This has been kindly lent us and we have extracted from it chiefly what we find regarding military and naval movements and promotions, and a report on the market. We had no time for more. We besides recopy from the Singapore Free Press Extra of 14th January, come to hand by this opportunity, several other items of the overland news, the most important and gratifying of which is that the Queen had given birth on the 9th November, to a Prince, on which happy occasion great rejoicings took place among H. M. loyal subjects in all parts of the country. There are not many other items of much interest. In Spain, the insurrection of Genl. O'Donnell in favor of Queen Christina had been suppressed, and many of its ringleaders executed. The pension of 750,000 francs likewise allowed the ex-Régent had been withdrawn.

By the Anonyme a very few papers from Calcutta to the 23d January, brought to Singapore by the Ceresius Faculty (not yet arrived here) have been received, and from the Eastern Star of that date kindly lent us, we copy the very important intelligence from Cabul, of which however the only quite certain portion seems to be the treacherous murder of the Envoy Sir W. Macnaghten, although there cannot be a doubt that the garrison of Cabul, even if they have not laid down their arms, must be in a very dangerous condition. We forbear, however, any further comment, referring our readers to the forementioned extract from the Ser which seems to contain all full particulars as were obtainable at that time in Calcutta.

By the Marion transport, arrived during the week from Chusan, with, it is said, a large portion of the cash (Chinese currency) taken at Ningpo, accounts from Ningpo to the middle of last month have been received, and according to them the Chinese near Ningpo were committing acts of hostility, whenever the carelessness of the English enabled them to possess themselves of their persons without immediate danger, and of wreaking their vengeance on their unfortunate prisoners by inflicting the most atrocious cruelties. We are sorry to learn that the second mate of the transport Ernaad who went to a village near Ningpo for water with a boat, which he incautiously left, accompanied by two lascars, was seized by the Chinese who mutilated him in the most dreadful manner, chopping off his hands, cutting open the muscles of his thighs and legs, and at last ended his misery by cutting off his head. No punishment whatever has by Sir Hugh Gough yet been inflicted on the guilty village for these enormities. Several lascars have also lately been seized, and probably shared the same fate, and a party of officers were lately taking a walk on shore, were in great danger of being surrounded and taken, had not fortunately the movements of the Chinese been observed on board H. M. ships, from which boats were promptly sent, and seamen landed, who coming unawares upon the Chinese, dispersed them, and thus extricated their countrymen from their dangerous position. We hear of no movements of the troops upon either Yunnan or Hangchow, and hostilities seem to be confined to the petty aggressions of the Chinese, above mentioned.

We have just been kindly favored with the following, from which it will be seen that some steps were taken to bring the guilty to punishment, but we believe, without success.

"Extract of a letter from Capt. Thomas Hill of the Ernaad addressed to Messrs D. & M. Rustonjee & Co.

"Feb. 19th.—My second mate Mr. T. R. Whitaker was decoyed away last night about 11 p. m. with two lascars from the longboat aground at the watering place, and ruthlessly murdered, the alarm was given by one of the two lascars escaping, although desperately wounded. Armed parties from H. M. Ships were immediately sent off, we found the headless body of the poor lad in a canal, and traces of the other Lascar having been dragged away wounded, but alive and struggling several miles; the villages had been surrounded by our force and all the principal inhabitants are prisoners, the greatest interest and excitement prevailed amongst our people who were with difficulty restrained from burning down the houses and exterminating the people. The poor lad's body was covered with wounds so that he must have struggled desperately. His death is universally regretted and his funeral was attended by all ranks of the service and expedition, for he was a general favorite."

By the Tartar, JAMES MATHESON Esq. of the firm of Messrs Jardine Matheson & Co. left this country, on Thursday last, after a residence of many years, during which he conducted the extensive business of his firm. We regret to learn that the unsatisfactory state of Mr. Matheson's health hastened the time of his departure. His absence will be regretted by many who found in him a ready and competent adviser, and by others for his well known liberality. A number of his friends saw Mr. Matheson to the boat, which took him to the Steamer Arcturion, and in her he proceeded to the Tartar, after which the steamer continued her way to Hongkong.

Mr Henry Pottinger returned to Macao from Hongkong on Tuesday last, and intends leaving again for Hongkong in a few days.

The subscriptions collected by the Revd. Theodore Joset, among the British and foreign community for the building of a Roman Catholic Chapel, intended chiefly for the use of soldiers and sailors of that persuasion, and for the teaching of Chinese, have, we believe, been liberally filled up; the collection made by the Revd. J. L. Shuck, of the Baptist Missionary Society, for the building of school-rooms at Hongkong for the instruction of Chinese youths, have likewise been very successful, and these gentlemen are we believe already engaged in raising the necessary buildings. No decided steps have however, as yet, we think, been taken, for the erection of an English Church, of which, ever since the departure of the Revd. Mr. Vachell, three years since, there has not been a clergyman resident in China. We understand however that the authorities at Hongkong are by no means insensible of this want, and we doubt not that as soon as the sanction of H. M. government of the permanent settlement of Hongkong shall have been received, measures for a Church establishment will likewise be taken, and we trust the new inhabitants will then also liberally come forward to support it. Some plans for the attaining of this object are, we have heard, now in agitation, although they can hardly be matured before the fate of Hongkong is finally determined on. We suppose Hongkong will form part of the diocese of New South Wales.

PERSIA.

COMMERCIAL TREATY.—The Shah of Persia having conceded to all the demands made by Sir J. McNeil, to the restoration of friendly relations between Persia and Great Britain, it has been resolved immediately to evacuate the island of Karrack. We believe that the steam frigate Auckland and other vessels are immediately to proceed to the Persian Gulf, to convey the troops to Bombay.—Bombay Times, Dec. 29.

PERSIAN GULF.—By the Cook which came into harbour on Saturday afternoon, we have received the following very important intelligence for that quarter:—"First then as to Persia; Sir J. McNeil made his public entry into Teheran on the 8th October, his entry and reception was of the most splendid description, and seems to have put him into as good a humor with the Persians as he left displeased; indeed, the King and the old villain Hadeke Agasssee are open, free, and all that is noble, so reports say, you will have heard by the Hugh Lindsay that all was right, and this island to be forthwith given up. Now, I am not much of a politician; still I could not help asking for what purpose it was we ever took possession of the island; from all who could give me information on the subject, as well as from Parliamentary papers, to my surprise I found it was taken possession of in consequence of the King of Persia having attacked Herat and refused to withdraw when our government remonstrated, and further I was informed, the name Sir John MacNeil had informed the King of Persia of this, and also that we should keep it until all our differences with Persia were settled; the first and principal of which was the giving up Gorian to Shah Kamran, and giving up all pretensions to, or interference with, Herat. Hearing this, I of course asked the question, are all these objects accomplished as we evacuate the island. Judge my surprise, when I was told, as far as was known, nothing but the required apologies, and a Commercial Treaty had been granted by Persia, and as the late Government of Her Majesty were anxious to get out of the scrape the best way they could, it is supposed our Envoy was not directed to be too scrupulous. Now I will shew you how far Gorian has been given up, as proclaimed by the late ministers to Parliament. It was as I told you in a former letter, given up to Kamran, but a few days after His Majesty the king of kings accepted the cession of Herat and all its dependencies, and was graciously pleased to make Shah Kamran, in consequence of his having learnt wisdom and obedience his representative for his feudatory Kingdom of Herat, and since that not a very long time before Sir John McNeil entered the Capital, Shere Khan, the brother of that seconded. Yar Mahomed was by the king of Persia appointed Governor of Gorian, under his majesty Mahomed Shah; thus then Gorian is not given up by Persia, on the contrary all Herat is under their control; now if we give up Karrack while things remain in this state, we shall as the Persians say, have been made "to eat dirt." I only give you a few facts, you can draw conclusions.

All we can learn at this place is, that Sir John McNeil has concluded a commercial treaty, by which we are to be treated as the most favored nation, that is, a fixed duty in the neighbourhood and influence of the Court; and to be robbed and forced at all places, on the Sea Coast by the Governors of those places, whom the Persian Government have not power to prevent doing this. It is true this will not be done direct on the British Merchant—this the courtwards would be afraid of; but in on their purchasers, all of whom are in their power; there is another thing connected with this, will give trouble beyond measure, it is the great number of British Bagalows which are under the British Flag and Pass, who will claim these privileges; now we do know the whole system in which these passes were obtained, as there are agents in Bombay to assume ownership for a consideration who have as little right to do so as you or I, this is all known to the Persian authorities and no one will have cause to envy the Resident or Consul who will have to fight these battles. The giving up of Karrack, even in a Commercial point of view, is a policy, for by making it a free port, the quantity of British manufactures which would find their way into Persia and Arabia would be more than quadrupled. If Karrack must be given up to Government, or to fix a station on some part of the Island of Kishmeh, make it a free port, and from its vicinity to Bunder Abbas, the Commercial treaty with Persia might then be of some use and even answer what it professes to do.—Ibid.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA

PROGRESS OF THE TEA CULTIVATION IN THE PROVINCE OF KUMAON.

The Secretary desired to present the following communication from Government bearing on the progress of the Tea Cultivation in Kumaon:

GENERAL DEPARTMENT, 11TH OF DEC. 1841.

MY DEAR SRY.—The information in the accompanying paper respecting the Tea Nurseries in Gurhwal and Kumaon may be interesting to the Society, and the publication of it advantageous.

Lord Auckland desired me to extract it and put it into your hands for the service of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society, and for the benefit of the public at large, if the Society will give it circulation in its proceedings and papers.

Yours very truly,
G. A. HUSBY.

H. H. SRY, Esq., M. D.

Note on the progress making in the Provinces of Gurhwal and Kumaon in the Cultivation of the Tea Plant.

1. The first place at which the plant may be seen is Paori near Reengunge, in the private grounds of the Assistant Captain Huddellstone, on the elevation of about 6000 feet.

2. There are some hundred strong and healthy looking plants and seedlings, but none as yet of a growth to yield seed.

3. The next place where the plant is to be met with is in a Garden attached to the Commissioner's bungalow at Lohha.

4. Here at a height of about 5,000 feet there are about as many plants as at Paori, and all of the same healthy appearance and at the same stage of this growth.

5. At Almora there are two Gardens belonging to Government—the one the Lucknow, the order the Rupensah Garden.

The first covers three acres in extent and contains 1500 full grown trees yielding seed, and 80,000 growing seedlings; the second stands on 1½ acres, and has in it 700 layers taken from the other Garden and 500 seedlings.

6. There is also near Almora a private Garden belonging to Mr. Blinkworth, in which there are some 40,000 seeds sown and expected to come up in the summer of 1842.

The fourth, and perhaps most eligible site with reference to its position as being nearest to the plains, is at Bheental where there are two Gardens, one called the Bhurtport Garden of three acres contains 300 trees yielding seed, 700 layers, and 200 seedlings, the other the Ruseah Garden on the N. w. Koorcha lake of 6 acres, has 5,846 thriving seedlings and 20,000 seeds sown, and expected to come up in the summer between March and July.

7. In the vicinity of this last Garden in the semi-circular slope of the mountain to the North and East of the Now Koorcha lake, a great extent of irrigable land, proved to be favorable to the growth of the Tea plant is to be had at the distance of only one march from the plains, and at an average elevation of about 4000 feet.

8. In the several Gardens, not of too recent formation to have trees yielding seed, there are calculated to be not less, than 50,000 seeds nearly ready to be gathered, and that almost all of these will germinate may be concluded from the produce of what have last year been down and are now coming up.

9. On the whole the experiment, in as far as the possibility of rearing the Tea plant in the province of Gurbwal and Kumaon is in question, may be safely pronounced to have completely succeeded.

10. The quality of the leaf and the difference in this respect between the produce of the Gardens near Bheental where snow seldom if ever falls, though the frosts sometimes are severe, and that of the gardens near Almorah and in the interior, which are annually exposed to snow as well as frost, can only be ascertained by the employment of properly qualified persons who can subject the article to the usual tests.

11. Assam has doubtless a great advantage over Kemaon as to facility of export, but the latter province will probably be found to yield a produce of a superior quality.

12. But even if its superiority in this respect should not be found to counterbalance the disadvantages of the situation of Kemaon in as far as foreign markets are concerned, still, when the liking evinced by all classes of the native population for Tea is considered, the gradual growth of demand nearer home does not appear to be an improbable consequence of such an extension of the cultivation of the plant in the mountains, as may furnish the inhabitants of the plains with the means of indulging at a moderate cost in what would then soon become a favorite beverage.

The slowness of the people of India to adopt any new habit, especially in regard to their food and refreshments, is well known; but there was a time when tobacco was unknown and potatoes not very long since, were regarded with suspicion, yet the one has become a necessary of life and the consumption of the other is rapidly increasing.

SINGAPORE.

LOSS OF THE "VINCOURT MELBOURNE"—We regret that it takes us this lot to announce the loss of the Ship Vincourt Melbourne, Captain McKenzie, on the 5th instant, on the Lucania Shoal, in the China Sea. She took her departure from this for Macao on the 25th ult., with the following Passengers on board; viz. Mrs. Dare and 2 children, Lieut-Col. Campbell, 37th Regt. M. N. I and—Scott, Esqr. of Calcutta. On the 5th inst., at 4 30 P. M. during a calm, breakers were descried on the lee beam close to the vessel, when she sounded in 18 fathoms, and let go both bow and anchors, which, however, would not hold, and the ship struck about an acre and a half to the reef; from which it was found impossible to get her off, and nothing remained to be done but to get the boats out. This was accomplished with some difficulty; and before they left the ship, she had begun, with the flow of the tide, to strike very heavily, threatening destruction to all the after part of the vessel, although, in consequence of the anchors holding forward, she was comparatively safe in that part. Having put provisions and water on board, they left the vessel in 5 boats; the Captain, Mrs. Dare and children, Mr. Scott, and 23 of the Crew in the Launch; in the 1st Cutter, the Chief and Third Officers, with Lieut Col. Campbell, 3 European seamen, and 12 lascars; in the 2nd Cutter, the Second Mate and 9 of the crew; in the 3rd Cutter, 22 of the lascars, and in the Jolly boat, the 4th Officer and 6 of the crew—in all 77 hands. Having left the vessel, the boats steered toward the Coast of Borneo with the intention of making Borneo Proper; and on the 7th came in sight of the land on the Coast, but finding that the strength of the current would prevent their reaching the capital, Captain McKenzie directed them to steer for Sambas—the 22 lascars in the 3rd Cutter, however, being apparently determined to shift for themselves, went off at once towards the shore. (In the same day they also parted company with the 2nd Cutter; the Chief Officer having said that he would run in to look at the land and return by sunset; but apparently met with some obstacle as he did not afterwards join them. On the 10th, a Malay prahu came alongside of the Launch, the Nakodah of which was permitted to come on board, and endeavored to persuade them to go on shore—but this invitation being declined he went again on board of his own prahu, and getting alongside the Jolly boat, which was astern boarded her and plundered the men in her of every thing they had. She was doubtless a pirate, and Capt. McKenzie supposed, he was only prevented from attacking and plundering the Launch, by seeing that they were well supplied with fire arms on board. As it was, the prahu fired several shots at the Launch, one of which wounded a European seaman in the head. Finding the Jolly boat the cause of detention, the people were taken out of her and divided between the Launch and second cutter, the boat herself being turned adrift. On the following night the 2d cutter parted company with the Launch, and seeing no traces of her at daylight, although she had hove to and fired muskets during the night, the second officer determined to steer in his boat for Singapore. He arrived here early on the morning of Monday last; and Captain McKenzie having also adopted the same determination, after parting company with the 2nd cutter, his boat arrived about 12 hours after, having been 13 days from the ship. They had all suffered much from exposure, and in particular Mrs. Dare, one of whose children was at the breast, and whose situation for such a period in an open boat was necessarily painful in the extreme.

No farther accounts having been received of the 1st cutter, and having had experience of the dangers to be on board of her are exposed to on the Coast of Borneo, the local authorities have very properly chartered the Royalist to proceed to that coast in quest of her. The Royalist is herself well-armed, and some Grandhaire and Scapras having been shipped on board of her, she will be in a condition not only to protect herself against pirates, but to operate effectively against them. Capt. McKenzie says that the 1st Cutter was an excellent boat, very well equipped and in every respect in an efficient state, and well provided with arms, besides those belonging to Colonel Campbell. It is not improbable that being prevented from joining her commands by contrary currents, she may have steered for Sambas; but there is too much room for apprehension on that Count to rely on any such probability, and we are happy to find that the local authorities have lost no time in despatching a vessel for her relief.

We ought not to close this notice without mentioning that Commodore Kearney, in the absence of any of Her Majesty's Cruisers, very handsomely proffered the services of the two American Ships—War here under his command, to make inquiries, in the course of their voyage to China, along the Borneo Coast, for the missing boat—an offer which has been acknowledged, we have no doubt, by the local authorities in becoming terms, although the despatch of the Royalist renders it unnecessary to avail of it.

ADELAIDE

By the arrival of the Dorset from South Australia, we have received accounts from Adelaide to the 23d December. We publish beneath, an article, extracted from the Report of the Committee on the Commercial Trade of South Australia, as adopted by the Statistical Society of that Colony.

THE CRISIS.

This colony, as well as New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land, has been for a considerable time suffering under a severe monetary pressure. The causes of the derangements which have taken place appear to have been—

1.—The great extent of banking accommodation afforded in the earlier stages of the Colony.

2.—The almost unlimited credit that was given upon all transactions.

3.—The large Government expenditure, which in the early part of the present year was suddenly checked.

The two former of these led to considerable speculation in land; this continued without any material check till the end of 1839, and indeed as far as relates to land in the vicinity of the New Port, up to the end of last year. About the beginning of 1840 the influx of emigrant capitalists obviously decreased, and fears began to be entertained as to the approval by the home authorities of so large a Government outlay. Confidence, during last year, was generally diminished, as the banks rapidly withdrew from individuals the accommodation previously afforded.

The high price at one time obtained for goods, induced large and judicious shipments from home, and also caused emigrants to invest in merchandise a large proportion of their capital which, in the majority of instances, being required for a speedy outlay, the owners were compelled to realise at once, and generally at a great sacrifice. From the premature fall in the value of their stocks, many dealers who had been falsely considered as successful unexpectedly discovered that they were insolvent. The subsequent loss upon their stock was augmented by their having to realise unsalable goods that had been previously purchased for the sake of obtaining invoices that contained a portion of saleable articles.

The derangement in the money market continued to increase as fears began to be entertained respecting the fate of the bills drawn by Colonel Gawler, upon the Colonization Commissioners. In the early part of this year, the actual dishonor of the above bills being known, confidence received a still further and very severe check. This caused some failures—to a less extent than might, however, have been expected; nevertheless, it occasioned great embarrassment throughout the whole community.

This unpropitious state of things continued long after Governor Grey's arrival, he having brought no news as to the payment of previous bills, and being but inadequately furnished with financial powers for completing the necessary Government arrangements in the colony.

The exports—of wool from above 900,000 sheep—oil and whalebone from four bay whaling establishments—and several less important articles of produce will, your sub-committee anticipate, materially relieve our present position, particularly when in them is added the crops from more than 10,000 acres now under cultivation.

A liberal Government expenditure for the next year or two would materially assist the colony in recovering from its present position, and which your Sub-committee cannot but consider as the more due to the settlers, as a great portion of their present difficulty has been occasioned by the instantaneous stoppage of the Commissioners' credit and finances.

ADLAIDE PRICE CURRENT, DECEMBER 17, 1841.—Wheat, per bushel, 10s to 11s; fine, per 100lb, £1 5s to £1 10s; maize, per bushel 8s 6d; barley 8s to 9s per bushel; oats per bushel 6s 6d to 8s. L. per ton £16 to £21; Colonial ditto, £16 to £21 10s; Hyson Tea per chest, £12; sugar, Mauritius per ton, £22 to £25; coffee per lb, 1d to 1s; oil, sperm, per imperial tun, £70; black, wet ditto, £5; whalebone per ton, £90 to 100; wool per lb, 10d to 1s 4d.

TOTAL LOSS OF BARK FLORIDA, FROM CANTON.—We have been favored with the following particulars of the loss of the Florida, from Canton.

SHOOT BEACH, Little Bay Harbor, September 22d, 1841.

MR. JAMES BERRY.—

DEAR SIR,—I hasten to inform you that the bark Florida, of New Bedford, from Canton, bound to New York, cargo tea, rhubarb, and camels, struck on Shoot Beach yesterday, and is now a wreck. The Captain, crew, &c. were taken off by schooner Bath, Captain Crumner, and are now at my house. This morning the vessel is not here—her masts are down, and in all probability she has gone to pieces. I am just sending a vessel out to her, and am going to Mr. James Beach to take charge of what may be stranded. The vessel is insured in New Bedford, the cargo partly in China. I have not time to say more. Very respectfully, yours S. W. LESTER, Jr., Commissioner of Wrecks.

We learn, in addition, that the Florida will be an absolute total loss. Regarding about 1000 eight miles from the beach, and although a very dangerous place, was not laid down upon any chart on board of the Florida. A large amount of insurance had been made in Wall street upon her cargo, but owing to advice received last Tuesday, that there was an insurance at Canton sufficient to cover the whole amount at risk, all the policies in New York were cancelled. The loss will exceed one hundred thousand dollars. The vessel is insured at New Bedford.—New York Herald.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

SIR,—In common with many of your readers I have been much amused with the letter in Hongkong, at the same time I regret to say, his sudden transitions from the grave to the ludicrous are so abrupt that one hardly knows when he is serious or jesting. He, I think, should study to attain that happy style by which the practiced writer so gracefully glides from "grave to gay, from lively to severe."

I address you because I am one of those who imagine that the Chinese fables, described by the "Idler" in his last No. was not altogether a laughing matter, as the sequel will show, some of the Chinese (but the least active in the row it is said) were secured, and have, in most direct and positive contravention of English Law, been sentenced to expiate as trifling an offence by the punishment of flogging! I understand they are now working on the public roads, loaded with chains, in companionship with a gang of pirates and miscreants whose crimes by many would be deemed too heinous for capital punishment. Is not this monstrous? And the more so when I tell you that numerous felons have been committed by Englishmen on the Chinese which have been wholly unpunished; in some instances only a slight punishment was inflicted. It must be obvious that such partiality or ignorance—no doubt the latter—cannot fail to alienate the Chinese, and lead them to entertain a very mean opinion of our national character. Some of them already go so far as to say, the English mandarins are nearly as bad as their own; an opinion which will be shared by the British, if such a flagrant violation of English law and public justice is not in some measure repaired by the immediate release of the unfortunate Chinese brawlers in question; and which I am sure the estimable and right minded gentleman, who acts as magistrate, will on proper investigation forthwith order. It is due to him to say, no one more deplorable the wretched inefficiency of the Police force than himself; no man can do his duty better, so far as the vague, anomalous, and provisional instructions clogging his jurisdiction will permit: but dependent as he is for information on others, in all that concerns the Chinese under his jurisdiction, it is not surprising that he should feel weary of the onerous duties of office, and impatient to be amid the clash and din of arms in the North.

But for this knowledge I should have animadverted at greater length upon this strange decision, and you will consequently admit, that it would be very ungenerous, perhaps wrong, to visit on his head the sad neglect and most grievous delinquencies of an office which almost unsaid he has, at a professional sacrifice, been called upon to fill.

LEGION.

Hongkong, 10th March, 1849.

Brig "Algerine," Hongkong,
16th March, 1849

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—Will you kindly insert the arrival of the Brig "Algerine" at Hongkong on the 12th instant, from Amoy on the 10th after a passage of 48 hours, from that place, Charles Buckton, commander, tonnage 145, passenger Lieut. Greive, H. C. S. H. M. Ships Druid, Pylades, Chamelon, and Starling were still at Amoy, but the latter vessel was to leave for Chusan the day of my leaving, but she would doubtless remain a short time longer as it came on to blow a very heavy gale that night, and continued, most probably, some days, we having found no diminution of wind until well in with the land off Pedra Branca. The authorities were inviting the Chinese to resume their habitations at Kolongsoo, and were gradually doing so, the more respectable individuals, and owners of the soil, becoming responsible for the conduct of those whom they might employ. At Kolongsoo a market is held every morning from 6 until 10, at which very many articles in demand are obtainable, more particularly, excellent Beef, Fowls, Geese, Green Peas, Yams, Spinach, and many other vegetables in abundance.

About three miles above the shipping, as large body of Chinese muster daily to practise warlike evolutions, particularly musketry, amongst which are a large portion of Cavalry.

One of the surveying boats from the Pylades, came suddenly upon them whilst up the river about 10 days ago. Capt. Kellett in the Starling has been surveying all the outer Islands, and found several excellent passages between them for vessels of any size. The Amoy Races were held just before my arrival; however nothing flags for want of spirit amongst H. M. officers there. Hunting three times a week, usually finding at Tenterden Gorse; the other three days they have Pigeon shooting, and some excellent matches take place:

The residences of the officers and troops on the Island are particularly comfortable, and the Sappers and Miners are constantly at work making good roads for the easy transmission of artillery across the Island, in case it should be required.

The Thos. Grenville and Frankfield, troopships are lying there,—there is also the Kelpie and Anglona schooner. The Emily Jane sailed for Red Bay on the 8th instant. Capt. Clark was on board the Druid and not expected to move.

Amongst other inaccuracies in the charts of the coast I may mention a bank, the North Brother S. S. E. and old Thunder Head N. & E. distant about 3½ miles. I observed fishing stakes where the Charts are marked 15 fathoms, on sounding found only 3 fathoms and this at high water spring tide.

I crossed it twice in working into Tongam, and found 15 fathoms to the S.E. of it and inside to the N. W. 13 fathoms.

I remain,

Sir,

Your obedient Servant,
CHARLES BUCKTON.
Commander of the Algerine.

BOAT AND BUTTER.

(Communicated.)

Every thing in this world of ours has a name; and many with one name have two significations: the real and the accepted;—the bona fide designation of the thing, and the figurative. Thus, we all know what is called friendship;—how few of us know what it really is. How many people say "good things," as they are called; how few really good things do any of us say; and when we say of a man he is a "good man," on change, how much the reverse may be not he every where else. Yet without it requires a certain degree of tact to distinguish the real from the figurative, which every one does not possess.—I'll give you an instance. Reader, do you know what is "Toast and butter"? of course you do.—Can you define it to me? I dare say you can, in your own opinion at least, and as the world wags, that goes a great way—come, tell me now!—Is it not, slices of the staff of life made brown before the fire, and well bespread with the unctuous concrete of milk?—Yes—and you know of no other, no figurative signification for the term?—No—and this is the toast and butter wherewith you would tempt the corporeal, or tickle the ideal palate, of a "great man," from whom you expected, and might possibly gain something? And you know no other?—Then are you a dolt—and I find I must teach you;—so listen to me, and I will tell you what toast and butter is in its figurative sense.

Now suppose yourself at a dinner, a public dinner, given on some great occasion, no matter what, and said "great man," sit at the head of the table, or any where else at the table; and the soup, and the fish, and the roast, and the stew, and the game, and the puddings had been all freely discussed; and the wine had passed round, and every one was well disposed to listen to, and chime in with, every thing. Then is the time to offer, not your real, but your figurative, not the slices of browned and greased bread, but your mental "Toast and Butter."—Up gets the purveyor of the article, and says,—"With the chairman's permission I will propose a toast:—Gentlemen do me the favor to fill your glasses; I need not say fill bumpers, when you hear the name I am about to propose to you, your glasses will be filled to the brim, and you will do full honor to the toast, I am sure. I beg to propose the health of one who is the friend of every man who needs a friend;—the promoter of every man's interest that has an interest to promote;—the disinterested in himself, and interested for all others;—whose purse ever exceeds the impulse of his benevolent heart;—in a word, the health of Sir Liberal Patron, and long may he continue at the head of that society of which he now constitutes the ornament and the pride." Thump, thump, thump, no knuckles on the table, and jingle go glasses and plates; bumpers are quaffed off, and all about "Sir Liberal Patron."—With three times three!" Cries the purveyor; (by the way, we have lately got on to four times four, in process of time we shall arrive at the end of the multiplication table, twelve times twelve) Hip! Hip! Hip! Huzza! &c. &c.; again knuckles thump, again glasses jingle, and for a few moments all in expectant silence; till up springs Sir Liberal, all satisfied (well toasted) and all modesty (well buttered) to "return thanks," as it is called. Now here's another misnomer,—another mistaking of the figurative for the real. Can any man of real sound sense, and unaffected modesty, return any thing like thanks for being ho-toasted and buttered as Sir Liberal has been.—But that's nothing, or rather the thing. Up he gets, and "unaccustomed as he is to public speaking, or receiving such a gratifying demonstration of public feeling, feels himself (in a matter of feeling altogether) overpowered by his situation, and lacks words to express his gratitude to his friends around him, for the honor they have done him (numerous bows) at the friendly instigation of his valued and worthy friend Mr. Supple Cringe, whose health he begs to propose in return"—more bumpers—more thumping of knuckles and jingling of glasses, and another attack on the multiplication table, and, of course more toast and butter, to the end of the farce.—Now, reader! have I opened your eyes? If you were hungry, which toast and butter would you try? why, the real to be sure.—But if you wanted a minister to give you a place—a ship-owner to give you a command—a Merchant to make a supercargo of you—or a Contractor to give you a slice of a loan, or any other good thing, why, you would use the figurative to be sure. The real, you know, feeds the body, the figurative administers to the mind. It's of no use saying you are not accessible to it.—You are, and I am—and we all are, alike amenable and susceptible of it, and may have our favor bought, our credulity galloped, and our vanity puffed by it. We know the cheat, and are still content to be cheated: and whether it be in a newspaper or at a dinner—true or false—merited or undeserved, still there is a potent gate in the fortress of the strongest mind thro' which the insidious foe, flattery, will find an entrance, and force us to surrender our better judgement. Nor should it be otherwise. For every cloud the reality would dispel, it would intercept a thousand sarcasms; and were things called by their real names only, you would not be my gentle, my courteous reader, nor I, your devoted humble Servant.

PIRACY.—Besides the communications from

Hongkong given in another column, we are informed that after a short time since the small number of soldiers stationed at the village of Cheek-pai-wan, had been withdrawn without being promptly replaced, the ladrones landed and levied contributions on the village. Indeed, according to all accounts, piracy is fearfully on the increase in the estuary of this river and the Canton river itself, nay, acts of piracy are being committed in the immediate neighbourhood of Macao. The population of the many islands formed by the Chokiang river has long been famous or rather infamous for piracy, but by the management of the Chinese authorities, mixing bribes and punishment, it had, before the difficulties with the English arose, been very much lessened, and although never entirely suppressed, the danger incurred by the peaceable native traders from pirates was not great. When however the arrival of the British force in the Chinese waters drove all warjunks and mandarin boats within shelter, piracy recommenced, and bids fair to become more formidable than at any previous time. At present it is said that the greater number of their boats rendezvous just within the Bogue, and from thence make their predatory excursions, to the very great risk and detriment of the peaceful trader, who unless strongly armed cannot venture at all to follow his calling. Of late the smuggling boats on their trips between this and Whampoa or Canton have ever travelled in company of three or four or even more, and we have heard even of some of these being sent as convoys to lor-chas (Macao lighters) which, to fetch valuable cargo, had been despatched to Hongkong. It may easily be imagined that these precautions must subject merchants to enormous expense; nor are they on all occasions sufficient, for notwithstanding them the pirates have been at times successful, and possessed themselves of valuable property.

That under such a state of things the growing trade of Hongkong is much checked, need not be wondered at, and it is matter of deep regret that the efforts of H. M. Ships, which until the arrival of H. M. Plenipotentiary at Hongkong, were directed against the peaceable Chinese trader, were not rather pointed against the pirates, who might, we think, with a proper show of activity, if not destroyed, at least be rendered less daring, and driven back to greater distance. But, unfortunately the very settlement of Hongkong, if we are at all to trust statements made by respectable Chinese, gives shelter to the pirates, and we are told that goods plundered on the high seas, have been, against a payment, recovered from parties at Hongkong. We are well aware that under the circumstances under which Hongkong sprung into existence, and considering the predatory habits of the inhabitants of that Island and those surrounding it, it could not be expected that the native population would be of the most desirable class; but the evil has been enhanced by some Chinese, owners of the most disgraceful establishments at Hongkong, having obtained such influence with the authorities, as to be able to exercise almost despotic sway among their countrymen, whom they squeeze in exactly the same manner as the mandarines are said to do elsewhere. The wealth these men, and particularly one of the name of AXWA have amassed, and are daily amassing, serves to increase their influence still more, and to such degree has it already risen, that respectable Chinese have assured us, that so long as that state of things lasted, however desirous they might be, it would be altogether impossible for them to settle at Hongkong. To give an idea of one of the impure sources from which the before named individual derives an enormous income, we may mention that he has on ground obtained from the government, erected a large gambling establishment, capable of holding about 95 gambling tables and that he lets these at two dollars each per day; which alone would give him an income of $1800 per month. The other place of iniquity of which he is owner must also be a profitable concern; but this is not all; as before said, he squeezes the Chinese who come to settle at Hongkong, that is, they are obliged to pay him taxes for being permitted to exercise their calling. Whatever complaints may be made to the British authorities of his proceedings, he has the means and address to render nugatory, and even to revenge himself on his refractory subjects. It is strongly suspected that this same person is well acquainted with most of the pirates committed in the neighbourhood, and that the pirates purchase his silence and protection. It would be difficult, we fear, to produce absolute proof, and such as would at the police office be thought convincing, of many of the things of which we have accused this individual, but we hope that our remarks may have the desired effect of directing the Chief magistrate's attention to an evil which if allowed to grow must materially affect the prosperity of the new settlement, and that we are aware Capt. Caine wishes to promote with all his best exertions, although these are necessarily often thwarted by the natives he is obliged to employ, and who are all represented to be under the influence as above stated, and from whom therefore cooperation in detecting any of these evil doings cannot be expected.

We beg to draw the attention of our readers, and particularly that of the authorities at Hongkong to "Legion's" letter. That these poor men should be punished as delinquents merely for a brawl in the streets seems to be somewhat severe and we hope their case will be attended to and their punishment remitted, if such as described has been inflicted.

The amount of Cash (Chinese coin) brought by the Murion from Ningpo does not exceed $26,000 in value, being 10 per cent of the whole of the large quantity seized, for which the remainder has been given up to the Chinese. We do not know upon what principle such restitution has been made, for, if the captors had a right to 10 per cent of that property, which probably belonged to the Chinese government, we do not see why the other nine tenths should not likewise change owners; if on the contrary it was considered that the conquerors had no claim to it, then the taking of the 10 per cent is unjustifiable. If these cash belonged to the government we really can see no reason why the whole was not made lawful prize. All private property returned to its owners (or to those who claim it) the ownership being somewhat difficult to discover at Ningpo pays 10 per cent for its restitution, and we understand that the same duty is levied on the trade at Ningpo although it is difficult in most instances to put a just value on the cargoes of the junks, which in many instances is represented at much less than it really is.

We are much obliged to Capt. Buckton of the Algerine for his communication concerning affairs at Amoy, which it will be seen, are proceeding prosperously.

(Communicated, Hongkong 10th March)
ONDITS.

We are rivaling your gaieties at Macao, and although not enjoying the felicity of abating a toe in the many quadrille, believe me, our Soirées are most brilliant. We have had two grand dinners ashore, one was given by the honorary members of the mess of the 37th Grenadiers, to the officers of that regiment previous to their departure to a more congenial climate than this—

"... of boiled rice and fish salted,
The grateful repast of tired travellers baited.

Where the tints of the earth, and the hues of the sky,
In colour or beauty may possibly vie,
But one can't say exactly, the hills are too high;
Where the women are—women (defend me, ye nine!)
And all, save the scene we behold, seems divine."

The other was given by our worthy and hospitable magistrate, to which every official on the island, down to the magistrate's clerk, was invited to meet his Excellency the Plenipotentiary; we think this was in the very best taste, and but due to them, considering the humble but highly useful duties they are called upon to perform; and we are sure the recollection of such condescension, on the part of superiors, will stimulate the subordinates to—if possible—a more zealous discharge of their respective duties; if so, such a good precedent will not be liable to fall into desuetude.

You will learn with regret that the Idler has left—

"... The land where the Bungalow and Prison
Are emblems of deeds which their builders have done;
Where poor China Brawlers with felons are driven,
Now maddening to anger that justice there's none."

We think your "profession" correspondent would have been noticed, and perhaps his hypercriticism reported on himself; for we imagine the "Idler" possessed as profound a knowledge of Vauban and the art of fortification as his reviewer. Alas, that the playful sallies and sparkling wit, "that was wont to set the table in a roar" should be lost to Hongkongians!

Your remarks on Piracy are just but appear unhedged in the proper quarter. So daring have they become that a black mail system appears likely to be established in the Canton river; and unless some steps are taken to protect Chinese boats resorting thither, the settlement will suffer severely. Surely some portion of the very large force now in these waters might be appropriated for this highly necessary object.

THE CAROLINE ISLANDS.

We are obliged to Captain Geare for the following communication.

Brig Arrow, Macao Roads, March 11th.
Dear Sir,—I arrived at Hongkong on Monday last from Sydney, left there January 13th. The following information about the Caroline islands may be useful. February 22d at 2 P. M. having run 37 miles NW by N by compass from ANANIMOUS island, bright moonlight night, saw a small island right ahead about 1 mile distant, also a smaller one to the SE of it. The largest appeared about 1/2 mile in extent, very low, fringed with beach. These islands are not in the charts, and farther north than any laid down at 8° 56' N. long. 150° 08' E. Jones's group, appears like 3 large islands on coming from the SE; from the west side of the westernmost island there is a sand bank extending 6 miles, first to the NW, then W by N, forming a crescent. The bank is uncovered in 3 or 4 places, with usual water and rocks the whole extent. The west end terminates in a patch higher than the rest, having a clump of trees on it; this is an excellent mark, as the bank does not appear to extend more than 1/2 a cable's length outside of it. The bank is fringed of light white sand, and in some places is not more than 20 or 40 feet broad. The breakers can be heard, before the bank is seen.

Sumner's island is not visible from the end of this bank. I send a few Sydney papers. Yours truly, FREDERICK GEARE,—Commander.

Sir,—Being about to depart from China, after a residence of many years, though not without the hope of returning, I am desirous of leaving some memorial to testify my grateful sense of the protection afforded to me in common with the rest of my countrymen at Macao, more especially under the enlightened Government of your Excellency, by whose able management all the evils of a state of war have been averted from this important settlement, and circumstances of complicated perplexity and danger converted into elements of peace and increased prosperity.

I therefore take the liberty of placing at your Excellency's disposal the sum of five thousand ($5,000) dollars with a request that you will have the goodness to appropriate it to some permanent purpose of public benevolence bearing an inscription that it is an offering of gratitude from a British Subject to the Government of which your Excellency is the Head, and to the Por-

I have the honour to remain with cordial wishes for the welfare of your Excellency and family.

Macao, 10th March, 1842.—Sir,—In your letter of this date, receipt of which I have now the honor to acknowledge desirous that you should not depart without an answer, you inform me of your departure for Europe, and of your wishes to perpetuate your memory in this establishment by some act of public beneficence, for which purpose you placed at my disposal the sum of 5000 Spanish Dollars. It would be criminal in me, or at least highly censurable, to refuse an offer the object of which is the public good, or if I failed to express, notwithstanding your wishes to the contrary, my well merited gratitude: I could have wished, that you yourself had pointed out in what manner the sum offered was to be applied, but since perhaps your extreme delicacy prevented this, I, together with the Loyal Senate of this City, will endeavor to discharge this trust in a manner satisfactory to the donor as well as to the public to whom the gift is offered. As to the expressions in your letter addressed to me in particular, although I attribute them more to your partiality than to my own merits, you will please to accept my best thanks for them.

It remains now for me to wish you a prosperous voyage, and that in your native country you may meet with that good fortune you have a right to expect. I am with continual care of the most perfect esteem.

Sir,
Your humble and obed. Servant,
ADRIÃO A. DA SILVEIRA PINTO.
To JAMES MATHESON Esq.

The Hongmerchants Howqua, Mowqua, Fwan-kehqua, and Klongqua arrived here early in the week, desirous of having an interview with H. M. Plenipotentiary, to which however they were not admitted, and returned again to Canton on Wednesday last. Mr Henry Portinger left here for Hongkong on the same day in the Steamer Engilly.

Our advices from Hongkong state that during the last few weeks the accession of the Chinese population there, has been very great, and great activity in the building of houses prevails.

We are sorry to learn that a Chinese on approaching a vessel at Whampoa in the night of the 9th, was shot dead by the sentry whose hail he did not answer. This resorting to firearms on such occasions is highly reprehensible, and we suppose, if Whampoa were under British jurisdiction, would get him that firing into great trouble. Whether this case will be made a subject of complaint by the Canton authorities remains to be seen, although the treatment the boat of the Autumnus experienced at the hands of the Chinese soldiery may serve as some set off in this case, as probably the overwatchfulness on board of the vessel whence the man was killed was caused by the hostile seizure of this boat. We learn that the boat, instead of going through the, now usual, channel to Canton, went into salt Junk river, where she was fired at from Chinese boats, and immediately turned back to Whampoa, but the Chinese pursued and captured her, wounding some of the men and a boy although unarmed, severely. On being taken to Canton the soldiers could not make good their accusations against the boats crew of hostile intentions and of taking soundings, and the Kwang-chow foo liberated them accordingly on the same evening.

Hitherto the Hongkong Gazette, up to the last number, dated 26th February, has been printed and published at Macao, although this did not appear on the face of it, nor is it perhaps at the present moment of much importance to enquire into the cause of this silence; whether it was intended to create an impression abroad that the new settlement was already in so thriving a condition as to have a paper of its own, certain it is that its readers were left in perfect uncertainty as to its location; now, however, we believe that the next number is really to be a Hongkong Gazette, for we hear that a printing apparatus has already been set up, and is in full activity at the house of Mr. SAMUEL FRANK, who, we are told, will conduct the printing of that paper. Another paper, we have been informed, on independent principles, is likewise to be started, but who the parties are concerned in it, we have not yet heard. We wish them both a good subscription list.

After writing the above, we have received the first number of a new paper, "THE FRIEND OF CHINA," which dated the 17th of this month, has been printed in Macao, but we understand the printing establishment is forthwith to be removed to Hongkong where the new paper is to appear weekly on every Thursday. Its size is nearly but not quite equal to that of the "Canton Press" and being printed in large type does not of course contain the same quantity of matter. Of the quality it would be premature to judge from the first number, but if it at all keeps the promises it holds out in its address to the public, which is too long for us to copy, having received the paper last night at a late hour, it will accomplish much. From this address, although the paper is silent as to the Editorship, we gather that very likely it is conducted by one or more gentlemen now holding office under government, and by several protestant missionaries. From its appealing to the Hongkong authorities for patronage, and from its being conducted as we believe, with government officers, we suppose it will become the government organ, although from what we state in the foregoing paragraph, it does not appear as if the Hongkong Gazette was to be incorporated with it. We heartily congratulate our new cotemporary on this his first appearance, and wish him all possible success.

From Canton we have no intelligence of interest. The British shipping at Whampoa is reduced to 9 or 10 vessels; there still remain a good many chops of Teas undisposed of, and prices have lately given way. The export trade of Macao is by no means so brisk as it was a few months since, the expense of bringing the teas down and of warehousing them being too great to allow of a fair profit for the risk incurred. No export-trade of any amount is yet carried on at Hongkong, for which what we have said above of pirates and other matters, will partly account. Several of the warehouses there are now finished and ready for taking in goods.

We stated last week that some plans for the establishment of an English Church at Hongkong were in agitation. We were then aware that the Revd. Geo. Cooper, Chaplain of H. M. S. Blenheim, was exerting himself to bring about such establishment, and we understand that at his interviews with Sir Henry Pottinger, Mr. Johnston, and Sir Thomas Herbert on the subject, these gentlemen have expressed themselves most anxious to promote his views. The uncertainty of the intentions of H. M. Government alone is the reason why the project has not yet assumed any decided shape; for we understand that British subjects here are most willing to contribute towards the erection of an episcopalian Church.

The 37th Regt. M. N. I., now a Grenadier Regiment for its services and sufferings in China, embarked on board the Sir David Malcolm, and Mohammed Shaw on the 8th of this month, to return to Madras. Its losses during its stay in China, particularly from sickness, of both officers and men have been very great, without even referring to the loss of the Golconda from Madras with the headquarters. All the troops, details of the four European Regiments, are now on shore at Hongkong, and government relieved of the enormous expense of the transport. A detachment of about 50 men is now stationed in the new cantonments at Cheek-chun on the southern side of the island where we believe a military hospital is forthwith to be erected. From its situation we suppose that it will prove the healthiest as well as pleasantest spot on the island.

RUMOURS.

It is said a descendant of the Ming dynasty has hoisted his standard in the province of Szechuen, and collected a body of 10,000 men.

On the 11th, that a kind of revolt, or strong demonstration of national feeling, has been evinced by the great officers in Peking; who have strongly remonstrated with the emperor, and plainly told his imperial majesty, that, if he does not adopt more energetic measures, in order to drive the rebellious barbarians out of the country—they will depose him.

On the 11th, that the people of the province of Chekiang will not submit to general Yihking; that, indeed, he has been driven from the province.

On the 11th, that in the first moon of this year the people of the province of Hooph rebelled, and killed two heen magistrates.

On the 11th, because the taxes for the support of the army in the province of Canton have not been forthcoming, general Yihshan wished to borrow tael 200,000 of the treasurer, but the treasurer would not lend the money; consequently, these two high officers are not at one. The treasurer is desirous to report Yihshan to the emperor; but the governor and lieutenant governor advised him to peace and harmony; but the treasurer is obstinate, and is fixed in his intention to report Yihshan to the emperor.—Canton Register, 15th March.

UNITED STATES.

PROHIBITORY DISTURBANCES PROCLAMATION.

From the Galignani, Oct. 18.

The following is the proclamation issued by the President:—Whereas it has come to the knowledge of the government of the United States that sundry secret lodges, clubs, or associations, exist on the northern frontier; that the members of these lodges are bound together by secret oaths; that they have collected fire arms and other military materials, and secreted them in sundry places; and that it is their purpose to violate the laws of their country, by making military and lawless incursions, when opportunity shall offer, into the territory of a power with which the United States are at peace; and whereas it is known that travelling agitators, from both sides of the line, visit these lodges, and harangue the members in secret meeting, stimulating them to illegal acts; and whereas the same persons are known to levy contributions on the ignorant and credulous for their own benefit, thus supporting and enriching themselves by the basest means; and whereas the unlawful intentions of the members of these lodges have already been manifested in an attempt to destroy the lives and property of the inhabitants of Chippewa, in Canada, and the public property of the British Government there being—now, therefore, I, John Tyler, President of the United States, do issue this my proclamation, admonishing all such evil-minded persons of the condign punishment which is certain to overtake them, assuring them that the laws of the United States will be rigorously executed against their illegal acts; and that, if in any lawless incursions into Canada they fall into the hands of the British authorities, they will not be reclaimed as American citizens, nor any interference made by this government in their behalf. And I exhort all well meaning but deluded persons who may have joined these lodges immediately to abandon them, and to have nothing more to do with their secret meetings or unlawful oaths as they would avoid serious consequences to themselves; and I expect the intelligent and well-disposed members of the community to frown on all these unlawful combinations and illegal proceedings, and to assist the government in maintaining the peace of the country against the mischievous consequences of the acts of these violators of the law. Given under my hand, at Washington, the 15th September, A. D. 1841, and of the Independence of the United States the 66th.

"By the President, DANIEL WEBSTER, Secretary of State."

EXTRAORDINARY ASSOCIATION AGAINST ENGLAND IN AMERICA.

(From the Chronicle.)

We insert a curious account of the Hunter's Lodges of North America, obtained from a source on which we place full reliance. The nature and object of the Association will be best understood from the terms of the oath. The account describes the organization of the Association, its funds, the number of lodges in the various states of the Union and in the British provinces. Our readers will learn with surprise that at least eighty thousand able-bodied men are enrolled in the different lodges. The subject is of paramount interest at the present moment.

When, in 1837, a portion of the Canadian population were driven to rebellion, not so much by the plans of their leaders as by the energetic measures of Sir John Colborne, which obliged them to throw off the mask, the people of the United States were taken quite by surprise. They did not expect a rebellion for at least ten years to come. It must be a matter of astonishment that the patriots did not look out for help from that quarter; but it should be understood that the antipathy of the old French opposition in Lower Canada, with Papineau at its head, and their American neighbours, was infinitely greater with respect to motives, ideas, and feelings, than that of the loyal British to the French disaffected Canadians. In fact, the movement of Lower Canada, and the McKensie attempt in Upper Canada, were two distinct events, as far as analogy of views is concerned. After the failure of the Buffalo, the first open sympathising demonstration took place at Navy Island, but till now nothing like organization existed; private presents and subscriptions were the only assistance given. After the evacuation of Navy Island and the failure of the several attempts upon the islands of Lake Erie, the patriots appeared to be entirely discouraged. On the arrival of Lord Durham in Canada, by his mediatory policy, and his generous and nearly universal amnesty, the rancours began entirely to disappear. But some secret influence, some power that could be felt but not seen, counteracted the best exertions, the most philanthropic acts, and the soundest policy of his Lordship. We could write books, we could tell many a tale, we could bring forward facts and statements of a startling nature, if we had time, but we wish to confine ourselves now to the Hunter's Association, to show what its organization and strength. As we do not propose to write its history—it may be sufficient to state that it was about this time that we can trace the beginning of what afterwards was called the Hunter's Association. Whether it originated in New York or Vermont, whether the McKensie, the Nelsons, the Coates, were its principal founders; whether the Baron Froelich, or the Chevalier de Lorimer, were the persons at whose suggestion it was formed, we cannot say. Neither can we say whether it originated in the spontaneous will and wish of its founders, or whether, at the very outset, it owed its origin to foreign influence. In May 1838, the first lodges were formed, and Brian was elected one of the grand eagles for Vermont. The object of this body will be best understood from the form of the oath administered to its members. It is literally this—"I swear to do my utmost to promote republican institutions and ideas throughout the world, to cherish them, to defend them, and especially to devote myself to the propagation, protection, and defence of these institutions in North America. I pledge my life, my property, and my honour to the Association. I bind myself to its interests, and I promise, until death, that I will attack, combat, and help to destroy, by all means that my superior may think proper every power or authorities of loyal origin upon this continent, and especially never to rest till the British tyrants cease to have any possession or footing whatever in North America. So help me, God." The organization of the Association is divided into three principal branches—political, the military, and the financial; which three branches are again subdivided into many sections. The classification of the members is as follows:—1. A. Grand Sassen, or Grand Master—(Chief President). 2. Grand Eagles—(Presidents of the different States). 3. Eagles—(Chiefs of Counties). 4. Grand Leaders—(Chiefs of Districts). 5. Grand Hunters—(Chiefs of Townships). 6. Chief Hunters—(Chiefs of Lodges). 7. Hunters.

The Supreme Lodge can be called the Executive and Consultative Council. An inferior lodge is formed of from 20 to 30 common hunters, having for a head a chief hunter; 20 to 30 of these chief hunters form the lodge of a grand leader. The grand leaders are members of the Council of the Eagle, whilst two or more eagles have consultative votes in the direction of the society under the grand Eagle in each state. The whole principle of this organization is mistrust, and it must be acknowledged that if the discipline and statutes could have been enforced to the extent proposed, it would have created more mischief than it has as yet done. By the rule of the society every member, of whatever rank, is obliged to provide himself with a rifle or musket, a sword or dagger, and have always in his habitation 40 charges of powder; he is, besides, obliged to pay the following contributions:—Common hunter, 2 cents per week, or a dollar per year; a chief hunter 84 cents per week, or 3 dollars per year; a grand hunter, 124 cents per week, 6 dollars per year; a grand leader, 25 cents per week, or 12 dollars per year; an eagle, 374 cents per week, or 16 dollars per year; grand eagle, 50 cents per week, or 20 dollars per year; sassen, 1 dollar per week, or 50 dollars per year; besides, a dollar is paid as entrance money, and a dollar on the election to any rank. The whole of this sum is kept at the disposal of the Supreme Council, and generally is used, partly to provide arms and ammunition for the poorer members, who cannot afford to buy them themselves; to support newspaper and publications edited in the interest of the Association; in paying emissaries, lectures, postages, had accumulating deposits of arms, cannon, and so forth. The number of lodges five months ago was as follows:—Maine, 90; Vermont, 107; New York, 223; Michigan, 54; Wisconsin, 7; Illinois, 21; Indiana, 14; Ohio, 86; Pennsylvania, 49; Kentucky, 11; Virginia, 21; Maryland, 16; Delaware, 2; New Jersey, 17; Missouri, 39; Iowa, 3; Louisiana, 11; New Hampshire, 78; Massachusetts, 89; Rhode Island, 15; Connecticut, 68; Lower Canada, nearly the whole of the French population are organized in lodges; Upper Canada, 64. There are a few lodges in New Brunswick, and a few scattered in other parts. The number of lodges in the States not mentioned may amount to from 50 to 100. The numbers of members, if taken at the minimum, may be fairly calculated at 80,000 able-bodied men, and there are not fewer than 12,000 voters in the Association. The funds, donations, extra-contributions, and a rigid economy in 1839, 1840, and part of 1841, had so much increased as to save above 300,000 dollars as a reserve. We will take another occasion to expose the plan and policy of the Association, as also its foreign connections. We will trace, too, the career of its principal upon the continent of Europe, its connection with American diplomats, and so forth. We are sorry that we must observe that the members of the Association do not exclusively belong to a party; it includes governors, officers, clergymen, lawyers, farmers, mechanics, soldiers, in fact, every class, and every body.

Sir G. Arthur, late Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada, was the first who succeeded in discovering the existence of this band, and it was to his judicious measures that the very formidable plan which was to have been carried into effect in the fall of 1838 was defeated. But disunion among Unionists more than British bravery or foresight, was the real cause of its proving abortive. The reader must know, that the only point on which all the branches of this Association agree, is hatred to Great Britain. Apart from this, no strong bond exists among them. The greater portion of the Canadian Hunters agree only with the Americans as far as hostility to England is concerned. They wish to throw off English supremacy, without having any desire to become Americans.

Papineau, Morin, Vigors, are the leaders of this party, and it includes nearly the whole of the Lower Canada sections, with the exception of the Coates and Nelson's parties, which are for an union with the United States, and have most partisans in the districts of Montreal and on the border of the river Richelieu. Again, among the Americans there exists a difference of opinion as far as an union is concerned. They all want the free navigation of the St. Lawrence and of the St. John, the north-west territory, and the whole of the country to the west of the Rocky Mountains, but they are not prepared to say that a northern set-off for Texas will not be necessary. Why, then, not take Texas into the Union? say the southern lodges.

At the elections, the watch-word is given from the chief, and it is here that this association threatens to become most mischievous and dangerous, as it is most likely they will succeed in getting the ascendancy in all the eastern and middle States. Regarding this body only in a military point of view, one is struck at the first moment by their large number; but yet it would be a very bad calculation to suppose that their physical strength corresponds to their numbers. The writer is of opinion, that with utmost exertion the association could not at any single point concentrate 2,000 men; and that it can be only imposing as auxiliary to some well-promoted movement. Its other weakness consists in a great want of military leaders, or rather of military talents; this want was felt at the beginning, and consequently one of the first thoughts of the leaders was to engage foreigners, officers of experience. A Colonel St. Martin was the first that made his appearance upon the frontier. He was a man somewhat advanced in life, and was reported to have been a Colonel in the French Guard; but he quarrelled soon with Dr. Nelson, the younger, and disappeared as he came. He never took any remuneration; but, on the contrary, advanced something to the military funds of the patriots. Some Poles of an inferior rank were also engaged, but they were only birds of passage; till, in the middle of the summer of 1839, the plan was formed to make a determined and unflinching effort upon the whole frontier. Rendezvous for foreigners were opened in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, etc. The Polish Colonel Van Sault (a Finlander by birth, the son of Colonel R.) was to direct, as chief of the staff, the operations in Upper Canada; whilst, for Lower Canada, the French Canadians insisted on having only French officers, and at last they appointed M. Charles Hindenlang, a French officer, one of their brigadiers. The command in chief of all forces, patriots, and hunters, was to be assumed by Doctor Nelson; nominally, but in reality by a Polish or Hungarian officer of some talent and ability. Jealousy, dissension, and treason, or rather embroilment by some leading members, rendered the whole proceedings farcical.

Since the failure of the movement in 1839, the Council of the Hunters came to the decision of waiting for occasions, and of making as many as they could, in order to acquire a better organization, and to be prepared for any event. They resolved to extend and increase the number of lodges, and to organize intercourse and political connections in Europe. Papineau and Le Veque being at Paris, it was proposed to appoint them plenipotentiaries; and, in fact, Papineau was even received by Marshal Soult in private audience; but M. Papineau spoiled the whole by speaking of the old sword, of liberty, constitution, democracy, &c., instead of appealing only to "French connections," and "submission to French will," and "loyalty to Louis Philippe." He was very much blamed for being such a bad diplomatist. Whether he was cashiered, or yet keeps his place, we are not in a position to ascertain. To England an Irishman and a Scotchman were sent, Mr. E. and Mr. S., to see what could be done with the Chartists. We have heard a great deal about the report of these two gentlemen, which we cannot repeat, as we have no proof in our hands, and to reveal only part of the truth would commit some persons very deeply. It was at their suggestion that subscriptions to the Irish repeal fund were begun in America, which, of course, will increase considerably if the Council of the Hunters should approve of that peaceable mode of sympathizing agitation. The question has very often been asked, is it true that Russia or any other power encouraged the Canadian rebels and American sympathizers. To give a positive answer would be rather a difficult task; but one thing we know, that $50,000 dollars, 5,000 rifles, some cannon and a large amount of ammunition and provisions, were offered through a foreign agent, by two foreign mercantile houses in New York or Philadelphia. This we know to be a fact. We could tell something more on this point, but as Mr. Majrty's Government did not think fit to divulge any facts, so it is our duty not to do so. This last year the lodges were uncommonly active. Two Plenipotentiaries of the highest rank in the class were sent to Europe, particularly to engage professional military men and officers of talent and experience. One entered on his mission at Bremen, in Germany, but, after making several arrangements, even packing up things and freighting a ship, his funds failed; that is to say, the person to whom they were entrusted converted them to his own use; and as the thing was not cautiously arranged that no evidence could be procured by "the bloody English," the treasurer could of course laugh in the face of his Excellency the Plenipotentiary. However, the Bremen authorities began to suspect something wrong, and requested his Excellency to leave the territory of the republic. He remained some time in Münster, in Westphalia, but, as we hear, he obtained few recruits, and fewer friends. The last we heard of him was at Antwerp and Rotterdam, where he was scheming on paper the freight of a ship for emigrants to be carried to the state of Maine, on credit of course.

We are often asked who is the Grand Sasamen—who the Grand Eagles? It is really impossible to state this positively, but we may hazard an opinion that the actual chairman of the Committee of Foreign Affairs of Congress (Caleb Cushing), knows something about the matter. In one of his last lectures at Springfield, Massachusetts, he states that it is the duty of every American to co-operate for the expulsion of British influence and authority from that continent. His Smith, of St. Albans, M. C. for Vermont; Governor Fairfield, of Maine; Governor Mason, of Michigan; General British Colonel Thomas; Hon. Senator Williams; Lieutenant Governor Smith, of New York; General Clark; Walter Nelson; L. T. Papineau; C. P. Bonaparte; W. L. McKee, and others, are the gentlemen who perhaps could tell the last information as to their respective connections with this Association.

PIRACY.—Every week, and probably every day, although many of the cases do not come to our knowledge, add new outrages to be recorded, committed by pirates in the neighbouring waters, and so daring have they become that the peaceable trader can only with the greatest danger to his life and property venture on the river. This evil is not only growing fearfully in our immediate neighbourhood and that of Hongkong, but is said to extend along the greatest part of the eastern shore of this province, and on the coast of Fukien. We are obliged to a friend for the following communication.

"On Thursday last the 24th inst., a diabolical act of piracy was committed upon a China boat proceeding from the neighbourhood of Whampoa with a cargo of tea for Hongkong.

"Somewhere near the entrance of the Capingmoon channel, a party of Pirates fired into the boat, and the China-man in charge was shot in both legs, the ball passing through both ankle joints, shattering the limbs in pieces, and nearly severing them from the body.

"The unfortunate sufferer was brought to Macao yesterday morning, and applied for admission to the British Hospital, which was readily granted. It was found necessary to amputate both legs, as the only chance of saving life, and the operation was accordingly performed by Doctor Young. The poor man bore it with remarkable fortitude, but we regret to say that he sunk shortly after, the shock occasioned by such a severe operation being greater than his strength could bear.

As matters at present stand, the Chinese authorities can do nothing to suppress piracy in waters where their own flag dare not appear, and it therefore the more becomes the duty of the British naval force to actively oppose the growth of the evil, and this we suppose might in some measure be effected, if some of the smaller vessels of the Hongkong squadron were stationed at different parts of the estuary of this river; f. l. at Tungko or Capingmoon, both of which having necessarily to be passed by traders bound for Hongkong, are naturally places where pirates would station themselves as most likely to fall in with their prey. We stated last week the suspicions generally entertained of some parties at Hongkong being interested in these piracies, and the difficulty the authorities might encounter, from an extensive combination of the rogues, to bring them to justice. We hope however that they will succeed by activity to bring these practices to light and the offenders to condign punishment; for unless piracy is totally crushed, the prosperity of the settlement at Hongkong must materially suffer. We are glad to learn however, that one attempt has already been made by the naval commander against the pirates, although we regret to say without the desired result. A few days since, intelligence of a nest of pirates on the island of Chaneuchek (Water Island) having been received, the Arcturion steamer was despatched to the spot, but unfortunately the pirates had time to escape in their boats, with the exception of one person who was shot. In the hope of obtaining the surrender of some of them hereafter, and information about them, some of the head-men of the village near which the pirates were have been taken prisoners.

The U. S. Frigate Constitution, Commodore Kearny, and Sloop Boston, Commander Long, have during the week arrived here from Singapore and Cochinchina.

Letsers from Canton mention that Col. de Sanguigny, French Commercial Agent, and Mr. Cheslaye, French Vice Consul, had an interview with Yeh-sher, and Kshang, the Governor of Canton, at the country-house of Yung, the son of the late Hongkong merchant of that name. We have not heard what the object of the conference may have been, but if our information, that it took place at all, be correct, it is but another instance that great changes have been wrought during the last three years, and that the exultation of the great Chinese officers is giving way to the pressure from without. Although at the time contradicted, it is said that the commander of the French Frigate Epique, Capt. Cœlle, whilst in Canton, likewise had an interview with the same high officers; if so, the matter was managed by the Chinese with great secrecy. Both the American and French flags have lately been hoisted before the respective factories at Canton.

We copy below a Circular and Notification issued on Wednesday last. The Circular informs the British community that the Hongkong authorities object in their late visit to Macao was to ascertain whether the Chinese would be permitted to rebuild the fortifications at the Bogue; and that through a friend they have been informed by H. M. Plenipotentiary that such could not be permitted and that any attempt at repairing or rebuilding the Bogue forts or of erecting any fortifications whatever below Whampoa would cause immediate hostilities. The authorities at Canton are said to have received from Peking the most positive orders for the rebuilding of the forts, and it is said in compliance with them have already prepared a quantity of materials; but it can hardly be supposed that they will be foolish enough to attempt the work, under the threat which, in an unofficial manner, it is true, has been held out to them. One small vessel of war at the Bogue would be quite sufficient to keep the place clear of workmen. It is however a matter of surprise to us that the conditions of the treaty, viz that, pending the settlement with the Imperial Court, the fortifications on the river at and near Canton should not be repaired, nor new ones erected, should have been violated by the Chinese, as we have stated on many former occasions, and that the Circular from H. M. Plenipotentiary should apparently acknowledge, by merely insisting on no repairs or new fortifications being made below Whampoa, the rights of the Chinese, and they certainly have needed of it, to strengthen their defences of the City of Canton, by an almost continuous line of fortifications from Whampoa to the Macao passage, which certainly appears to be an infringement of the treaty.

The American Ship Admiral left Liverpool on the 26th November, and arrived here on the 24th of this month, having made a remarkably fine passage for this season of the year, and bringing dates to within a week nearly of those by the Decatur overland mail. But few papers and letters were received by her, the overland route being now generally performed; many vessels that left England a month and more before the Admiral have not yet arrived.

Hitherto the different barracks at Hongkong have not been enclosed, and the privates in consequence were able to leave them whenever they chose and wander about. The consequence was, we ascertained, that lately, a high officer taking a walk late at night, was assaulted (with greatly abusive language) by a drunken soldier, and proper enclosures are to be immediately built.

From Canton we hear nothing new; trade very languid, and prices of tea receding.

We have just received the second number of the "Friend of China" from Hongkong, and must say that from that paper said last week concerning piracy, we little expected to find it contain an attack on ourselves for having stated that suspicious of affording his protection to pirates, attached to a well known Chinese at Hongkong. We are said to have made our statement at the instigation of a clique inimical to Hongkong; we are not aware that we have ever written anything in a hostile spirit against the new settlement nor do we think that because there exist people who do not think that place a paradise, and who freely express their opinions on the subject, they ought therefore to be denominated a clique inimical to the interests of Hongkong. It is perfectly well known to every impartial person who has visited the island, that it is by no means the most desirable spot that could be chosen; the ground is nothing but a jumble of steep hills overtopping each other, and a very few valleys, with numerous ravines. The spot on which the town is building is sheltered from all southerly winds by the hills behind, and those from the north alone are allowed to add cold to the sufficiently cool winter temperature. The distance from one part of the town to the other will probably considerably exceed four miles, and no sufficient experience has yet been gained whether the climate will be favorable to the great exposure necessary for moving about. The heat in summer must be very great; and it will be a long while before any plantation near the town will give sufficient shade; for the island of Hongkong is now as bare of trees as Doctor Johnson represented Scotland to be. The building on Hongkong in most situations will be extremely expensive; for those who have a piece of level ground, must secure a foundation at great depth through quicksand; and others more numerous, must level hills, and divert mountain streams before the cornerstones of their future dwellings can be laid. That an enormous expenditure may and will overcome many of these disadvantages, we doubt not, but we think it being partial overmuch to attribute to enmity as the Friend of China does, their due appreciation. Without its splendid harbour, there are few places that would not be considered preferable to Hongkong as a place of residence, and we are obliged to say this at the risk of being considered by our contemporaries as one of a clique which has opposed that settlement from its first foundation merely because we look at it with an impartial eye, and discover many defects, which he wishes not to see the light. In justification to those who are not yet willing to lay out money in building, it must also be kept in mind that the intentions of the home government with regard to the island, are yet unknown. More notorious a not in one! The "Friend" has instituted many an inquiry, and fully believes "that the Chinaman in question is wholly innocent of any connexion or correspondence with the pirates." What sort of enquiries could possibly establish such a fact it is somewhat difficult to imagine; the suspicion against him will not thereby be shaken, nor can the circumstance of his mother's having been robbed, even if well authenticated, be considered as a good defence, it having never been supposed by any one that the individual in question exercised influence over all the rogues prowling about in the neighboring waters. This person derives a great portion of his wealth from two most disreputable establishments; this may we allow, have caused people to think worse of him than he deserves, but still we think that a mere denial of accusations which are daily brought forward against him by his countrymen is hardly sufficient to eradicate all suspicion, and we may probably be able soon to recur to this subject, with more circumstantial statements.

We observe that the Hongkong Gazette has ceased to exist, and that public Orders and Notifications appearing in the Friend of China are to be considered official. The same paper also states that no person holding office under government is engaged in its editorship.

We were nearly correct when estimating after our visit to Hongkong, the amount of the population there at not much more than one half of the 16000 at which it had been previously put down at a guess; for we find in a census published by the Friend of China that it amounts to 8,180, and that the whole number of inhabitants of the island is put down at 19,361. Why therefore the same paper should think that the opinions of old residents on this point, erroneous as they are proved to be, should carry greater weight than those of a traveller who is proved to have been right, we do not well understand.

Government House, Hongkong.

23d March, 1842.

The annexed Notification, which will be published in the next number of the Hongkong Gazette is now published for general information and guidance.

NOTIFICATION.

His Excellency, Sir Henry Pottinger, Bart., Her Britannic Majesty's Plenipotentiary &c. &c. deems it expedient to intimate to all persons interested in the subject, that it is his intention to appoint very shortly a Committee consisting of not less than three members, to investigate any claims that may yet be pending regarding allotted locations of ground of whatever description, and to finally define and mark off the limits of all locations that have yet been sold or granted on any other terms.

The Committee will likewise definitively fix the direction, breadth &c. &c. of the "Queen's" and all other existing public roads within the settlement, and will be empowered to order the immediate removal of any encroachment that may be found to have been unauthorizedly made upon them, the expense of such removal being chargeable to the individuals to whom the locations in which they have been made belong.

The Committee will farther be instructed to turn its attention to the examination of the best points for laying down new lines of Roads, beyond those that have already been marked off, with a view of providing locations, to meet the demands for them that may be expected from the rapidly increasing population of the Colony, both European and Native; and any suggestions that individuals may wish to offer on this part of the Committee's proceedings, will receive from it the fullest consideration; but it is at the same time expressly notified, that no purchases, or renting of ground from the Natives formerly, or now, in possession, will be recognized or confirmed, unless the previous sanction of the constituted authorities shall have been obtained, it being the basis of the footing on which the Island of Hongkong has been taken possession of, and is to be held pending the Queen's Royal and Gracious commands, that the proprietary of the soil is vested in, and appertains solely to, the Crown. On the same principle, the reclaiming of land beyond high water mark must be deemed an infringement on the Royalties of Her Majesty, and is therefore positively prohibited by any private persons. God save the Queen of England.

Dated at Hongkong Government House, this 23d day of March, 1842.

HENRY POTTINGER.

H. M.'s Plenipotentiary

Government House, Hongkong.

23d March, 1842.

Gentlemen.—You are aware that some of the Hongmerchants lately paid a visit to Macao, and it is probably by this time known to most of you that the object of that visit was to find out whether the Provincial Government of Canton would be allowed to rebuild the Bogue and other dismantled forts, or to erect new ones, on this side of the Whampoa anchorage.

Although I of course declined having any sort of intercourse with the Hongmerchants, I took advantage of the kindness of a friend to let these individuals know in distinct terms that orders had been long issued to prevent the repair of the old, or the erection of any new forts lower down than Whampoa, and that the consequence of any attempt of the sort would be the renewal of hostilities in the Canton river, the stoppage of trade, and consequent distress to the Province and City.

I trust this warning will have the desired effect, and that matters will be allowed to go on in their present tranquil course; but I nevertheless think it my duty to acquaint you with what has passed, as well as with my resolution, which has been fully approved and confirmed by the experienced judgment of the Senior officer of H. M.'s Navy in the Canton River; and in doing so I would request you in dividually and collectively to give me the earliest possible notice of any collecting of material, assembling of workmen, or other apparently defensive (though in reality offensive) preparations that yourselves or your agents may perceive on the river below Whampoa. It is superfluous for me to observe that the safety of the shipping and their crews at that anchorage imperatively demand every precaution and vigilance, and I feel assured you will cheerfully aid me in the manner I have pointed out.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient and faithful servant.

MEXICO.

The Bark Andhuas, from Vera Cruz, brings highly important news from Mexico. The intestine commotions of that beautiful but ill-governed country, have subsided, and peace is for the present re-established, by the return of Santa Anna to power, and a pacification and indemnity with regard to the past. An armistice of two days was agreed to on the 17th September, between Santa Anna and Bustamante, with a view to the arrangements for putting an end to the war, and preliminaries were speedily settled. On the 28th, a communication was made by Santa Anna to the supreme government, consisting of bases for a re-organization thereof, one clause of which was to the effect that a Junta composed of two deputies from each department be appointed, by Santa Anna, to designate in whom shall be vested the Executive power provisionally.
On the 5th October, Santa Anna addressed Bustamante in order to bring about a final interview, this was acceded to by the rival commander, and on the following day two commissioners on each side met, midway between the two camps, when the articles subjoined were agreed to. The commissioner on the part of Santa Anna were Generals Jose Maria Tornel and Jose Ignacio Gutierrez, and, on that of Bustamante, Generals Valentin Canalisio, and Benito Quijano.

Art. 1. From this moment are established the intimate and cordial relations which ought to exist between all the members of the great Mexican family; and henceforth, whether citizens or soldiers, they shall not be molested for their opinions which have been expressed either by word or by deed; and the Generals in chief and the belligerent forces pledge themselves that this amnesty shall be perpetual and sincere.

Art. 2. The acts of the government of His Ex.
Gen. D. Anastasio Bustamante, and also of the provisional government which succeeds him, since the 1st of last August, of whatever nature they may be, shall be submitted to the approval of the first Constitutional Congress; and to the same body shall be submitted the acts of the provisional Executive who is installed according to the bases adopted by the army of operations under command of his Ex. D.
Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna.

(Article 3rd pledges the two commanders in chief to use their influence with the new government which may be established, in behalf of the officers of the two armies respectively.)

Art. 4. On the ratification of the present Convention by their Excellencies the Generals in Chief of the belligerent forces, those posted at Guadalupe shall be placed under the orders of His Excellency General D. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, who shall award to them the consideration merited by the soldiers of this part of the army, who have so much contributed to achieve the independence of the country, and whose energy and intrepidity will be of service in any foreign war.

Art. 5. The present Convention shall be ratified in three hours after it is signed by the Commissioners of each party. Presa de la Estanzuela, Oct.
6, 1841, half past 9 o'clock. P. M.
VALENTIN CANALISIO, BENITO QUIJANO
JOSE MARIA TORNEL, JOSE IGNACIO GUTIERREZ,

This convention is ratified, A. L. DE SANTA ANNA.
This convention is ratified, ANASTASIO BUSTAMANTE.
In appointing the representatives of departments, according to the above, Santa Anna would seem to exhibit his determination to hold on to Texas, for he nominated two for that section. Probably all the members so nominated were aware of his intention, for they were near at hand, and commenced their functions on the 9th Oct., by appointing their Appointer as Provisional President of the Mexican Republic. The army of Santa Anna entered the capital on the 7th October, and the flag of the new President now waves throughout Mexico.

It is stated that commerce is once more beginning to flourish there, and that commodities to a considerable amount are finding their way into the interior. The timid and perhaps the prudent, however, do not speculate much; for the new President of Mexico has not yet declared his intentions. The Texan campaign must undoubtedly rankle in his mind, but as for his chance of recovering that country, it would be the height of absurdity even to dream of it. It may be a sore place in his mind, connected as it must be with humiliating reminis-cences, but the sooner he shall bid adieu to all the delusive hope of re-subjugating Texas, why—the better for his peace. The thing is too absurd to be thought of seriously. —New York Albion, 20th Nov.

AMERICAN TEA MARKET.

Thursdays, November, 11.
The principal feature in the markets to-day was the TEA sale, comprising the cargo of the Huntress. In the produce markets we remark no change. ASHES—We have heard of no transactions since our last, in either description. COTTON—The sales yesterday amounted to about 400 bales. FLOUR—The market is tending upward. There is more doing to-day, and more buyers than sellers of canal at $6.50.

Terms, satisfactory notes at four months, payable in this city.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—I have to request that you will publish, for the information of whom it may concern, the accompanying copy of a letter from Commodore L.
Kearney.

Your Obedient Servant,

W. DELANO JR.

Vice Consul of the United States of America.

Macao, 1st April, 1842.

Copy,

U. S. Ship Constellation,
Macao Roads, 31st March 1842.

Sir,—The Hongkong Gazette of the 24th inst.
contains a shipping report in which is the name of an American vessel engaged in carrying Opium,— therefore I beg you will cause to be made known with equal publicity, and also to the Chinese authorities by the translation of the same, that the Government of the United States does not sanction
"the smuggling of Opium" on this coast under the American Flag in violation of the Laws of China.

Difficulties arising therefrom in respect to the seizure of any vessel by the Chinese, the claimants certainly will not under my instructions find support, or any interposition on my part after the publication of this notice.

I am very respectfully,

Your obdt. servant,

(Signed) L. KEARNEY,

Commanding the U. S. East India Squadron.

TO THE UNITED STATES CONSUL OR THE VICE CONSUL AT CANTON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—I do not remember lately to have seen any allusion either in the English or China papers, to the intended Horsburgh Memorial, the subscriptions for which in this country have been paid. I think, upwards of five years since, the meeting at which they were subscribed, having been held in December, 1836. I have heard that the Committee here was in correspondence with that of London instituted for the same purpose, but although so long a time has now elapsed, nothing seems yet to be decided on. It was in London proposed to erect a tablet to his memory in Saint Paul's Cathedral, and this intention met, I believe, with general applause; but its execution would require but a small portion of the sum collected for the Horsburgh Memorial, and it was the general wish here I think, that as the best way to honor his memory, a lighthouse should be erected in some situation, where the China trade more particularly would derive advantage from it. I have heard nautical men say that a lighthouse on one of the islands near Hongkong might become the means of saving many a ship.
However this be, it were well that something were done, and an opportunity would now offer, as I observe that all the members of the Committee have left, or are about leaving China in a few days, most of them being now in, or proceeding to, England, where by personal conference with the London Committee, the manner of doing honor to the memory of Horsburgh may more easily be decided on.

HORSBURGH MEMORIAL.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 2nd April, 1842.

IMPORTANT FROM NINGPO.

By the arrival of the Royal Exchange, from Chusan the 15th of last month most important and as to the result, most gratifying intelligence has been received. It appears that Sir Hugh Gough had been for some time in possession of intelligence that the Chinese were concentrating forces in the neighbourhood, in order to make a simultaneous attack on the British forces at Ningpo, Chinhae and Tinghae (Chusan), and everything to give them a warm reception was therefore prepared.

The morning of the 10th March was chosen by the Chinese, and it is supposed that some 12 or 14,000 men entered the city of Ningpo by getting over the walls at different points, nor were any efforts made on the part of Sir Hugh to drive them back, until the greater number had collected in a square or open market place, whence they were driven back immediately by the British troops. The Chinese seem not to have anticipated that the English should have been so well prepared for them, and very soon fled in the greatest disorder, leaving the town behind them, but not till after a great number had bit the dust; the guns, drawn by ponies trained for that purpose, being brought to bear upon the flying masses. About 250 of their dead were on the next morning found in the streets. On the same night Chinhae was likewise attacked, but the guards at the gates having been doubled, under the orders of Colonel Schoedde, they were repulsed with great loss. No attack on Chusan has taken place, although there is no doubt it was intended, for the Chinese had collected a great number of men on the small island of Taysam near Chusan, which the Steamer Nemesis went to reconnoitre. The boat she sent on shore, when pulling up a creek was fired on, when the Nemesis sent her crew on shore, killing many of the enemy, and destroyed about 30 junks, no doubt intended for the conveyance of the troops to Tinghae. It is most gratifying that no loss whatever was suffered on our side, although the number of killed and wounded among the Chinese must have been immense. Immediately after the flight of the Chinese from Ningpo, the 49th Regiment was sent in pursuit and had not on the 12th (the latest date from Ningpo) returned. Not far from Ningpo the Chinese had also thrown up a small battery from which they fired at the shipping, but it was soon silenced by the fire of H. M. S. Modeste.

It has been observed as a singular circumstance that four or five dollars were found in the pockets of every one of the Chinese soldiers found dead, and it is supposed that they must have been given them to stimulate their valour in the coming fight, and it is indeed likely that without such a bonus they had refused to go out at all, as they did on a former occasion at the Bogue, where they demanded two dollars per man, and where, to satisfy them, the old Admiral was obliged to pawn his furniture and even wardrobe. From the loss the Chinese have sustained in this recent fight, we suppose it will be some time ere their officers can again collect a sufficient number of men brave enough to venture on other trials, and the Emperor will be much disappointed in again making the experience that he has not wherewithal to carry his frequent threats of total extermination into effect. We have, after writing the above account, received Sir Henry Pottinger's Circular, giving most interesting details of these occurrences, which will be found below.

THE ENGLISH CHURCH AT HONGKONG.—We are glad to learn that a Committee at the head of which is the Revd. Mr. Cooper, Chaplain of H. M. S. Blenheim has been formed, under the auspices of Sir Henry Pottinger, for the collection of funds for the building of an English Church at Hongkong, and that Sir Henry undertakes on the part of Her Majesty's Government to come forward with a sum equal to the total amount that may be contributed by individuals in the event of Hongkong becoming a permanent settlement. H. E. and Sir Thomas Herbert already stand with considerable amounts upon the subscription list, and we doubt not that the call of the committee will be liberally responded to. The site selected by Government for the erection of a Church is near the Post Office and will therefore probably be as central as possible.

We recommend the letter of "One of the Subscribers to Horsburgh's Memorial" to the attention of our readers, and that of the Committee. It is desirable that something should be determined on, and as most of the members are now in England or on their way there, it is to be hoped that arrangements with the London Committee will soon be made, and that the wishes of the Chinese foreign Community for the erection of a lighthouse, in preference to any other testimonial, may not be lost sight of.

Our readers will find in a foregoing column a letter from Commodore Kearney to Mr. Delano, American Vice Consul, declaring that the protection of the American flag will not be afforded to American vessels, should they suffer losses from the Chinese when engaged in the Opium-trade on the coast of China.

LOSS OF THE "CONSERVATIVE" WHALER

WRECKED 8th Jan'y., 1842.—On Tanjoing reef, Island of Bally, the British whaling Barque Conservative of London, P. Christall Master; she struck at 3 p.m. at daylight on the 8th; the Ballyneese boarded her and literally drove the crew from the ship, robbing and plundering everything on board before Mr. Lange, of the firm of Messrs John Burd & Co., arrived on the spot. However through that Gentleman's influence, the wreck has since been ransomed and delivered over to the Captain and crew, who together with the fore-said Gentleman are saving most of the oil, sails, store, &c. &c.

The Friend of China in last week's number speculates on the probability of Taoukwang, on the English occupying Peking, committing suicide by means of his garter or girdle. We believe a bowstring to be more orthodox for a Tartar on such occasions, and would respectfully suggest that a place should be given to this instrument of self-destruction in our cotemporary's next philanthropical speculations. "Vainly," we quote his words "have we essayed to solve this momentous and all engrossing question, but the study of the past affords no clue by which we can speculate on the future."

The Emperor Taoukwang having lately become one of our subscribers, we hope that a few remarks on a, to him, so very interesting subject, may not be deemed out of place, the more so as precedent may possibly influence his modus operandi. We have been kindly permitted to search the archives, and found that of a long line of Emperors numbering upwards of 850 within the last 3500 years, only five committed suicide, whilst a much greater number suffered themselves to be deposed, assassinated or executed. It would therefore seem that according to precedent, the suicide of Taoukwang under misfortune is not de rigueur, as our cotemporary of Hongkong seems to think, but would greatly depend upon the personal predilections of that prince. It is now about 3000 years since the first of the five princes above mentioned, Chow, leaped into the flames he had kindled, and his example has since been imitated by a king of Assyria, of whom our readers may have learnt the tragical fate in a play: The second Emperor, Urkshewangse stabbed himself to prevent the executioner, about 2000 years ago. The third, Lewchin, no longer able to oppose the good fortune of a rival, likewise stabbed himself in the year 284 A. D., and nearly 700 years after him the unfortunate Minte burnt himself and all his family. The fifth and last who took away his own life was Kwatsung, the last of the Ming; it is only 200 years since he made room for his successor, the ancestor of the now reigning monarch, by strangling himself with his girdle, and possibly our cotemporary had his tragical fate in view when he prophesies that Taoukwang will do the same (waving however between girdle and garter), but he apparently forgets that Kwatsung was a Chinese, and his last act would be no precedent for a Mantchoo or Tartar, of whom history unfortunately as yet has to record no such acts of desperation. We may here also mention that a good many emperors poisoned themselves by drinking elixir of life, but they can hardly be included in our above list, seeing that their deaths were not voluntary. The result of our researches has therefore been—first, that a Chinese monarch is not obliged to kill himself when matters take a wrong turn; and second, that should he notwithstanding be thereto inclined, he is not restricted to the use of his girdle or garter, as the Friend of China erroneously supposes. Taoukwang may shoot, stab, poison, drown, burn, hang or strangle himself with girdle, garter, or bowstring, of which catastrophe, having now correspondents (with one unimportant exception) in all parts of the empire, we hope to lay in good time an account before our readers; although there certainly is some probability that the Emperor may prefer to die quietly in his bed: this we recommend him to attempt doing, and "never say die!"

CIRCULAR.

TO HER BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S SUBJECTS IN CHINA.

Her Britannic Majesty's Plenipotentiary in China has great pleasure in announcing to Her Majesty's subjects the complete repulse of two bodies of Chinese Troops which attacked the British positions at Ningpo and Chinhae at daylight on the morning of the 10th of last month.

During the whole of February, almost daily intelligence reached the Head Quarters of Her Majesty's Forces showing that the Chinese High Authorities contemplated some active operations, but they were from time to time deferred on such frivolous pretences, that it appears their Excellencies the Naval and Military Commanders-in-Chief had gone over to Chusan to make arrangements at that place preparatory to a forward movement of a position at least of Her Majesty's combined forces.

In this state matters remained until the date and hour above mentioned, when a considerable body of Chinese, estimated at from 10 to 12,000 men, advanced upon the South and West gates of Ningpo, got over the walls and penetrated to the market place in the centre of the City, where they were met by our troops and instantly driven back with great loss; in fact, it would seem that the moment the Chinese troops found themselves so warmly received, their sole object was to get out of the City as fast as possible, and in their retreat to the South gate, the field guns drawn by ponies came up and opened on a dense mass with grape and canister, at a distance less than 100 yards. Above 250 dead bodies were found inside the walls, and when the accounts came away, Her Majesty's 49th Regiment had not returned from the pursuit of the discomfited and flying enemy.

Whilst these operations were progressing on shore, a number of Fire Boats (Sampans) lashed together with chains, were floated down the river, and were towed into the mud by the boats of the Sesostris Steamer. In the meantime a gun was brought down a lane in the eastern suburb (across the River) and as the inhabitants had been previously warned that any such attempt would bring chastisement upon them, Her Majesty's ship Modeste opened her guns, and did great execution in that quarter.

The attack on Chinhae was much more feeble. The enemy advanced to the North Gate, where they were driven off by the Guard, and followed by one Company (afterwards reinforced by three others) of Her Majesty's 55th Regiment, who killed 30 men and two mandarins in the pursuit.

Simultaneously with the attack on the city of Chinhae, fire sampans chained together were set adrift to burn the shipping at that anchorage, but they all went on shore above the ships of war and merchant vessels and did no sort of harm.

Shortly before these repulses occurred, the Nemesis steamer was sent from Chusan to reconnoitre the Island of Talsam, where it was understood Chinese troops were collecting with the purpose of attacking Her Majesty's forces at Tinghae. The Steamer sent her boats into a creek where they were fired on, and in consequence Commander Collinson and Lieut. Hall landed the Steamer's ship's company, when the Chinese fled with the loss of about thirty killed and a number wounded. The Steamer's boats then set fire to a number of junks which had also fired on her, and returned to Chinhae.

Their Excellencies the Naval and Military Commanders in Chief had gone back to Ningpo, and proposed to follow up the repulse the enemy had experienced, by active measures.

It affords Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary the highest satisfaction to close the Circular by stating that in these attempts of the enemy, Her Majesty's combined force had not lost a man.

The latest intelligence from the Head Quarters of the Chinese Army south of the Hangchow River speak of the troops being in almost a state of insubordination, and in want of supplies etc.

The Emperor had ordered, that the provinces which are the seat of the war, should bear the expenses of it, and as the inhabitants seem resolved to make no further sacrifices, there appears every probability of the army dissolving itself, and becoming totally disorganised.

God save the Queen.

HENRY POTTINGER.

Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary.

Dated at Macao on the 1st day of April, 1842.

NOTIFICATION.

With reference to the Notification dated on the 2nd instant the following gentlemen are appointed a Committee to carry into effect the objects therein described.

With the sanction of Ma- } Major Malcolm, Capt. jor Gen. Burrell C. B. } Meick, H.M.'s 49th foot Ensign Sargent
R. Wooman Esq.

With the sanction of Capt. } Mr. Pascoe, 2d Master
Sir Thomas Herbert, R.N. } of H.M.'s ship Blenheim.
Capt. Mylius, land officer, will attend the Committee for the purpose of giving effect to its proceedings, by laying down the necessary land-marks, boundaries, roads, &c. &c.

The Committee will report to government any cases in which they are of opinion that the native Chinese should be remunerated for ground which was in their possession previous to the occupation of the Island by Her Majesty's forces; and which may have been appropriated, as well as the amount of remuneration.

The Committee will select the most eligible spots for Public Landing Places; will define the limits of the Cantonments or locations for Officers, near the different barracks; will likewise fix the extent of ground to be reserved for the Naval Depot, and for Dock Yards, including spots for one or more patent slips, which it is understood are likely to be erected by Companies or Individuals.

It being the intention of Government to form a watering place for the shipping hereafter, the Committee will select the most eligible spot with a running stream of good water for that purpose.

Dated at Hongkong Government House this 29th day of March, 1849.

HENRY POTTINGER.
Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary.

From the Friend of China, 24th March.

The following amended Regulations for the Shipping in the Port of Hongkong, and Tientsin (or Chusan), are promulgated for general information and guidance, under the authority of His Excellency Sir Henry Pottinger, Bart, Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, and Chief Superintendent of Trade, in China.

J. ROBT. MORRISON.
Acting Secretary and Treasurer.
Hongkong, 18th, March, 1842.

REGULATIONS.

Art. I.—Every master or other person in charge of any merchant vessel, arriving at either of the said Ports, is to take up the berth pointed out by the Harbour Master, and not to remove from it without his permission, under a penalty of $100: which penalty is to be recovered in the manner hereinafter set forth.

Art. II.—Every master or other person in charge of any merchant vessel, lying within either of the said Ports, shall immediately remove such vessel to any new berth pointed out by the Harbour Master, under a fine of $20 for every hour that the vessel shall remain in her old berth, after a written notice to quit, signed by the Harbour Master, shall have been delivered on board of her.

Art. III.—All masters or other persons in charge of vessels are immediately to strike their topgallant yards and masts; and to have jib and spanker booms rigged close in, when called upon to do so; and are, generally, to follow such directions as the state of the weather, the crowded condition of the Port, or other circumstances, may render necessary or expedient in the judgment of the Harbour Master, with a view to the safety of the whole shipping; and any master, or other persons in charge of vessels disobeying or neglecting this Regulation will subject themselves to a fine not exceeding $200, exclusive of payment of all expenses that may be incurred by reason of their said vessels breaking adrift and occasioning damage, subsequent to the precautionary orders of the Harbour Master being delivered on board.

Art. IV.—Transports entitled to carry Passengers will be always berthed by their own agent; and the Harbour Master will make application to the Senior Naval Officer on the spot, respecting any movement connected with such transport that he may judge necessary for the general safety of the shipping in either of the said Ports.

Art. V.—All Seamen permitted to land from Transports or other merchant ships or vessels, on liberty, are to be furnished with Tickets of Leave, from the master or person in charge of the vessel to which such seamen may belong; but this regulation is not to be considered applicable to men who may come on shore, for a short time, on duty or business.

Art. VI.—All Mails, Packets, Letters, &c. to the address of the Post Master, or other Public Functionaries, are to be delivered to the Harbour Master immediately on the arrival of vessels in either of the said Ports.

Art. VII.—All masters or other persons in charge of vessels about to proceed to sea are to give notice thereof to the Harbour Master at least 24 hours before the time of intended departure; and it is hereby notified that no vessel will be allowed to depart, the master or other persons in charge of which shall not have previously paid any fines or expenses, awarded or incurred for breaches of these regulations.

Art. VIII.—It being obviously necessary, that all vessels should be furnished with some sort of Port Clearance, or certificate of their being allowed to proceed on their intended voyages from the said Ports of Hongkong and Tientsin (Chusan), to obviate the risk of their being detained at sea, on account of informality, by any of Her Majesty's Ships which they may fall in with, it is further notified, that the Harbour Masters of the said Ports will henceforward furnish to all ships such Port Clearances, or certificates, agreeable to a form to be deposited in their offices, and will likewise attest their manifests (duplicates whereof are to be left with the said Harbour Masters) and every vessel neglecting to obtain these Papers previous to her departure will do so at her own risk of being seized and detained.

Art. IX.—All Passage Boats, Lorchas, or other small vessels, plying between Hongkong and Macao or Canton, are required to make known their intended departure two hours before they start, by hoisting a Blue Peter.

Art. X.—Masters or other persons in charge of vessels, Boats, &c., will be expected to conform to all ordinary Port Regulations, in addition to those herein specified: and they are warned particularly not to throw overboard any stone or other ballast.

Art. XI.—All persons are required to take notice, that the authority of the Harbour Masters extends to the preservation of order at the several landing places in the Harbour, as well as to the regulation, in concert with the Chief Magistrate at Hongkong, and the Military Magistrate at Tientsin, of all native boats that ply for hire; and any complaints against such Boats are to be laid in the first instance before the said Harbour Masters.

All Fines for breaches of these Regulations will be proceeded for before the Chief Magistrate at Hongkong and the Military Magistrate at Tientsin, who are hereby authorized, at the written request and complaint of the Harbour Masters to summon the parties charged, and thereupon to make summary decision; and all Fines that may be recovered will go to the use of Her Majesty the Queen.

By order, J. ROBT. MORRISON,
Acting Secretary and Treasurer.

Nov. 20.—Prince Albert has acceded to the request of the Gresham Committee that he should lay the first stone of the new Royal Exchange. The ceremony is to take place early in January; and seats have been ordered to accommodate twelve hundred spectators.

A ball composed of some explosive material was thrown into the court of the Horse Guards on the night of the 17th. It fell at the feet of a soldier, and exploded like a cannon. The soldier could see no one in the street that appeared to have thrown it. A smoke ball was thrown into the barracks-yard at Charing Cross the same night, and the consequence is that an opinion exists that some discovery has been made of a chemical preparation that may be carried about the city on undiscovered, and thrown at any building the incendiaries may think proper to set fire to. This opinion is strengthened by the occurrence of so many fires in the docks yards and the great public buildings.

Nov. 25.—A thoroughfare was yesterday effected in the Thames Tunnel, and made use of for the first time by the whole of the directors and some of the original shareholders who had assembled upon the occasion. The shield having been advanced on the shaft at Wapping, a considerable opening was cut in the brickwork, and it was through this the party who had met at Rotherhithe were enabled to pass, thus opening the first subterranean communication between the opposite shores of the river. Upon their arrival at the shaft the party was greeted by the workmen with most hearty cheers. A curious and interesting incident was connected with the event; a few bottles of wine, preserved since the dinner given on the occasion when the foundation stone was laid, with the understanding that it was to be drunk only when it could be carried under the Thames, having been opened and enjoyed by the company in the health of Her Majesty and the infant Prince. It was remarked too, as a singular coincidence, that a seal on one of the corks bore the impress of the Prince of Wales's feathers, a circumstance that cannot cause some merriment. The engineer, Sir J. Brunel, appeared highly gratified at the happy result of all his past anxiety and arduous labour. The shield will continue its advance till it has afforded space for the formation of the remainder of the tunnel, which is expected to be completed in about three weeks.

Nov. 25.—A Brighton paper states, that the Royal George yacht has been recommissioned by Captain Lord Archibald Fitzclarence, and it is said will certainly embark the Queen and Prince Albert, in the early part of next summer, on a trip to Ireland.—The freedom of the city of London was yesterday presented to Sir C. F. Smith, for distinguished services in Syria.—The proceeding of the House of Commons and Co. against Lord Beaconsfield is now understood to be not an action at common law, but in the form of a bill of discovery filed in Chancery, in order to ascertain the degree of knowledge possessed by his Lordship of the origin of the Exchange-bills, and by that house as security, with the view of instituting legal proceedings, on evidence so obtained from Lord Beaconsfield, against other parties. This is no abandonment, as has been interpreted by some, of the claim against the Government for the supposed bill, but in order to show that all possible legal steps have been taken against those even suspected to have guilty knowledge of the original fraud, a bid of the Government.—The London terminus, at the end of Tooley-street, of the telegraphic communication between London and Dover, has just been finished, and the whole line will be opened in a few days. The intermediate stations are situated on elevated spots, at Forest-hill, Parkhurst-rye, Knockholt, Beeches, Worthing, Bole Hill, Chatham, Isle of Sheppey, Whitstable, Herne-bay, Minster, Broadstairs, and Deal. The establishment of such a line of communication will be of the greatest advantage to the mercantile world, as a ship's arrival off the coast can be telegraphed to the owners in five minutes. An experiment was made a few days ago, on the line between Hull and Liverpool, when 18 messages only elapsed while a message was conveyed a distance of upwards of 10 miles.

Nov. 27.—Sir Francis Chantrey, the celebrated sculptor, died on the night of the 25th at his residence in Eaton square. Sir Francis, who had for many years suffered from a disease of the heart, was seized with an oppression on the chest in the earlier part of the evening. A medical man in the neighbourhood was sent for, who administered a medicine which afforded so much relief that Sir Francis considered himself well enough to join a small circle at dinner. Shortly after he had concluded a light repast, he was again seized with a sudden tightness and pain in the chest, and in twenty-five minutes he was a corpse. Sir Francis had only arrived from Hukham, whither he had been on a visit, the preceding evening. He was as well as usual the earlier part of the day, and was occupied in his literary avocations. The late Sir Francis Chantrey, Bart., R.A., D.C.L., Oxon., M.A. Cantab., F.R.S., &c., was the only son of Francis Chantrey, Esq., of Norton, Derbyshire, where he was born in 1782. Sir Francis married, in 1809, a daughter of Daniel Wail, Esq. In 1816 he was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy of London, and in 1818 he was chosen a Royal Academician. Sir Francis was likewise a member of the Academies of Rome and Florence. Admiral Sir John Wills, G.C.B., one of the few surviving heroes of the victory of Camperdown, has died at his seat, Bolmore-street, near Cuckfield, in his 78th year. Sir John had been in the service upwards of 60 years. He commanded the Lancaster frigate at the battle of Camperdown.

DEC. 3.—The gradual course of the Queen Dowager's improvement has not, it seems, been impeded; and the daily progress made by her Majesty in convalescence gives rise to well-founded hopes, that, by the blessing of Divine Providence, her Majesty will gradually recover. The following bulletin is most satisfactory, for the gratifying information it conveys, that, in consequence of the improvement which has taken place in the Queen Dowager's health, it is not deemed necessary to issue another bulletin "under the continuance of the present favourable symptoms." The improvement of the Queen Dowager's health, as announced in the last bulletin, has continued up to the present time, and there is every reasonable prospect of her Majesty's gradual recovery.

DAVID DAVIES, M.D.—Dr. Birkbeck, the well-known physician, expired on the 1st, at his house, 38, Finsbury square, after the most prolonged and severe sufferings, which he, however, bore with extreme fortitude and even cheerfulness.—The Lord Mayor has refused to call a public meeting in the city on the subject of emigration.—The whole of Messrs. Grissell and Peto's works at which the strikers took place are now abundantly supplied with good workmen, not in any way connected with the union.—A person named John John Ward was yesterday sentenced to death in the Central Criminal Court for the cruel murder of an infant, 21 months old.

The number of persons depending on public charity for existence in the town of Paisley, and other places in the Upper Ward of Renfrewshire, amounts to 10,670.

In Edinburgh there has been a very lively discussion, caused by the prosecution of a poor man named Butler, at the instance of the Rev. Mr. Guthrie, for having sold a pennyworth of sweetmeats to a boy on the Sabbath. The man being unable to pay a trifling fine, with £3 expenses, has been sent to prison. Since then his infant child has died.

On the Sunday after his election, Lord Mayor O'Connell went to mass, in procession. The streets were crowded with spectators. Arrived at the parish church, in compliance with a law which forbids the Lord Mayor to "revert" to the mass in official costume, Mr. O'Connell doffed his robes, reannouncing them again on going out. Mrs. Fitzsimon, daughter to the Lord Mayor of Dublin, will discharge the duties of Lady Mayoress, at the Mansion-house, during the minority of her illustrious father.

Letters from Amsterdam mention a very large sale at Rotterdam of Java tea, at which about 3,000 chests were sold for about the same price as the China leaf. Formerly very small quantities of this article were sold at a time, and, as was supposed, more as a matter of curiosity than for actual use. Now, some of the Judges of tea in Holland have been heard to remark that they consider the Java tea equal to, if not better than, that of China, with the advantage that it will be found impossible to mix inferior with superior sorts.

Complaints are constantly made to us of the carelessness of parties in India with reference to the weight of their letters transmitted by the Overland Mail, in consequence of which much unnecessary expense is entailed upon the friends to whom they write in England, to many of whom postage (especially via Marseilles) is of some consequence. Surely this is an evil which only needs being mentioned to be at once remedied. The rate of postage both through France and England should be by this time sufficiently well-known to every one; and there can be no want of means at any of the Presidencies for regulating correspondence so as to come within the various weights prescribed by the Post Office, a scale of which we annex.

FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

At about four o'clock in the afternoon of the 18th November, as the King was returning from Versailles to Paris, a man was thrown at his carriage by an individual standing on the side of the road. The offender succeeded in escaping.

The movement of troops in the north, and the army of observation for the Spanish frontier, were most jealously regarded. There were rumours also in the papers of an intended resignation of ministers, of which the Constitutionnel gives the particulars of one of the many movements which have been made towards a dissolution of the present Cabinet. "It was rumoured on the 18th, that the Ministry was about to be disorganised. On the 19th, quite contrary rumours prevailed. It is true, that on the 18th M. Humann had deposited his portfolio in the hands of the King, begging his Majesty to accept his resignation. The King would not accept it, and called a Council immediately. M. Humann there declared, as he had done in the other sittings, that a reduction of the effective of the army was absolutely necessary, and that a balance should be restored as quickly as possible in the receipts and expenses of the budget. On the 19th, in the evening, the Council was again assembled, and presided over by his Majesty. Marshal Soult proposed that one company out of each regiment should be suppressed. But this proposal did not satisfy M. Humann; and finally the debate ended in mutual concession. It was determined that twelve millions should be anticipated from the expense of the War-Ministry. On this condition M. Humann took back his portfolio."

According to the Moniteur Parisien, the French Naval force in the Mediterranean is now reduced to 13 ships-of-the-line, 2 frigates, 6 corvettes and brigs, and 1 steamer. Six sail-of-the-line are on their way to Brazil, and 14 frigates are out at sea. Independently of these, France had 20 armed corvettes of from 16 to 30 guns, 32 brigs of from 10 to 20 guns, 38 flotilla vessels, 20 transports, corvettes, and lighters, and 30 steamers.

BELGIUM.

THE REVOLUTIONISTS.—This government does not intend to treat as trifling the affair of the Orange rebels. On Tuesday General Vanderveken underwent another examination for more than two hours before M. Delcourt, the examining judge. The vigilance which is exercised with respect to the persons accused of a plot against the safety of the state extends even to the provisions which are brought for them. They are cut into pieces in order to see that no letter is concealed in them. On Thursday evening, at eight o'clock, a conspirator named Genax was imprisoned in the Petite-Carriere, on suspicion of having been engaged in the plot against the safety of the state.

SPAIN.

The chief of the late insurrection appears to have escaped. General O'Donnell and his lady have passed through Tours, on their way to Orleans, whither he repairs with the other chiefs of the late insurrection, Generals Irujo, Lardizabal, Janqueni, La Rocha, Piquero, &c.

The provincial deputation of Cadiz had called on the authorities of Gibraltar to expel from that place Generals Ramon Narvaez and Baron del Solar, and a number of other Christiano refugees.

By letters of the 3d Nov. from Madrid, we learn that Quiroga was shot on that day in the Campo de Guardia—a horrible necessity. In this case, as in that of the last victim, the soldiers fired a second time before the sentence was fulfilled. By a decree of the 26th Oct., the pension of 750,000 francs paid annually to "her Majesty the Queen-Mother, Maria Christina of Bourbon, is suspended."

The Gazette of the 30th Oct. contained a decree, issued by the Regent at Vittoria on the 27th, suppressing the Junta of vigilance, defence, armament, and the like, created in the provinces during the late revolt. The Regent had likewise issued a decree reorganizing the government of the Basque Provinces, finally suppressing the Fueros, and removing the custom-house to the frontier. This latter was a bold, but most desirable measure.

At Madrid, Don Damaso Folcsonio, Colonel of the Principe Regimiento, was shot outside the Gate of Toledo, on the 11th. He is the fifth and last of the rebels of Madrid doomed to capital punishment. His brother, Don Jose, is sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in the Mariana Islands; and a third brother, Don Basilio, lies in prison at Cadiz. General Espeleta, who was at Vittoria during the late revolt, was arrested in Madrid on the 9th.

TURKEY.

The differences which have for some time existed between Turkey, and Greece appear now likely to be brought to an issue. In reply to frequent remonstrances Greece proposes that the Porte, in order to put a stop to the system of brigandage and violation of territory constantly practised by the frontier Greeks of Negropont upon the Turkish territory, should cede Thessaly to Greece, and that the frontier line of the latter should be advanced to the Olympian chain of mountains, or present boundary of Macedonia. Though this very modest proposition is said to have had the support of the French Ambassador, there is an end to the matter, for a despatch had been received at Constantinople by the way of Athens, in which Lord Aberdeen refuses to sanction any attempt on the part of King Otto to procure an extension of the Greek frontier.

By the last accounts the Porte, which complains of the non-fulfilment of treaties by the Greek Government, and especially of the non-payment of the indemnity promised under the guarantee of the three Powers, Russia, France, and England, who were parties to the London treaty of 1839, was adopting measures to enforce its demands of redress from Greece, by the sending of the new levies into Roumelia, and by preparing for sea a squadron of four ships of the line, with frigates and corvettes. It is, however, not clear that the Porte really intends this expedition for the Greek ports; there is, perhaps, still some intention of first punishing the Bay of Tunis.

Letters from Beyrout to the 29th October announce that Syria had again become the theatre of violence and bloodshed. On the 12th, the Druses from Dair el-Kamur, attested with the utmost ferocity the Christian population, who had met to deliberate on the affairs of the Mountain, and put old men, women, and children, to the sword. The Christians ran to arms, and the civil war was raging throughout the country. Not fewer than a hundred villages had been sacked, and Beyrout was crowded with families who had fled from the fury of the combatants. Colonel Ross, Selim Pasha, and Emir Beshir, had vainly endeavored to arrest the violence of the Druses.

AMERICA.

We have accounts from New York to 15th November. The Prince de Joinville was expected at Boston and at Washington, where he was to be publicly entertained. His Royal Highness was in Buffalo on the 29th of Oct. He was to go, on the next day, to the Prairie du Chien, and afterwards go down the Mississippi and Ohio as far as Louisville.

General Scott, the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army, had taken the field as a candidate for the Presidency.

The death of the Hon. John Forsyth, late Secretary of State, of congestive fever, in his sixty-first year, is announced. Mr. Forsyth was born at Frederickburg, Virginia, in October 1781. He graduated at Princeton College, in 1799. He entered the practice of law at Augusta, Georgia, in 1802. Soon after, he was appointed Attorney-General of the State, and rapidly rose to distinction. In 1812 he was elected a Representative in Congress. From 1814 to 1818 he was Chairman of the Committee of Foreign Affairs, in which position he accompanied Mr. Madison on the war with Great Britain. In 1818 he was elected a member of the United States Senate; where he took his seat in November of that year. In 1819 he was appointed Minister to Spain; where he became involved in the controversy in relation to our treaty with that country, settling differences, ceding the Florida, &c., which lasted until October 1820. With the exception of a brief visit to the United States, he continued at Madrid until 1823, when he returned to this country; and having in the mean time been re-elected to Congress, he resumed his seat in the House of Representatives in December of that year, and was restored to the Chairmanship of the Committee of Foreign Affairs, which he continued to occupy as long as he remained in that body. In October 1827, he was elected Governor of Georgia. After filling that post two years, he returned to Washington as Senator of the United States, in place of Mr. Berrien; that post he filled from 1829 until the summer of 1834, when, on the resignation of Mr. McLane as Secretary of State, Mr. Forsyth was called to that department by General Jackson. That office he filled during the residue of General Jackson's term, and continued to hold it until the close of Mr. Van Buren's administration; when he was succeeded in office by Mr. Webster.

It was considered probable that Mr. Webster, the Secretary of State, would leave the Cabinet for some other appointment, and would be succeeded by Judge Usher, Mr. Cushing of Massachusetts taking the Navy.

Mr. Webster is said to have in his possession evidence of an immense chain of lodges and secret associations for an invasion of Canada, extending from Cleveland, in Ohio, to Burlington, in Vermont, bound together by secret oaths, embracing two or three members of Congress, and having their head quarters at Kingston, Upper Canada. It is supposed that these lodges number 60,000 people.

The United States had commenced a prosecution against the Bank for the recovery of protracted bills of exchange worth 440,000 dollars.

The army of the United States is 12,539, the militia 1,503,592, and her navy consists of sixty-eight ships of war, eleven sail of which are of the line. The exports from the States in 1840 were 113,395,634 dollars.

The frontier was tranquil, notwithstanding that the legislature of Vermont had appointed a committee, and passed some strong resolutions, in relation to the "violation of the sovereignty of the state," and the "violent procedure of the British authorities in Canada in forcibly seizing within the state, and conveying beyond the limits of the same, and of the United States, Col. James W. Grogan, an American citizen." &c. The committee was to report to the legislature, but the result of the proceedings and investigation had not transpired.

A letter had been addressed by Sir R. Jackson, as governor of Canada, to the governor of Vermont, in which he declares that if, on investigation, any of Her Majesty's officers or men were implicated in the seizure and capture of Col. Grogan, they would be punished with the utmost rigour.

EAST INDIA INTELLIGENCE.

Lord Rilemborough embarked at Plymouth on the 7th of November, on board the Cambrian, 36, Captain A. D. Chasle, and sailed immediately for India.

The belief now seems to be, that Sir R. Jenkins will be the new Governor of Madras.

THE OPIUM CLAIMS.
SPIRIT OF THE JOURNALS.

THE OPIUM CLAIMS.—RANSOM OF CANTON.
Contrary to what was expected from the tenor of the advice by the last Mail, it will be seen from the officious correspondence, that no part of the money obtained from the Chinese for the ransom of Canton is to be appropriated to the liquidation of the Opium claims; it being considered a duty of the Crown, and, as such, after paying what Her Majesty may be pleased to award as prize money, is to be carried to the account of the consolidated fund.

King's Arms Yard, 17th Nov., 1841.
Sir,—I have been requested by the Gentlemen who with myself were honored by Lord Aberdeen with an interview on the 28th ultimo on behalf of the claimants for compensation for the Opium seized in 1839 by the Chinese authorities at Canton, to draw your attention to that part of the money lately recovered by Captain Elliot which is now coming to England on board Her Majesty's ship "Conway." Presuming that Her Majesty's Government will allow compensation to be made to the claimants out of the money so recovered, the agents are desirous of being informed, whether any specified amount of the Bullion, now subject to sea risk, can be so defined as to authorize their effecting an insurance to guard against the loss of that part of the property appertaining to the Proprietors of the Opium Certificates.

I trust that you will coincide in the propriety of this information being afforded for the benefit of parties (natives both in Bombay and Bengal) who have suffered so heavily from the seizure of their property.

I have the honor, &c.

To the Right Hon'ble Henry Goulburn, Downing Street.

Downing Street, 17th Nov., 1841.
Sir,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt to your letter of this day, requesting information as to whether any specific amount of the Bullion shipped by Captain Elliot on board H. M. Ship "Conway" now on its passage to England, can be defined as compensation to the Proprietors of Opium Certificates as to authorize their effecting insurance upon it; and to acquaint you in reply, that the Bullion on board H. M. Ship "Conway" is part of a droit of the Crown received on behalf of the Crown, and that the Lords of the Treasury possess no power of appropriating any part of it to the satisfaction of claims such as those which you have preferred on the part of the Proprietors of Opium Certificates.

I have the honor, &c.

(Signed) HENRY GOULBURN To J. H. Palmer, Esq.

Foreign Office, 2d December 1841.
GENTLEMEN,—With reference to your letter of the 1st November, requesting information as to the intentions of Her Majesty's Government with respect to the distribution of the money obtained from the Chinese authorities at Canton under the arrangement entered into by Capt. Elliot with those authorities on the 21st May last I am directed by the Earl of Aberdeen to acquaint you, that the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have stated that they are precluded from entertaining the question submitted in your letter. The money to which you refer having been obtained from the Chinese authorities at Canton, in order to relieve that city from hostile pressure, is a droit of the Crown and, as such, after paying what Her Majesty may graciously be pleased to grant to the forces employed at Canton, it must be carried to the account of the consolidated fund.

THE CHINA WAR.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR CHINA.—We might readily have supposed that from the day the councils of the country were guided by the advice of the Duke of Wellington, the age of little wars was at an end. The China expedition, which according to Lord Palmerston had all but closed its operations a twelvemonth since is now to be reinforced from home in a manner worthy of the magnitude of the operation. The Naval and Military Gazette of 30th November announces the following troops as under orders to embark:

The following large detachments are under orders to embark at Portsmouth for China on or about the 28th instant.

18th Lt. Irish	70	(including
36th (Cameronian)	45	Natives)
49th (Princess Charlotte of Wales) ..	300	Officers.
36th (Westmoreland)	79

800

The officers who will also embark are—Lieut. Colonel Bartley, Captain Parley, and Ensign Glasbrook, 18th Regiment; Captain Ross, 30th; Lieut. Piper and Duff, and Ensigns De Quincey, Dickens, and Bredin, 26th Regiment. The 98th Regiment and a company of Artillery will embark in H. M. S. Hellish; and the detachments of the 10th, 29th, 39th and 53th Regiments, in the Apollon and Savannah.

The six companies of the 98th Regiment now about to embark for China, are to be increased to 120 rank and file each, with the established complement of officers.

This makes a reinforcement in all of 1600 men. It will be recollected that the following reinforcements from India have already joined, or are under orders:—

11. M. 53th complete from Calcutta July ..	800
Officers and men of the Camerons	175
Men and Officers of H. M. 49th	200
H. M. 30th	100
From Madras in July, Artillery and Sepoys ..	200
From England by the Hardwick and Sulphur	530
Do by the Cornwallis and Carnegie	1000
Under orders—from Madras H. M. 63rd 1000	1000
Madras 2nd, 4th and 6th N. I.	3000
Artillery, Gun, Lacars, Sappers and Miners	1350
From Calcutta, one Regt. N. I.	1000
To which add the new reinforcement	1500
	11,257

The original expedition was not the half of this. The following list of ships is given by the United Service Journal as about to be added to the fleet:—

The ships and vessels ordered to augment the squadron in China, are the Cambrian, 36, afterwards Lord Ellenborough, the new Governor General of India, at Calcutta; the North Star, 26; Harlequin and Siren corvettes, (both of them have sailed) another brig or two, and the Belleisle and Apollon troop ships, both armed on shore, and as useful now—and probably more so—than 16-gun brigs. As to steamers, the small iron ones, resembling the Nemesis, appear to be the best adapted for the service; one, the Flora, belonging to the East India Company, went from Portsmouth about a month ago. The Flora ordered out under command of Major General Lord Dalhousie, will go in the two troop ships before named, the Sapphire, and some East India ships. They (the ships) are to take out anchors and chain cables, of a selected weight and size for the purpose of being placed across some of the creeks and small rivers in China, where it may be apprehended that fire-vessels are collected, and will be sent down to insure the shipping. A large number of shells and rockets will be put on board the ships for the use of the Navy, and the detachment of the Royal Artillery are to have their own Ordnance Stores greatly increased and the North Star takes out about 30,000 dollars to pay the troops. Every exertion is making to get the North Star, Apollon, and Sapphire ready for sea, and they will be completed early next week.

H. M. brig Harlequin, 16, Commander Hon. G. F. Hastings, arrived in the Sound on the 13th inst. from Sheerness; she will sail in the course of a day or two for Singapore and China direct. The Siren, 16 gun brig, sailed on the 15th for Rio Janeiro, Cape Horn, and thence to China; she has taken, as passenger to Rio, Capt. Oyle, who is appointed to the command of the "Southampton."

AFGHANISTAN.
NOTIFICATION.

FORT WILLIAM, SECRET DEPARTMENT,
THE 31ST JANUARY, 1842.

Intelligence having been received which leaves no room to doubt that, after the British Force at Cabul had maintained its position against overpowering numbers of Insurgents for more than six weeks, the Officer Commanding had judged it necessary, in consequence of a failure of Provisions, to agree to a convention with the enemy, and to retire, in reliance on the faith of that convention, towards Jellalabad, when the Troops exposed to the worst rigors of cold and privation in the mountain defiles, and harassed by treacherous attacks, suffered extreme disaster—the Governor General in Council deems it proper to notify, that the most active measures have been adopted, and will be steadfastly prosecuted for expediting powerful reinforcements to the Afghan Frontier and for assisting such operations as may be required in that quarter for the maintenance of the honor and interests of the British Government.

The ample Military means at the disposal of the British Government will be strenuously applied to these objects, so as at once to support external operations, and to ensure efficient protection to its subjects and allies.

A faithless enemy, stained by the foul crime of assassination, has, through a failure of supplies, followed by consummate treachery, been able to overcome a body of British Troops, in a country removed by distance and difficulties of season, from the possibility of succour. But the Governor General in Council, while he most deeply laments the loss of brave Officers and men, regards this partial reverse only as a new occasion for displaying the stability and vigor of the British Power, and the admirable spirit and valor of the British Indian Army.

By order of the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council,

T. H. MADDOCK, Secy. to the Govt. of India.

"The Envoy has agreed to take all our Troops out of the country, and peace had been made on these terms, supplies had poured rapidly into Cantonments day and night, and carriage cattle had been procured for the march—day after day however passed, and no move was made, the chiefs became impatient and accused Mahomed Akbar of having betrayed them—Mahomed A. requested the Envoy to give him a meeting and discuss the matter. They met at a bridge. The Envoy was attended by four Officers and 8 of his body guard, who were halted short of the bridge. The Afghan was accompanied by apparently only a few of his followers. Mahomed Akbar began by saying that the Envoy had treated him ill, having agreed to quit the country on conditions which the opposite party had fulfilled. "He said we have given you food and camels, now when will you go?" the Envoy pleaded weather, &c. &c. and tried to talk Mahomed Akbar over, promising him all sorts of advantages if he would not press the departure of the troops—High word followed and the Envoy rose to depart when Mahomed Akbar seized his arm and shot him dead—Terror was instantly cut down and the other Officers were seized.

As soon as the massacre commenced 16 horse-men, concealed behind a tent, rushed to the spot and drove off the eight Troopers who ran for their lives. Conolly's life is considered secure as he has many friends amongst the Afghans—The force at Cabul may be thus estimated.

6th Cavalry.....	250
Anderson's Horse.....	650	1160 Cavalry.
2 Ressala Local.....	200

Mahomed Ubbur has sent Circulars through all the Valleys calling on all good Mussulmans to rise and exterminate the invaders, he details the Officers, already killed, names the Envoy and Barrow, and begs the people to take care and not let McGregor escape, he threatens Ussez Khan with destruction if he continues inactive.

P. S. We have a very vague report which, on one credit, that our troops have stormed and taken Cabul; the thing is possible enough!

What a fate awaits the perpetrators of this black, and perhaps, premeditated deed!

"O, then from this time forth
Our thoughts be bloody or be nothing worth."
Daily Gazette, January 19.

Last night the following melancholy intelligence, confirmatory of our worst fears, reached us from the most authentic source,

"There is an express from Peshawar, of Jan. 16th, with a letter from Jellalabad, of January 13th, which conveys the subjoined melancholy intelligence:

"Dr. Brydon has just arrived here, from Cabool, he is wounded, and a good deal confused, but I gather from him the following melancholy particulars. Our troops left the cantonments there, on the 6th or 7th. No sooner did they do so, than they were attacked by the enemy, who possessed themselves of the cantonment, on its being evacuated by our people. At Khoored Cabool, which was their third march, the ladies of the party were sent back to Cabool, under the charge of Mahomed Akbar Khan, the enemy having consented to protect them in route. On the Half Kotul, part of the troops became disorganized, many were destroyed, and others fled. At Teezen, where our last gun fell into the hands of the enemy, Biphinstone and Shelton were made prisoners. From Teezen to Jagdulluk, about 200 men of the 44th regiment, held well together,—there they became very disorderly, and there Dr. Brydon separated from them, last night, and he is the only one of the fugitives who has, as yet, reached Jellalabad. The following is the list of officers, who, Dr. Brydon states, have been killed:

Major Ewart; Lieutenant Sturt; Drs. Duff, Bryce and Macgrath; Cardew, Beilew, Bird, Anquetil and Macartney."

"The Peshawar letter states, that the 53d and 64th Regiment, Native Infantry, occupied Alee Musjid, without opposition, on the night of the 15th January.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—It was the fashion some years ago, whenever an "uncommon good thing" was said, to father it on one of the city dignitaries. Your contemporary "Friend of China" must certainly have taken a hint from the posthumous papers of Sir William Curtis or Sir Claudius Hunter, when he penned his last effusion.

When Nelson was going into action at the battle of the Nile he said to Collingwood, "By this time to-morrow I shall have gained "a peerage or Westminster abbey"—But it is rather hard upon the memory of Britain's greatest hero, to put into his mouth such intolerable nonsense as "Death or Westminster Abbey." IMPORTANT FROM NINGPO

We had last week the pleasure of publishing Sir Henry Pottinger's circular giving an account of the gallant repulse by H. M. forces of a large body of Chinese. By the Myra, transport, since arrived, we have had accounts of new deals of arms, and several of our friends having kindly allowed us the perusal of their letters, we shall now lay before our readers a brief account of the occurrences of the 15th and subsequent days. It appears that after the unsuccessful attack on Ningpo, the Chinese attempted to annoy the British garrison, by obstructing the supply of provisions, and intelligence having at same time been received that a body of 3 or 4000 men were encamped at the town of Tee-kee, about 11 miles to the westward of Ningpo, Sir Hugh Gough determined to attack them. A force consisting of detachments of the 18th, 26th and 49th Regiments and a naval brigade, in all about 1100 strong, was taken on board and in tow of the Nemesis and Phlegathon steamers, on the 15th of March, and on arriving near Tee-kee the Chinese were seen posted in a tolerably strong position immediately to the west of the town, the walls of which were scaled at once without meeting with any resistance. When, however, the British troops went out to attack the encampments, the Chinese fought well, keeping up for some time a fire from gingalls and matchlocks.

The Marines and sailors were directed to attack them on the hill which formed the right of their position, while the 49th took the centre, and the 18th and 26th the left of their camp. Here it seems the much shorter distance (and no doubt impatience to engage) which the marines and 49th had to traverse, brought on the fight rather prematurely, they getting into action much sooner than the 18th and 26th, who had a long distance to go over steep hills; the 18th were unable to get at the Chinese till they had begun to run, and they then tumbled a few over. According to all accounts the Chinese have shown more courage on this than any other previous occasion, and their loss as well as numbers are very variously estimated in different letters we have seen; the former at from four to nine hundred killed; the latter at from 14 to 15000 although most of the letters mention the enemy to have been about 6000 strong. On the side of the British the loss of the naval Brigade was 3 killed and 14 wounded, including a marine officer Mr. Hambly, of the 49th there were 6 or 8 wounded, among them Capt. Reynolds slightly, and Lieut. Montgomerie and Lane severely; the latter was so severely hurt in the arm that it was obliged to be taken off in the field. On that night the British troops slept in the neighbourhood of Teekee, and on the following morning burnt the camp and several mandarin and government houses in the city and suburbs. Intelligence of another camp existing at about 5 miles distance, the troops were marched there, but found it utterly deserted. On the following morning the troops returned to Ningpo and Chin-hai from this successful expedition. It seems that the flying Chinese have been rallied by some mandarins and reinforced by new troops, and that they were again gathering near a large city of the name of Shouching to the north of Yuyao, and that Sir Hugh Gough intended to rout them thence within a few days after the date of our intelligence. Rumours were also rife of an intended attack on Ningpo, by a very large force, say 30,000 men, on about the 24th, so that our gallant men will have enough on their hands for some time to come. It was said to be Sir Hugh Gough's intention immediately to move on Hang-chow-foo, the capital of the province of Chekeang; to execute which movement the position of Ningpo will no doubt have to be abandoned. The Sensaria steamer had been despatched to Amoy to bring up 300 men of the Royal Irish. Most of the letters we have seen agree in representing our loss at Teekee at 3 killed and 40 wounded, and that of the Chinese uncertain as above stated.

On Monday last the 4th inst., being the birthday of Her Most faithful Majesty the Queen of Portugal, H. E. the Governor of Macao gave in celebration of the day a brilliant evening party, to which a great number of invitations had been issued to the principal Portuguese and foreign inhabitants, and which in spite of the unfavorable weather, was very numerous attended. Among the guests were Sir Henry Pottinger, H. B. M. Plenipotentiary, Mr. Johnston, Governor of Hongkong, Commodore Kearny, Captain Pearce, etc. etc. Dancing commenced at about 10 o'clock, and at about one, the Company sat down to a splendid supper, in a saloon tastefully decorated, and erected for the occasion, during which the Governor in a short and appropriate speech proposed the health of H. M. the Queen of Portugal, which was drunk with all the honors, the excellent band playing the national air. After supper dancing was resumed and the company did not separate till a very late hour, much pleased with the amusements of the evening and with their hospitable hosts, the Governor and his Lady.

When Lin, now rather more than three years back, retained all foreign residents of Canton prisoners there, when he moreover threatened H. M. Superintendent with the severity of the law (which justly interpreted, means that he threatened his life) and when, to escape out of the hands of a violent man who might possibly put his threats in execution, an enormous value in Opium at the outer anchorage, was delivered over to the Chinese. It was certainly expected that the British Government would resent the indignity with which its representative and merchants had been treated, and provide for the safety of its commercial relations for the future. Accordingly, about fifteen months after the outrage had been committed, a splendid armament arrived on the coast of China, but either the contradictory orders of the Cabinet, or the incapacity of the men to whom the expedition was entrusted, or probably both together, neutralized the effect a bold line of conduct with such means might have produced, and the Chinese from the wavering diplomacy of the Plenipotentiaries derived courage to oppose the British forces; and, although unable to cope with them whenever brought into contact, their means of men and money as displayed since first the Expedition arrived on the coast, are much greater than any one however well he may have supposed himself to be acquainted with the Chinese Empire, thought them possessed of. To these active means they had the address to add a sort of sullen or negative resistance which threatens to be overcome with much more difficulty than the armies or fleets they may bring forward in defence of their country, and which at same time is a proof of the, by foreigners, but too much doubted influence of the Chinese government over its subjects. It is now 8 months since the arrival of another Plenipotentiary to supersede him who until then had mismanaged affairs, infused new hope that something decided would soon be done, and that vigorous measures would soon bring the Chinese to reason. But the season was too far advanced, and the necessary reinforcements, owing no doubt to the misrepresentations of the former Plenipotentiary, did not arrive, and the operations of the war during the remainder of the year were confined to the easy victories of Amoy, Chusan, Chinhae and Ningpo. It was expected that from holding the latter City, some important advantages would be derived, and that the Chinese, in order to rescue it from the hands of the invaders, would be inclined to submit to some considerable sacrifice. It being confidently stated that H. M. officers first made the offer of ransoming the town for a considerable sum of money. This expectation was however baffled; the Chinese seemed to consider the occupation of Ningpo as a matter of little moment, and not only were they unwilling to pay any money for its evacuation, but they have until this moment studiously abstained from opening any direct communication with Sir Henry Pottinger, hoping by this delay and apparent indifference to wear out the patience and forces of the British. A similar line of conduct we are well aware succeeded admirably when Capt. Elliot was at the head of the Expedition, and they then had the satisfaction of seeing their policy rewarded by the death or sickness of one half of the land forces sent to China, who were suffered, for the sake of exchanging "Chopis" during their 8 months inactivity at Chinhae to fall victims to its unhealthy climate and a badly appointed Commissariat. Now however the better knowledge acquired of the country, and greater care for the health and comfort of the soldier, renders delay, or the want of action no longer so extremely calamitous, and since it is now certain that in order to obtain fair terms of peace from the Chinese, a much larger force than hitherto sent, is altogether indispensable, it is probably as well not to wear out the strength of the troops, or to expose them to casualties, in a petty warfare which could have no influence upon the final result. The late attempt at recovering Ningpo, has added another to the many proofs we have already, of the inability of the Chinese, whatever may be their numbers, to cope with the disciplined valour of British troops, and if only a sufficient number is sent out to this country, and arrives early enough in the season to take full advantage of the monsoon, we doubt not that whatever military enterprise may be undertaken, will be fully successful. We are glad to learn that according to all accounts a sufficient force is by this time on its way from England and India, and we confidently hope that this year will have to record some signal successes of the British arms in the north of China.

Whatever may be the demands of the British Government, it is to be hoped they will be firmly insisted on, and that in the event of a treaty, guarantees for its fulfilment are to be given, and that its provisions will be enforced. The vacillation hitherto shown to the Chinese will no doubt make this a matter of difficulty, for as yet, of their several promises and engagements they have found means to break the greater number. At the Peking in 1840, H. M. Plenipotentiaries were told that if they would only have the goodness to move down again to Canton, officers with full power should be sent down to settle everything amicably. After long delay an Imperial Commissioner did arrive, but when after much evasion and artful procrastination, and not till after some expenditure of powder and shot, the famous Chuenpee treaty, in which British interests had been most shamefully sacrificed, was at last agreed on, it was found that even the most solemn engagements of Keshen had not the power to bind the government that had commissioned him, if indeed that statesman was himself at any time sincere, which may be doubted, as the promised permission for the trade to be opened, was never given, although one of the provisions of the treaty. Its nonratification was followed by the destruction of the Bogue-forts and the occupation of the river by H. M. forces. But again a convention was entered into, and the town of Canton spared. Every body knows that the interval from that time until the 20th of May was employed by the Chinese, in preparing contrary to stipulations agreed on, for a treacherous attack upon the English, whilst they were professing the most friendly and peaceable intentions. The Chinese made the attack, were foiled, and the City of Canton being threatened by the British troops from the adjacent heights, their treachery, besides the partial destruction of their town, fortifications, vessels of war &c. cost them a ransom of 8,000,000. A new treaty was entered on, and it might have been hoped that, the infraction of former ones having cost them so dear, they would strictly fulfil its conditions. How far this has been otherwise the many new fortifications along the riverbanks from Canton to Whampoa, and the repair of the old, will shew. These defensive preparations were some time since considered an infraction of the treaty and Captain Nias moved with a squadron up the river to destroy the works intended to obstruct its course. Since then however our rulers seem to have altered their mind on the subject, and we are told in a Circular issued by Sir Henry Pottinger, that the rebuilding of the Bogue-forts, or the repair or building of new fortifications bravo Whampoa, will be followed by a renewal of hostilities in the River and by stoppage of trade. Thus then the infraction of the conditions of the truce entered into by Capt. Elliot on the 27th May last, is sanctioned by the highest British authority, and the Chinese will no doubt allow this to be a precedent for interpreting future agreements according to their own ideas. It is much to be regretted that fulfilment of conditions, when once imposed, is not rigorously exacted, as such laxity leads naturally from the breach of one obligation to that of another. Thus Capt. Elliot, in the truce above alluded to, threatened the Chinese that a close blockade of the River is to be laid on if the freedom or trade of Hongkong is in anywise interfered with. This freedom is interfered with, for no vessel, from a Chinese port is allowed to clear out for Hongkong, nor is any cargo exported from Hongkong in native vessels allowed to be cleared at the different Customhouses; restrictions which interfere greatly with the trade of that place. Yet nothing is done to make the Chinese comply with their engagements, nor is the threatened blockade put on.

The uncertainty of purpose evinced by the British authorities since the arrival on these shores of the expedition, of which we have given some instances above, has been, we believe, one of the principal causes of its having failed of success hitherto. Let us hope that with the arrival of the third expedition, firmness, and unity of purpose will also reign in the councils of the heads of the forces, and that a wavering, timid, policy will for ever be discarded. We can hope nothing from the affection of the Chinese, but everything rational may be obtained from their fears.

In a previous column will be found an extract from the India Gazette of 4th February, being copy of a correspondence between Mr. Horsley Palmer and the Government regarding the appropriation of part of the ransom-money of Canton to paying for the Opium surrendered; and it will be seen that the holders of the Opium scrip are not considered by Government as having claim to any share of that money, of which part is to be distributed as prize money and the remainder applied to Government purposes. Much as we congratulate the gallant Army and Navy on this decision, we yet hope that Captain Elliot's representations to the prejudice of the holders of his own Opium-scrip, will not have so much weight with the government, as to slight their claims hereafter, and that their interests are not to be lost sight of in any future arrangement between the two governments.

By the Wanderer letters and papers from Calcutta to the 4th February have been received, and in the latter we have in preceding columns extracted the disastrous news from Afghanistan.

The following from the last number of the "Friend of China" is in such bad taste, that further comment is unnecessary, except to premise that that paper copied Sir Henry Pottinger's Circular from us.

We should inform our readers that the following Circular of H. E. the Plenipotentiary, is copied from a Macao contemporary, and although it has not yet reached us officially, no doubt it is authentic; as we have Letters dated Chusan the 12th March, which narrating the several affairs quite agree with the account in the Circular.

The "Friend of China" who boasts of correspondents in all parts of the world, has of late on several occasions, notwithstanding how low his news from us, without so as usually to acknowledge the obligation. Piracy we have before strongly suspected to exist at Hongkong; this is a sad confirmation of our suspicions. Such doings are really too bad of the reverend and worshipful editors! For other particulars see "Oh."

From the Friend of China, of 9th March.

TRANSLATION

The High Imperial Council, under Yehking, "two spreading Imperial" and Teis-un and Wan, his coadjutors, hereby make clear proclamation.

It appears, that amongst the "black barbarians," there are many natives of the land, who having been taken captive by the English Rebels, are by change of dress or altered in appearance, that they cannot be recognised. Being forced by those Rebels to do them menial service, they are grievously oppressed, and in the prospect of being placed, in the day of battle, foremost to stand the whole brunt of the conflict, or on the other hand the fear that, if they retreat, they will meet death at the hands of their oppressor. Unable to speak out, and without opportunity either of advancement, or retirement from among them, these are induced to be compromised.

Among the "red barbarians," too, there are some, who have been brought by those rebels from other lands, with an will to follow them and with no share in their plunder. Why should these continue in their slavery?

Therefore in this clear Proclamation issued, if, in the day of battle, either "red" or "black" barbarians will—should they be on shore, cast away their arms, and kneeling, offer submission,—or, should they be afloat, refuse to fire,—they shall in all cases be spared alive. Any who shall seize and deliver up a great "barbarian Eye" (or Chief) shall be rewarded with a high dignity. Any who shall make prisoners of the common "demons" (pirates or sailors) shall be richly rewarded with money and if any shall deliver up a foreign vessel, they shall receive for their reward whatever goods the vessel shall contain. A special Edict.

21st, year of Tsoonkwang, 13th moon, 19th day.

THE BRIG "FRIENDS."

From the Sing. Free Press, of 10th March.

We mentioned in a late number that the Brig Friends, which had been seized in China by Captain Nias of H. M. Ship Herald for an alleged breach of the Navigation Laws, had been sent on to Penang, to have the case adjudicated there by the Recorder; but on arriving there the found that the learned Judge had proceeded on Circuit down the Straits and again returned to this port. On Monday the 21st ultimo, the case was brought formally before the Court at this station, in the exercise of its functions as a Vice-Admiralty Court; and on the following Thursday his Lordship pronouncing the following Judgment, dismissing the suit from want of Jurisdiction in the Court to entertain the offence alleged:—

THE "FRIENDS." Receve Laws.

This vessel was seized at Canton by Captain Nias of H. M. Ship Herald, and has been sent here in charge of one of the Officers of that Ship to be dealt with according to Law for a supposed breach of the Revenue Laws; and condemnation of the vessel and cargo is now prayed, under the circumstances stated in the Petition filed by the Captor's Agent, for an alleged violation either of the Registry Act 3rd and 4th Wm. 4th Cap. 55. S. 4. in exercising the privileges of a British Ship without being duly registered; or of the Navigation Act 6th Geo. 4th Cap. 109. S. 11, in importing goods into a British Possession, Sydney, in a manner contrary to the provisions of that section. The latter charge has been embodied in a supplementary or amended Petition, not having been distinctly specified in the first Petition, and has been added, I supposed, in consequence of the doubts which I expressed the other day whether this Court could take cognizance of the alleged breach of the Registry Act. The amendment however does not appear to me to affect the question to be decided in the first instance, which is said in question of jurisdiction; and whatever does not belong to its jurisdiction the Court is bound of its own motion to reject. The Registry and Navigation Acts are a part of the Receve Laws of Great Britain, and, as such, the old Registry and Navigation Acts were repealed by hundreds of other Statutes by the general Act 6th Geo. 4th Cap. 105, "for repealing the Laws relating to the Customs." The case of the Generous, in 2nd Dodson's Admiralty Reports 322, which was confiscated for a breach of the Navigation Acts, is having a Crew not composed of properly qualified persons, is called, by Sir Wm. Scott, "a Revenue case." The case of the Betty Catherine, in 1 Robinson's Admiralty Reports 220, which had been condemned by the Vice-Admiralty Court of Jamaica for an alleged breach of the Registry Act, is also described by the same learned Judge as "a proceeding on the Revenue Laws." It is needless to cite other cases in support of so plain a position, which I merely repeat because the other day it was disputed. Now, as observed by Sir Wm. Scott in the case of the Hercules, 2 Dodson, 350, "the jurisdiction of the Vice-Admiralty Courts in revenue cases is of mere Statutory institution; given to them by positive Statute; being no part of their original and inherent authority; it exists only so far as it is so given." The question then is whether by the modern Navigation or other Acts this Court is invested with power to adjudicate on the matters brought before it in this case. Under the Old Navigation Act, it is true, prosecutions and forfeitures are of frequent occurrence in the Colonial Courts, although the prosecution could only be maintained in that Colony within whose jurisdiction the offence was committed until the Statute 49th Geo. 3rd Cap. 107, enabled the Prosecutor to sue, at his option, either in the Colony where the forfeiture accrued, or in that where the seizure was made. But all these Statutes, as before stated, were repealed by the 6th Geo. 4th Cap. 105. The restoration, then, of the jurisdiction given by and extinguished with these Statutes, must, if to be found at all, be sought for in some of the Statutes contemporaneous with or subsequent to the repealing Act. And the search is necessarily as short as the result is fatal to the hopes of the Prosecutor, at least on the immediate question of local jurisdiction; for there is no occasion to travel much beyond the provisions of the Registry and Navigation Acts themselves—the very Acts on which the prosecution is based,—for a conclusive answer to the inquiry. Section 46 of the Registry Act, referred to in the Petition, 3rd and 4th Wm. 4th Cap. 55, enacts "that all the penalties and forfeitures incurred by that Act shall and may be suit for, prosecuted, recovered and disposed of in such manner and by such ways, means and methods as any penalties or forfeitures inflicted or which may be incurred for any offence committed against any law relating to the Customs may now be legally sued for, prosecuted, recovered, and disposed of." In like manner, Section 23d of the Navigation Act, Cap. 54, of the same Session and passed on the same day, declares, in terms still more precise and definite, "that all penalties and forfeitures incurred under that Act shall be sued for, prosecuted, recovered, and disposed of, or shall be mitigated or restored, in like manner as any penalty or forfeiture can be sued for, prosecuted, recovered and disposed of, or may be mitigated or restored, under an Act passed in that Session of Parliament for the prevention of Smuggling." It is true, the prosecution in the present instance for the alleged breach of the Navigation Laws is not expressly made upon the last Navigation Act 3rd and 4th Wm. 4th Cap. 54 just cited, but upon the former Act, 6th Geo. 4th Cap. 109, which contains no precise direction as to the mode of recovering the penalties. This omission in the Petition of all reference to the Act of Wm. 4th may have arisen from inadvertence; but, whether or not, the two Acts are not to be separated; the preamble to that of Wm. 4th expressly contemplates the consolidation of both "into one Act," and they must therefore be construed together. It only remains, then, to see what are the provisions for the recovery or penalties in the Act above referred to, passed in the same Session, viz. Chap. 53, "for the prevention of smuggling;" and these provisions (in section 75) are as follows, viz. "And he it further enacted, that all penalties and forfeitures incurred or imposed by this or any other Act relating to the Customs, or to Trade or Navigation, shall and may be sued for, prosecuted and recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster or at Dublin or at Edinburgh, or in the Royal Courts of the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark or Man, in the name of His Majesty's Attorney-General, or of the Lord Advocate of Scotland, or in the name or names of some officer or officers of His Majesty's Customs, or by information before any two or more of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace in the United Kingdom, or before any Governor, Deputy Governor, or Deemster in the Isle of Man." The Legislature having thus thought fit, doubtless for good and wise reasons, to confine the trial of such prosecutions to the Courts of the Mother Country, there is of course an end of the question in this Court; and as there was plainly no necessity for bringing the Defendant here I think he is entitled, under the circumstances to recover his Agent's Costs. Upon the merits I can say, for I legally know, nothing; but should the Prosecutor determine to pursue the inquiry elsewhere he may incur by so doing.

Suit Dismissed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SINGAPORE FREE PRESS.

Sir,—May I request you will be so good as, in the next issue of your impartial Journal, to do me the favor of giving insertion to the following statement of my unfortunate case. I have endeavored to make it as brief as I possibly could, from a desire to avoid, equally occupying, too much space, or attempting to draw public attention to myself individually. My case however is one of such extraordinary character, that I fear nothing on the latter score—but my object in wishing its publication to the world is, that such of my fellow countrymen as may be seeking their fortune on the wide ocean similarly to myself, may look upon it as the beacon light whereby to avoid those rocks whereon their hopes and their alt may be wrecked for ever. I desire this publicity also for another reason, namely, that having in vindication of my own conduct and character, to refer to several important documents and facts, of the authenticity of which I have no means here of adducing proofs, I am therefore the more anxious that what I have to state may through your means, reach those quarters where I fear no contradiction. And lastly, as Capt. Nias has sent my vessel down to this Port upon an alleged ground of her papers not being correct or satisfactory, and upon an alleged breach of the navigation Laws, which I have reason to think are pretty generally believed to be the case in Singapore, and as Capt. Nias has also filed by Petition in the Court here, in its Admiralty Jurisdiction stating various grounds of illegality on my part, and as I have not had an opportunity of replying to the charges made, nor of contradicting the reports that are so rife, I therefore feel particularly desirous of making my story known to the Public at large.

I now proceed to a brief narrative of what befel me from the time I purchased the Brigantine Peru now called the Friends, at Valparaiso in Chile, in March 1838, as appears by the Bill of Sale in my possession. Being an American built vessel her original papers were given up to the American Consul at Valparaiso, and I obtained a "Sailing Letter" from the Hon'ble John Walpole, H. B. M. Consul General of Chile. The Friends is the eleventh vessel on record sailing out of Valparaiso with the same papers and there are several out of Lima and other ports in South America. She had when bought 8 carriage guns mounted and two more in the hold, which I also had mounted by the Carpenter of H. B. M. Ship Stag then at Valparaiso. April the 5th, having complied with the regulations of the Port, and had the articles of Agreement drawn up before the British Consul, and signed between the seamen and myself, explaining the nature of the voyage on which we were bound, I set sail, and after an absence of 15 months plying amongst the Islands in the Pacific, returned to Valparaiso where I discharged her cargo, and commenced refitting and altering the Brigantine into a full rigged Brig, in consequence of the main-mast being much worn by the jaws of the gaff. Thence I again sailed forth on the 15th September, 1839, on a similar voyage as the last, and reached Orahete, where, owing to the prospect of bad weather, having 3 months to wait for the pearling season, and having heard of the facilities which Sydney afforded for coppering, repainting, and other ship-work, which my vessel required, I decided at once upon going there for repairs; and on the 28th December quitted Papeeti harbour, leaving behind 6 of my guns to prevent any misconception, as they were intended to be used by me solely for the protection of the ship's property and our lives, whilst trading among the more uncivilized Islands. I arrived at Sydney on the 8th Feby. 1840, where I made known to Mr. Jeffries, who boarded us, that my object in coming there, was not to trade, but to copper my vessel and obtain provisions for my intended pearling voyages. Not having sufficient funds I requested permission of the Governor to land and sell as much as would enable me to complete the required repairs.

A considerable delay ensued before my request was complied with. This arose from an attempt on the part of the Custom-House Authorities to seize my vessel, but after due inquiry, they found no ground to justify the intention, and after obtaining what I required I cleared out in due form, on return to the Islands. After trading among the Islands in the South Pacific, for about twenty months and suffering various losses, I had at last the heavy misfortune to lose my wife leaving two little Babes surviving. This induced me to shorten my voyage. I accordingly decided on returning to Valparaiso without delay, by way of Manila and China. I reached Macao on the 4th Jan. last, when I was immediately boarded by an officer from H. B. M. Sloop Nimrod, Capt. Glass, who behaved in a most unbecoming and insulting manner, and said that I was loaded with Arms from Manila, and insinuating other remarks which I did not understand. His assertions I denied, and said that the propagator of such wilful falsehoods certainly must be a big scoundrel, for my only object in coming there was to dispose of a few Pearls, a little Tortoiseshell, some Yams, and a little Spermaceti—the proceeds of which I intended for Valparaiso. Nevertheless, after all my protestations and declarations, the said Officer was not satisfied, and detained me until further orders from Captain Glass. About an hour elapsed, when there came on board, for the Nimrod 4 Marines, and at 6 P. M. the First Lieutenant, to relieve the Officer who first boarded, with orders from Capt. Glass that I must get underweigh and anchor alongside the Nimrod, which I did. During the night, there was a strong guard on board, and on the following day, the 5th, a search was commenced by a strong party from the Nimrod, breaking my Yams and destroying other property as will appear by my Log. The officer in command of the working party was repeatedly told by the Chief Officer and myself, to desire the men to be careful and not destroy anything more than they could help; but my request met from this person with nothing but a contemptuous sneer. Such conduct I told him was not only unbecoming an officer but unfeeling, and that he would soon perceive that what I had related in the first instance was true. When however Mr. Hynes of the same vessel came to relieve him, I succeeded in getting that officer to put a stop to such ruinous proceedings. At 4 P. M. the search was completed, and after having turned every thing upside down and seeing her keelson in four or more different places, the report of which was sent on board to Captain Glass, who immediately withdrew the Seamen and Marines, and I was myself requested to go on board the Nimrod, which I did. Captain Glass received me very kindly, and expressed his regret at the steps he was obliged to adopt, and trusted that I should find out the author of the base reports which led to them. I questioned Capt. Glass as to his being satisfied with regard to my documents, and the search he had made; he told me he was thoroughly so, and that it would be the means of doing away with any further suspicion. On the following day, the 6th, the Nimrod sailed for Hongkong. I removed the Friends whether in shore for convenience. On the 8th, I consigned my vessel to Messrs Gennell & Co. being personally acquainted with Mr. Barker, the head of the House, whom I had known at Valparaiso, and who partly promised me a charter for that place, which was what I wanted, when, to my utter surprise and astonishment, on the following day, the 9th, the Hebe tender arrived from Hongkong, and sent on board my vessel an armed force of 9 men under the command of Mr. Hynes before named. On my questioning him as to the purpose of so strange a visit, he replied, I am sent by order Capt. Nias of H. B. M. Ship Herald, Senior Officer of the Station, to take you and vessel to Hongkong, and on no account to allow you to communicate with the shore. I replied that such behaviour was more than cruel, and that nearly the whole of the children's linen with my own was on shore. Mr. Hynes said that he was sorry for it but he could not help it; he had received orders and he must obey; the vessel therefore was got underweigh immediately, and away we were dragged to Hongkong at which place we arrived on the following day at Noon, Jan'y. 10th. The Officer in charge went immediately on board of the Herald to report his arrival to Captain Nias; upon his leaving the vessel I begged of him to ask Captain Nias to allow me an interview as soon as convenient, wishing to know the reason of such rigorous proceedings. Shortly afterwards he returned with a verbal message for me to go on board, and to take my papers with me, which I did, and met three other Captains in his cabin. On his demanding my papers I handed them to him, one of which was my Sailing Letter, another the Certificate of my having Ten Guns mounted and other small arms, by R. Charlton, Esq. H. B. M. Consul at Oahu, and another being my Port Clearance from the last port, Manila. On inspection of which Captain Nias expressed himself not satisfied with them, and said that I was sailing the seas illegally and he would be damned if he would not seize my vessel and send me to Singapore. After this he applied to the other three Captains present, viz Captains Glass, Pritchard and I think Pearce, to join him in the seizure, but they all declined, upon which he said, I will take the responsibility on myself and the Brig Friends, shall be a prize to the Herald alone. Then begged of him to allow me to explain the nature of my case, offering to produce documents which would I felt assured, through my satisfaction that I had not been engaged in any unlawful trade, nor had I transgressed or violated any law to the best of my judgment; but all my remonstrances were in vain; he would listen to nothing, but ordered me on board to get my vessel ready for sea instantly, saying if I had gone to Sydney they would have seized my vessel. I told him I had been there, and added, that I thought I could produce my Port-clearance from thence; I accordingly went on board and very fortunately found the Port-clearance, which I sent him by my Chief Officer accompanied with a note, requesting permission to go on shore to make a few arrangements for my children. He would not allow it, nor would he permit me to communicate with the shore verbal or by letter. Under such cruel circumstances I sent an unsealed letter for his inspection, addressed to Mr. Harker at M. & Co., requesting him by some means to procure our linen which had been left there. Such was the inhuman conduct of Captain Nias, that a warrant officer was sent on board to prevent all communication, and myself thus confined as though I were an atrocious criminal—and at 6 P. M., Mr. Mill, mate of the Herald, with eight seamen and two marines, came on board and took entire charge of my vessel, to sail for Singapore. My letter to Mr. Harker, I find from letters received here, was not delivered until fourteen days after we had sailed, which was on January 11th, for Singapore, where we arrived (after considerable wear and tear of sails and ropes) on the 20th January. We remained here six days, when we were taken to Penang in consequence of the absence of the Recorder, and from Penang back to Singapore again, the Recorder having left Penang on circuit and being expected at Singapore, where we arrived, on 10th Feb'y. (after having lost a small anchor and a new buoy rope, with shills nearly torn to pieces.

Shortly after the arrival of the Recorder here, Capt Nias' Agents presented a Petition on his behalf, praying for a forfeiture of the Brig Friends and cargo upon the following grounds, namely—

- 1st. That if any vessel not duly registered, and not having British certificate, shall exercise privilege of British ships, the same shall be subjected to forfeiture.
- 2nd. That such act shall not affect vessels which (prior to that act) have been registered by Act of 6th of Geo 4th.

That the Petitioner was Senior Naval officer in Canton river when the Brig Friends, in January last arrived off the Coast of China under the British Flag—that suspecting its character and on calling for her papers found no Certificate of Registry—she was American built with a sailing letter. That among her papers, he found a Port-clearance from Sydney and a manifest of cargo and store-exported, and therefore trading where she was not entitled to do—that Port-clearance dated 6th March, 1840, states British Built, but the manifest American Built—that those papers were signed by P. Stewart, Collector of Customs, whereas Colonel Gibb was Collector at that time in Sydney. That the vessel states she was armed with four guns where she was mounted ten and that they were not specified in the sailing letter—that the said vessel did not correspond in her rig with sailing letter dated 10th March, 1838, which calls her Brigantine; whereas she is fully rigged a Brig—and that there was no limitation as to time or specification of voyage or destination in such letter.

This Petition was amended by adding the 11th Sec. Ch. 109 of the Nav. Act of the 6th of Geo. 4th.

Such are the grounds and evidences of illegality, upon which I have been dragged about from one place to another, to the ruination of my prospects and property, the whole of which might have been avoided, if Captain Nias had only condescended to listen to the explanation I had to offer, and which had so thoroughly satisfied Captain Cress.

I consider it unnecessary, in this place, to enter into a detailed reply to the charges against me. The statement I have already given, supported as it can be by unexceptionable evidence, must satisfy every unprejudiced mind. In reference to my Sydney Port-clearance however, I may remark that I have been told it was looked upon as the grand document which alone was sufficient to condemn me! That document it will be seen I voluntarily sent to Capt. Nias, which I certainly should not have done had I known it to be, what it has been called—a forgery. The fact is, it was then and I believe still is usual for subordinates in the Sydney

Customs-House to sign Port-clearances for the Collector, in proof of which I have now copies in my possession, obtained from commanders of vessels in these Roads, bearing diff'rent signatures and none of them that of the Collector. The manifest attached to the Port-clearance, is as stated on the face of it, a manifest of my original cargo, and not of cargo taken on board at Sydney, and therefore no proof of my having traded there.

The Court here declared it had no Jurisdiction to entertain the question submitted to it, and in concluding his Judgment, the Recorder mentioned the Petitioner to pause before he undertook the risk and responsibility of seeking an adjudication elsewhere.

Whether this hint operated as the cause I will not undertake to say—but on a proposal being submitted to me by Captain Nias' Agent, to restore the Friends, upon my resigning all claims on him arising from the seizure, I was upon mature consideration and by the advice of friends, induced to accede to it.

I have now brought my statement to a close and regret much I could not shorten its details. But I feel that I have not said more than was necessary for a full appreciation of the whole affair of the seizure of my vessel. I have retained from those comments which the facts above stated call for, leaving them to speak for themselves—satisfied if the objects of my communication are realised.

Enclosed is Copy of a Letter from the Foreign office, which bears so much upon this case, that I shall be obliged by your also publishing it at foot of this. It embodies the sentiments of the Duke of Wellington while Foreign Secretary, on this important subject, as appears by a copy of a despatch now with me, dated Foreign Office, 17th March, 1835, addressed to the Consul General of Mexico. The originals of these and other documents from the Board of Trade, and other Public Offices, bearing on this question, were shown to me by R. Charlton, Esq. H. M. Consul at Canton, from whom I obtained the Copies now in my possession. The sailing letter referred to was exact counter part of my own herewith sent. I also hand you the Report of a survey held on my vessel showing the state in which she has been restored to me.

With many apologies for thus trespassing on your time and columns.

I am Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

C. J. RUGG

FOREIGN OFFICE, Feb'y. 24th 1842

SIR,—With reference to your dispatch No. 47 of the 17th of June, and No. 63 of the 1st of August last, requesting instructions respecting Foreign built vessels owned by British subjects and trading under the British Flag, I am directed by Viscount Palmerston to forward for your information and guidance, a copy of the Instructions on this subject which were some time ago forwarded to H. M. Consul in the Sandwich Islands, and in Mexico, stating that vessels which are the property of British subjects are entitled to the protection of British Authorities in Foreign Ports, although they may not be entitled to the privileges of British registered vessels.

Lord Palmerston desires me to call your particular attention to the distinction between property and privilege; you will observe that a foreign ship does not become a British ship because British property. The Law of navigation declares that no ship unless duly registered shall be admitted to be a British ship, and therefore no advantages, accorded by treaty or otherwise to vessels under the denomination of British vessels, can be claimed by vessels which are not registered.

Lord Palmerston can hardly suppose a case in which the Rights of Property in a Foreign Country shall be so invaded, that British subjects claiming property in a vessel which has not become entitled to the British privileges of trade, can have occasion to require the protection of the British Consul in defence of that property; but it is clear that such British subject will not be the less entitled to claim protection for his property in such a case, merely because certain other vessels which are the property of British subjects, are in the employment of some exclusive privileges of trade his said vessel is not entitled to enjoy.

As it appeared to Lord Palmerston, that the sailing licence granted by Vice Consul Willmott to the Brig Agnescho, did not sufficiently mark the important distinction between British ships and ships which are merely the property of British subjects, His Lordship caused the question to be referred to the committee of Privy Council for trade, and I am directed by his Lordship to send you herewith the draft of a form of sailing letter, for the protection of ships owned by British subjects but not entitled to the privilege of British ships duly registered and navigated, which has been prepared by that Board, and I am to desire that you will adopt this form in any sailing letter which you may be called upon to grant under the present instructions.

I am &c.

(Signed) JOHN BIDWILL.

FORM OF SAILING LETTER.

No. 11.

For the protection of ships owned by British subjects, but not entitled to the privileges of British ships duly registered and navigated.

I the Honorable John Walpole, Her Britannic Majesty's Consul General in Chili, do grant this sailing letter, as above designated, for the use and navigation of the ship Friends, whereof Christopher James Rugg is at present Master, and whereof the said Christopher James Rugg is the sole owner. And I hereby make known to all Her Britannic Majesty's Ministers appointed to reside in Foreign Countries, and also to all other officers in Her said Majesty's service both Civil and Military, and also to the several constituted Authorities in Foreign Countries, that the said ship Friends is the property of a British subject, that she is therefore entitled under the laws of England to assume the British Flag, in all her Voyages, and to claim the protection of that Flag as a national distinction in all matters relating to the rights of property. But I do at the same time, make known, that by this sailing letter there are given to the said vessel no rights of trade, and particularly no license whatever to exercise any privilege of trade or navigation, which is by the laws of England confined to British ships properly so called, and provided with Certificates of British Registry, which is the only legal evidence of their title to that character, nor to exercise any privilege of trade or navigation which is by the laws of England confined to the ships of any Foreign Country owned and navigated by the subjects of such Country. But inasmuch as the British Laws of Navigation and Registry, do not preclude British subjects from employing ships other than British registered ships in voyages between Foreign Countries between which they trade, nor certain other cases, this sailing letter is granted to the said ship Friends in order that she may be duly protected as British property while employed in any such unrestricted voyages. And for the more certain identification of the said ship for which this sailing letter is granted, I do hereby certify, that she has one deck and two masts, that her length from the forepart of the main stem to the after part of her sternpost aloft, is ninety-six feet English; her breadth at the broadest part is twenty-eight feet English; her depth of hold is ten feet two inches English; that she is rigged as a brigantine or hermaphrodite brig, with a standing bowsprit, is square sterned, has no quarter galleries, is carvel built, has a billet head with the figure of a bird, with a rise of three feet nine inches English to the quarter deck and that she measures about two hundred and four and one half tons; according to the mode of measurement prescribed by the British Act 5th and 6th William the fourth Cap. 56 p. 2, to regulate the measurement of the tonnage and burden of the Merchant shipping of the United Kingdom passed in the year 1835.

In witness whereof I have heretofore subscribed my name and affixed my Consular Seal in Santiago at Chili, this tenth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty eight.

JOHN WALPOLE.

Her Britannic Majesty's Consul Gen. in Chili.

No. 3.

At the request of Capt. C. J. Rugg of the Brig Friends, we have this day holden a survey on board the said vessel now lying at anchor in Singapore Roads, and found her in the following condition.

HULL.—Head rails, ports, and the fittings under the top gallant forecastle requiring great repair.

SALES.—Upon examination found they required thorough repair.

RIGGING.—In such a state that it is necessary to be overhauled and refitted.

BOATS.—Useless for want of repair; launches, nearly in the same condition.

Also an immense quantity of yams in the hold, rotten and rotting.

And we are of opinion that it will require an outlay of one thousand dollars or upwards to put her in the condition she was when taken possession of by Captain Niss of H. M. S. Herald on the 9th Jan'y. at Macao, according to the statement of the Commander and his Chief officer.

It appears this vessel has been sent down here in charge of Mr. Edward Hill, mate, and a party of men from H. M. S. Herald, for adjudication, afterwards sent on to Penang, and again brought back here, and finally released by Messrs Shaw, Whitehead & Co., Agents of Captain Niss, on the 25th instant, the Court here not having jurisdiction in the case. From the statement of Captain Ruge, and his chief officer, from what we have seen on board, together with the fact of the vessel's sails never having been furled whilst lying in this roadstead, until some few days ago, which came under our own personal observation; we are of opinion that the state of wreck which every thing on board is in, must have been occasioned by the carelessness and negligence of the prize master and his party, and is not the effect of ordinary wear and tear.

Commander, ship Dowthorp.

CABOOL AFFAIRS.

(From the Englishman, Feb'y 5.)

We republish the following which appeared in an Extra last night, that no portion of the intelligence may be left out of our regular paper:—

There are letters from Jellalabad of January 15th and from Peshawar of January 20th. The former of these states that a note had come in from Major Thain, dated Jugguluck January 11, mentioning that the troops retreating from Cabool had reached that place on their march on that day, when General Elphinstone would appear to have given himself up to Mohamed Akbar Khan, to be detained until Jellalabad should be evacuated, in pursuance of the arrangements made at Cabool. After this the troops marched suddenly during the night of the 11th in advance from Jugguluck, on receiving information of intended treachery. They were in disorder during this night march, when Doctor Brydon, with Captain Colver and Doctor Harper of the 5th Cavalry, and Captain Hopkins of the 27th N. I., separated from them on issuing from the Jugguluck Pass, and Doctor Brydon escaped into Jellalabad, wounded. The other three officers were killed, and on the 14th January, when the Cavalry from Jellalabad went out for exercise, they found the bodies of these officers, who were buried within the walls of Jellalabad on that night.

* No enemy had approached Jellalabad up to the 15th January.

* The Peshawar intelligence is that the brigade under Brigadier Wild finds a difficulty in retaining its hold over the Khyber Pass. Two regiments had been thrown into Ali Musjed, but were straitened for ammunition and food, and when on the morning of the 19th January, the two other Regiments endeavoured to reach Ali Musjed with a Convoy, they were resisted by overwhelming numbers and were unable to effect their object. About 110 men are mentioned to have been killed and wounded in the attempt. Brigadier Wild was wounded, but is said to be doing well.

* No effective co-operation in regard to the movements within the Pass had been obtained from the Sikh troops.

(From the Englishman, Jan'y 31.)

On Saturday the Government received letters from Jellalabad to the 12th, and from Cabool to the 4th instant.

The substance of the Cabool intelligence was that the Force was to march towards Jellalabad on the next day, but that they were uncertain as to the faith that would be kept with them, expecting, however, no attack until they reached Jugguluck.

Six Hostages had been given, Capt. Drummond, 3d Cavalry, Lieut. Conolly, Lieut. Eyre, Lieut. Warburton, Brevet Capt. Walsh and Lieut. Webb, of the Madras Army, in Shah Soojah's Service.

All the sick had been sent into the city to the care of Mohamed Zeman Khan.

It appears certain that Mohamed Akbar Khan had openly proclaimed, and gloried in, the deliberate murder of Sir William Macnaghten.

The Peshawar letter of the 15th instant, forwarding the above intelligence, states:—"Ali Musjed was again attacked by 1,500 men, who were beaten back. To-night the 64th and 53rd march to reinforce the garrison."

(From the Englishman, Feb'y 4.)

In this day's Military Chronicle will be found a most melancholy list of the Officers who have fallen in the Cabool force, since the 2d of November last the date of the insurrection. We give this mournful roll with such decent observance as it is in our power to bestow, and we have taken all possible pains to avoid including in it the names of any officers whose fate is still doubtful, though reports may have included them among the list of slain. The perusal of this document will bring sorrow to many a home both in India and in England, and alas! it is certain that it is still imperfect—that more—many more—will have to be added to it, as we continue to be supplied with authentic information concerning this great catastrophe.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 16th April, 1842.

We give below Sir Henry Pottinger's Circular of 8th inst. giving a detailed account of the attack of the British forces on the town of Tsekee and the Chinese encampments near it. We last week published such details of this gallant affair as we had gathered from letters we had seen, and they will be found in the main to agree with the official account. The attack lately made on Ningpo, the gathering of troops in its neighbourhood, and the threatened repetition of offensive warlike measures, are new features in the Chinese war.

Hitherto the Chinese have, with few exceptions, confined themselves to defensive operations only; they have at least until now never marched troops against the English, and been the first to attack. The firing on the vessels at Canton, and the treacherous attack then made, can scarcely be considered a deviation from this practice. At the time of the attack on the shipping and the factories at Canton, the Chinese seem to have imagined that they had to deal with an enemy much inferior to them in force; in fact, but few of the smaller ships of war were then there, and the Chinese hoped, with little exposure to themselves to destroy them by their batteries and fireships, and to possess themselves of the persons of the unarmed British merchants. Every one is aware of the reluctance the army then in Canton evinced for a fight, and of the, to them, shameful arrangement then made, by which the army supposed to have amounted to between 40 and 50,000 men was obliged to leave the City, without hardly a sword being drawn by these valiant defenders of their country, and to remove to a safe distance before an enemy little more than 3000 strong.

During the whole of last year, and the year before, no attempt was made to recover Chusan; and Amoy, Chusan, Ningpo, and Chinhae, have now been upwards of six months in possession of the English, while the Chinese have until lately not made the slightest effort to repossess themselves of any of them. That the Chinese are not wanting in inclination to drive the invaders from their country, we are well assured of, nor has the hope of terminating the differences between the two countries, by treaty and without further effusion of blood, had any share in their inactivity; for up to this moment not a single communication has been received by Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary from the Chinese government, who seems to express by this obstinate silence a determination to resist to the uttermost. We must therefore seek for other causes to explain the little resistance until lately experienced; and the history of the country, almost ever since its subjection to the Manchoo Tartars, and the natural repugnance to war for which the Chinese have ever been remarkable, may perhaps satisfactorily explain it. Kienlung was the last warlike emperor of the present dynasty, and during his long reign he subjected a great part of Tartary to his sway, by sending large armies to that thinly peopled country, of which he boasts of having extirpated the greatest number of its inhabitants. But besides that Chinese official papers relating to warfare must be received with the greatest caution, that war was so very far removed from the present theatre of hostilities that it is very possible the soldiers and natives of the sea-board were not even aware of the existence of hostilities that have afforded so many materials to the pencil of the Imperial poet. After the suppression of Koxinga, the whole sea-board of China has enjoyed an uninterrupted peace during nearly 200 years, and this same peace has, with a very few and unimportant interruptions, been shared by almost the whole of the immense extent of China proper. The Tartars, on ascending the throne, accepted the laws of the country, probably as being the most convenient for despotism; these laws place the civilian in a much higher rank than the soldier, and it is natural to suppose that the discipline of the army soon degenerated during a long peace, and that the people would press into the ranks of the literati rather than the army, as only in the former they had a prospect of honours and emoluments. Thus discipline and the exercise of arms became utterly neglected, until at length it may be suspected that the army existed only upon paper, and that although the statutory number of soldiers may have been inscribed, no duty was ever exacted from officers or men. Instances have come under our notice of men, shopkeepers or mechanics in and near Canton, holding rank in the army because it secured to them some immunities, but who never expected to do the duties of a soldier, and who were not a little surprised and disappointed, when about two years since they were called upon to serve. We have also seen with what difficulty Commissioner Lin collected a few recruits, when he began to suspect that war would be the consequence of his rash acts; and from the very high pay offered to recruits we may judge of the dislike in which the Chinese people hold the life and dangers of a soldier. In time of peace, the arsenals being sufficiently filled with arms and clothing, no difficulty is experienced in equipping for any emergency a sufficient number of the inhabitants of any district, to make a respectable show; but these soldiers naturally disappear at the first shot fired; nor will they even wait to look at the enemy unless they are paid for it extra. At Chuenpee they extorted a gift from the Admiral, nor is it likely that so many of them would there have lost their lives, if their retreat had not been cut off.

From all these considerations we cannot help coming to the conclusion that the long hesitation of the Chinese before they attempted to take the field, had no other cause than want of men, i. e. of such as with their dress would also assume the duties of soldiers. By great exertions they had at length, in Chekeang, succeeded in drawing together a considerable body of troops wherever to attack the enemy; it is probable that even there the soldiers refused to fight except for an extra donative, as four or five dollars were found in the pouches of most of the killed; and having been repulsed with great slaughter, both at Ningpo and Tsekee, it is probable that it will be a long while before a similar body of fighting soldiers can again be assembled. Whether the people are equally unwarlike in the northern provinces remains to be seen—but a reluctance to meet an enemy will also very likely there be evinced; for the so-called Chinese army can hardly be considered in any other light than that of a militia—almost all of the soldiers inscribed in it being engaged in some trade or handicraft for which the few calls of military duty leave them ample time.

Of late we have had to record the departure from China, of many of the older residents; and have now to regret that of LANCELOT DENT Esq., who in the Ariel is about embarking this day for Madras on his way home. Mr Dent has resided about 18 years in China, and was during the greater part of that long period at the head of the well known house of Messrs DENT & Co. and his absence will be felt by many who were guided by his advice, who shared in his liberality, or who had the advantage of enjoying his friendship. In the departure of Mr. Dent from China we regret the loss to our community of an upright straight forward British merchant, a kind and considerate friend to many, and a liberal supporter of most of the charitable and missionary institutions here. We heartily wish him a speedy and prosperous voyage home, and that there he may long enjoy in happiness the well earned fruits of an industrious life.

We have received a communication from Hongkong on the subject of the lately appointed land committee, but some parts of it appearing to us objectionable, for publication, we content ourselves with the following extract.

"But let us analyze the Committee of Hong Kong Lands and Roads. We would first draw the attention of our readers to the fact, that this curious Committee is self-elected, wholly irrespective of the voice of those most concerned—the land proprietors—without responsibility to give a warranty or guarantee as to the legality of their decisions; without an authoritative announcement of the island's permanent legislation, or even giving the proprietors the long promised documents to show by what title or tenure they might legally claim possession of their lands, after conforming to the decisions of the Committee.

"The whole proceeding is a strange anomaly; and despite what the 'Friend'—perhaps we should have more justly said their 'Friend'—says the nomination of the parties constituting the Committee has excited the utmost astonishment and surprise amongst all True Hongkongers. The only man whose acquaintance with the subject whose opinions and impartial judgment in these matters, would have commanded the respect and confidence of all, has been, strange to say, and we conceive unjustly excluded. Captain MYLIUS has the pleasurable (?) duty of attending and giving effect to the decisions of the Committee."

The writer next expatiates upon the constitution of the committee, the members of which, he says, have been nominated by the gentleman whose name appears first in the official appointment, and therefore that he, in fact, is the committee. That a committee, whose duties must necessarily be of some duration, should have been chosen of persons who all of them may and probably will, be called away on duty at any moment, surprises us and most who have seen that appointment. The exclusion of the gentleman most conversant with the matters to be submitted to the committee, namely Capt MYLIUS, may justly surprise our correspondent; but he may have been excluded on consideration that he might, on differences arising and having to be adjusted, be considered as agent for the government, a party concerned, and that as such he was not to be his own judge in cases between himself and other parties.

We have had no arrivals this week from India with later dates than we were previously in possession of, but have extracted from papers since come to hand some more particulars of the distressing Affghanistan losses. It is to be hoped, and cannot be doubted, that the most energetic measures for the adequate punishment of the Affghans will be immediately taken. A large force is already assembled on the bulwage.

The Ann MacKinn from New York the 20th December, arrived here the day before yesterday, after a remarkably short passage. We understand she brings dates from England a few days later than the December Overland mail, but her papers and letters, if she has any, have not yet been delivered and we are therefore ignorant whether she brings any important intelligence.

We regret to learn that during last week's very heavy rains a number of houses at Hongkong, and ground prepared for building on, have been very much injured. This will however serve as a warning to others, about building, not to disregard the necessary precautions.

It is said, with what truth we know not, that the Chinese are making preparations at the Bogue to rebuild the forts there, and that M. S. Herald and Cruiser and H. C. Steamers Thoroughly and Arctique, have on Wednesday last gone thither, from Hongkong and Macao Roads to ascertain, we suppose, the truth of these reports, and to destroy such works as may have been commenced. It is excessively foolish in the Chinese to attempt these works at the Bogue, they having been repeatedly warned against it; but the orders from the court are peremptory, and they are perhaps obliged, in order to convince the Emperor of the impossibility, to make a show at least of obedience; the interruption of their labors by the British ships of war will release them from all further responsibility.

On Tuesday last the 12th inst., the U. S. S. Comatula, Commodore KERRY, left Macao roads for Whampoa; it is probable that the Commodore will, as Capt. Coeille has been admitted to an interview with the provincial authorities, as the scene of late to have evinced an anxiety for the friendship of the officers of nations not English. The Commodore will we suppose have to make several claims for injuries inflicted upon his countrymen by the Chinese and we doubt not that he will therein be successful if the Chinese appearing desirous to obtain the good opinion of neutrals.

The French Frigate Brigone we understand to leave Macao for the northern coast of China by the end of last or beginning of this month.

We have devoted a large portion of this week's paper to the case of the Brig Frie seized in January last by Capt Nias, senior Naval officer commanding in the Canton River, the subject being one of considerable importance to the mercantile community. It will be seen that the Honble the Recorder refused to adjudicate in this case, on the ground of its being one of Revenue, over which admiralty or other courts, not in Great Britain or to the Isles of Guernsey etc. have no jurisdiction. From the statement of the master of the Friends it will be seen that the seizure of the ship was attended by to him very severe loss and inconvenience, and that he could only recover possession of his property from the captor's agents by resigning all claims on him arising from the seizure. The treatment Captain Rugg describes having received from Capt Nias, his not being allowed to have any intercourse with the shore, or with his agents; his being refused to give to Capt Nias himself an explanation which would probably have explained the apparent irregularity of the ship's papers to that officer's satisfaction, are acts of severity or even oppression which the occasion does not seem to have called for. That the captor's agents had to pay the defendant's agent's costs is but little satisfaction to Capt Rugg, since all hope of redress against Captain Nias for damages is denied him. Had he not given this release to the agents of the latter, we suppose the prize master would have proceeded to England with the vessel, and although there is every probability that the complainant would have been reimbursed the loss of time, of a perishable cargo, and law expenses were prospective evils much greater than those already suffered.

We publish for general information the following extract of a letter from Bombay relating to Overland letters.

"We are not aware of any extra charge for overland letters sealed with wax, beyond that arising from the additional weight caused by the wax. It is not necessary to send letters intended to be forwarded by the overland mail for Great Britain to an agent at the Presidencies, but the postage of letters for foreign Europe must be paid in India and they therefore require to be sent to an Agent."

CIRCULAR.

TO HER BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S SUBJECTS IN CHINA.

Her Britannic Majesty's Plenipotentiary in China has the highest satisfaction in announcing to Her Majesty's subjects—that he has this day received official intelligence that a body of Chinese select troops, estimated at from 8 to 10,000 men, partly forming the garrison of the district city of Tackee (10 miles from Ningpo) and partly posted in a strongly fortified camp on the heights close to that city, were totally defeated with the loss of all their guns, small arms, ammunition, stores, camp equipage &c. (both in the city and camp) by Her Majesty's combined forces on the 15th of last month.

Accounts had for some time before reached their Excellencies the Naval and Military Commanders in Chief, of the assemblage of troops at Tackee, and as there was reason to believe they intended to retire on Pihwan: forty miles distant, in consequence of the repulses sustained by the Chinese forces at Ningpo and Chumhai on the morning of the 10th March, their Excellencies determined to make a rapid movement in the hope of bringing them to action before they could retrograde.

The troops, seamen, and marines were accordingly embarked in the Nemesis, Phlegreion and Queen steamers, towing a number of boats of the squadron, early on the morning of the 15th, and after proceeding 16 miles by the River and marching five, reached Tackee at half past three o'clock, when a fire was opened on them by some guns from the ramparts, and a considerable body of matchlock men, who retired on receiving a few rounds from two small field pieces, and the walls were immediately scaled without further resistance.

The chief body of the British troops &c. marched round outside the town, and were joined at the east gate by the escalading party, where the whole had an excellent view of the Chinese forces entrenched on two distinct lofty hills in front, and on the left. Arrangements were directly made for advancing to attack and dislodge them as nearly as possible at the same instant. This manoeuvre succeeded admirably, and although the enemy disputed the possession of their steep and difficult position so obstinately that many instances of hand to hand combat occurred, Her Majesty's forces gallantly and steadily persevered in their ascent under an unceasing fire, until their summits were gained and the rout of the Chinese army became complete at all points, and was followed up by a pursuit which was continued till sunset.

Whilst these operations were going on upon the heights, the small steamers (Phlegreion and Nemesis) accompanied by some of the boats of H. M. Ships, proceeded up a branch of the main river leading in the direction of the entrenched camp, where they destroyed a number of gunboats and fire vessels; and shortly after, on the fugitives from the Chinese camp passing near them, they landed their small crews, and pursued them in various directions, putting a number hors de combat.

It is estimated that the enemy could not have lost fewer than 1000 men killed, in these different affairs, independent of great numbers that were carried off wounded, and amongst whom are known to have been many mandarins and officers of rank.

Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary has not received the return of casualties in her Majesty's land forces, but he regrets to mention that three were killed and fifteen wounded (most of them severely) in the Naval Brigade.

The British forces remained the night of the 15th in the Chinese deserted camp, and the next day, after the necessary delay of embarking the wounded, destroying the guns, wallpieces, and matchlocks, as well as the useless provisions and ammunition, and burning the camp and barracks; the Commander-in-Chief pushed forward to a second entrenched camp about seven miles from Tackee at the Changhe pass, but it was found that it had been evacuated during the night, and after destroying the works and burning everything that was ignitable, including the Joss house and other buildings, which had been converted into Magazines, or barracks, H. M.'s forces returned to Tackee the same evening and to Ningpo on the 17th.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.
HENRY POTTINGER,
H. M. Plenipotentiary.

SINGAPORE.

The shipping report of the week announces the arrival of the Clown and Columbine from Calcutta; the former having left Town on the 12th and the Sandheads on the 24th ult. and the latter from Town the 21st and the Sandheads on the 24th ult. The advices we have received by them give the following particulars of the 2nd Opium Sale:

	Chests	Highest	Lowest	Average.
Patna.	1,395	855	825	$24 5 11
Bengals	950	813	810	$10 2 8

At the date of our advices, however, a decline had taken place, and quotations were, for Patna $10 Rs. and for Bruce No. 800 per chest. The Clarion, Fortescue, and Louisa were to leave shortly for the Straits and China, and the Anna Watson & Lawrence were both heading for the same destination.—Sing. Free Press, 14th March.

The Bengal papers we have received by the late arrivals continue to furnish the most affecting details relative to the Cabool disaster. Up to the date of the latest accounts from Jullahabad Dr. Brydon was still the only survivor from the force that had reached that station—and from the account he gives of the horrors of that dreadful march there seems too much reason to fear that few if any will escape the fate from which he was so providentially rescued. It is stated that the force which by the infatuation and impetuosity of its commander was thus consigned to destruction, amounted to no less than 6,500 fighting men, with about 7,000 camp followers—a calamity without a parallel in our annals, unaccompanied by the most base and cruel treachery. To what extent the military misconduct of General Elphinstone is accountable for this disaster, it is perhaps premature to determine—but, look at it which way we will, all appearances are against him, and be taken that a proper spirit was wanting in the hour of need to the man to whom in an unhappy hour the fate of the thousands of brave men was confided. But we must refer our readers to the Extracts we have republished above from the Bengal papers on this distressing theme—it is however gratifying to observe from the following account from the Englishman of the 19th Feb., that the wives and families of the officers are in safety, and receiving considerable treatment:—

"A letter was received in town yesterday evening from one of the ladies confined in the Fort of Lughman, dated 18th January, in which she says 'we have little cause to complain of our present treatment, and are allowed to walk within the walls of the Fort.' It appears they have plenty of provisions, and their husbands are with them. Speaking of the children, she describes them as being in good health. The whole of their baggage is lost, and they saved nothing beyond the clothes on their backs, and she believes all the rest of the ladies are equally unfortunate. She describes the march and sufferings they endured on the retreat from Cabool as most severe, but is prevented stating all she could wish for fear of the letter falling into the hands of the enemy. Two ladies lost each a child; Mrs. Anderson's is safe at Cabool. The other was on a camel which was shot; the child fell with it, and for some hours was missing, but one of the Chiefs sent swarms in search of it, and it was restored to its parents on the following morning.

The ladies are assured that on the opening of the Passes they will be allowed to leave under safe escort to Jullahabad. She thanks God that she went to Cabool with her husband, as had she not done so, he would certainly have been murdered, and it was only the presence of the ladies that saved the lives of the married men. In regard to Shah Soojah, of whom so little has been heard throughout these transactions, we find the following quoted in the Englishman from the Friend of India of 17th ult.

"The accounts from Cabool are most singular. A letter from an officer there states, that Shah Soojah is King, that the chiefs of the insurrection had made their submission to him; that Mahomed Zeman, one of the leaders among the insurgents, had been appointed prime minister, and that every thing was quiet and tranquil. This state of things is inexplicable. It would be unfair to condemn Shah Soojah as having been privy to the insurrection, merely because he has not become its victim. We know that on the first intelligence of the attack on Buzeh, he sent his own son to rescue him, that the youth performed wonders; and that several hundred of his men fell. However deep may be the perfidy of the Afghan character, it is incredible that he should have assisted in getting up the rebellion in order to rid himself of the Peris, &c.—Ibid.

CABOUL.

The following extract from a Jullahabad letter of the 18th ult., gives a most harrowing detail of the butchery that took place between Cabool and Jugaluluck, on one unhappy troop:—It is given direct from Doctor Brydon's narrative, and was obtained from him when he had quite recovered his strength and composure after all he had endured. It is a fearful tale:—

"Mahomed Ukhbar had detained them on divers passages at different places, while the road in front was being occupied by his directions by the blundering Rebels, and as they advanced, they found the hills and passes were swarming with savages, who shot down our devoted force like so many dogs, without any attempt at defence for our men actually gave themselves up as ready-made for the slaughter! The native troops shot at a man were slaughtered at the pass of the Huff Kohul, which is between Khord Cabool and Tazeh. After a halt of one day at Khord Cabool, they moved on the morning of the 10th, and reached Tazeh, (those who arrived at least) at dusk; they halted for two hours in the snow, and then pushed on in the dusk, and on they pursued their weary way till they reached Jugaluluck, having accomplished a distance of 25 miles with only a remnant of the 44th with the colours, and about a dozen of men of the 5th N. I., with one of their colours, they were here placed in a ruined inclosure by Mahomed Ukhbar, commanded by hills all round, from which they were, as they lay, worn out and helpless on the snow, fired on and slaughtered all day. The 44th here behaved well, as they stormed and took the most dangerous hill twice over, but fatigued as they were, they could not remain in possession of it. The only meal they made here, was on horseflesh, indifferently cooked by the aid of such stunted bushes as grew scantily near their position. One officer gave 12 Rs. for a small chapatee, and 5 Rs. was offered every where for a lot of water, for they had not patience to melt the snow.—Though why does not appear, Elphinstone, Shelton, a Low-Pay Master Johnson went off from this place at the bidding of Mahomed Ukhbar to treat again—some two miles up to a small Fort on one side—and towards evening a note was received from Elphinstone to the effect that they were all detained as hostages, and recommending the force to move off quietly after dark as he saw nothing but treachery was to be expected. Off they moved under our worthy Brigadier's flag, and from that moment the little order that had hitherto prevailed, ceased, and the 44th became an undisciplined rabble, threatening to shoot their officers, and every man who attempted to bring them to a sense of their duty; the enemy hanging on their rear and cutting down every man they approached with perfect impunity. After quitting the Jugaluluck Pass from 29 or 30 officers who still kept their horses, slowly away from the mutinous soldiery and rode on ahead; many of them wounded. They reached Gundannuck in pretty decent order before day break; but after that they, the officers began to struggle, many taking to different roads. 6 or 8 reached Putehbad, 10 miles from this about ten o'clock in the morning; but by this time the villagers were all up and attacking them all along the road with sticks and stones and a few matchlocks. At this place Brydon and Steer of the 37th, were left to their fate by Hopkins Collyer and Hupper, who were better mounted and who rode off in spite of all their entreaties. Brydon and Steer rode on together for some way, till at last Steer's horse fairly gave in, and he made off to the low hills, among which he hoped to find a cave, of which there are many, to hide himself till night; vain hope! for they were observed by hundreds all round. Poor Brydon, this left to himself, jogged on quietly till he got within 4 miles of Jullahabad when in the distance he saw a party of horsemen leading off an officer's horse; little B. who is game to the marrow defended himself manfully till his sword was broken off short at the handle, when he flung the handle in the rebels' face, having been wounded in the hand and knee himself; his hand fell on the pommel of his saddle, which motion he supposed, the man took to be his hold of his pistol, for he then instantly galloped off like a shot leaving B. free from future vexation. The man who attacked B. had Hopkins' cloak with him—so there could be no doubt of the fate of that party—and the next day our cavalry in patrolling the valley came upon the three bodies all stripped and fearfully mutilated. The enemy, tired and glutted with slaughter, may have spared a few in the hope of profiting by their ransom; and we have heard that there are some 7 or 8 off each by ones and twos in different Forts within 20 miles of this; Steer is lying wounded in a village 8 miles off in the hands of the rabble, who are a ring of course all kind of insults; we hope, but feebly, that some of them may be got in. The Lady Mianghien, Lady Sale, Mrs. Sturt, Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. Trevor, Mrs. Anders, & Mrs. Erre, all in fact who were handed over to Mahomed Ukhbar during the halt in Khord Cabool—together with their husbands and General Elphinstone, Shelton, Johnston, Lawrenson, Troop and a few others—have all been brought down into a strong Fort in the Lughman country some 40 miles from this; what may be their fate we scarcely dare to predict. We are all to a man burning for revenge, and if our men are not well guided, a rich and glorious one will we reap. You may take it for granted that H. M. 44th, the 5th, 37th, 54th, N. I., Shah's 6th, the 3rd Cavalry and Anderson's horse are totally annihilated. Somewhere about 180 Officers names may be traced from the army list Mahomed Ukhbar, the incarnate fiend, is in Lughman—raining the country, and we see from the walls now moving up in all directions to join him, and in 3 days more we expect to be invested, and W. d's Brigade will have to fight to us; we desire no better—never fear for us, we will do the trick cleverly. Cabul we hear is in a state of fearful anarchy. Some 3 or 4 different parties all struggling for the mastery; the old Shah is yet the strongest; we have there about 240 sick and wounded in the hands of the rebel King, and two doctors, besides 6 hostages, Doctors Berwick and Campbell, John Croftly, Walsh and Webb, (2 Mulls) Drummond, Warburton and Airey. These we look upon as safe enough, for the old man has been very kind to them, and will no doubt continue so. However, I confess myself I would rather be where I am. There were 4 doctors killed in the Haft Kohul. Poor old Dr. Duff, Maxrath, Bryce and Cardew; my worthy kindhearted comrade, Anquetil, it is supposed was killed in the Jugaluluck pass. This must suffice for the present, I believe that if I can put out in this eventful struggle, I shall die and die gaug.—Englishman, 12th Feb.

AFGHANISTAN.

As the following intelligence from Afghanistan is of a somewhat less gloomy nature than any which we have lately received we hasten to lay it before our readers. It is derived from the best source:—

A letter from Jullahabad of the 24th January states, 'Mahomed Akbar shows no disposition at present to molest us, and if we remain at peace a few days longer, we shall have completed a ditch round the walls, which will make them very secure against escalade or mining. A letter received from an English officer at Cabool mentions, that all the chiefs, have submitted to the Shah. Nawab Mahomed Zeman Khan has been appointed Prime Minister, Ameen Oo in Lughman (one of the first Leaders in the Insurrection) has been named Ameen ood Dowla, &c. &c.

A Peshawar letter of January 28th says, 'Two Sowers of Capt. Anderson's horse arrived here last night having effected their escape from Ali Musjid, below which about 60 horse of Mahomed Akbar are encamped. They state that General Elphinstone, Brigadier Shelton, Captains Boyd, Johnson, Anderson, Framp, Lawrence, with all the ladies, are prisoners of Mahomed Ukhbar Khan in the fort of Mahomed Shah Khan Ghilzee, in Lughman.

Nawab Mahomed Zeman Khan Barakzye, who has been made Minister, is no friend either of Dost Mahomed Khan, or of Mahomed Akbar Khan. The latter disapproved his house when he drove him from Jullahabad. The Shah can only keep Nawab Mahomed Zeman Khan in power until he finds an opportunity of removing him. Mahomed Akbar Khan has, it appears to me, been sent on this expedition by the existing Government at Cabul, in order to get rid of him. He has no force, with which to appear before Jullahabad; and therefore has chosen the route of Rana, Gostin and Lalpours.

Para Baz Khan, with our newly raised Levies of Horse and Foot, arrived here yesterday, having evacuated Lalpours on the mere rumour of Mahomed Akbar's arrival at Kama. I had hoped that he would not have left without a struggle to maintain his post, but our being compelled to retire from Ali Musjid would appear to have deprived him of courage. Sandut Khan has been reinstated at Lalpours.—We must expect to have our communication from Jullahabad cut off from this date.

A subsequent letter from Peshawar of January 29th, says, 'A messenger just came from Khyber reports that Mahomed Akbar's servant had brought some 1,500 Rs. for the Maliks of Khyber, and had told the Maliks that Mahomed Akbar would himself arrive in a day or two, and present them with Khilats;—but that, with regard to the 20 stipends, he must refer them to His Majesty Shah Soojah, on whom they would in future depend for their payment. The Atreder Maliks were not well pleased at the small sum brought by Mahomed Akbar's Messenger. They had come to the determination to keep Ali Musjid themselves, and not again allow it to be garrisoned by the troops of the Cabool Government.

(From the Englishman Extra, 30th Feb.)

We hasten to lay before our readers the following account of the victory gained on the 12th instant, from an authentic source:—

There are letters from Candahar of the 23rd January, from which the following account of a Victory gained by our troops, on the 12th January, is extracted.—Having heard of the approach of a considerable body of Insurgents to Candahar, General Nott took out with him a most overpowering Force—16 Gns., 55 Regiments of Infantry, and one thousand horses, the town being garrisoned by three Regiments and a Wing, but the Cantons were altogether abandoned. Mahomed Atta on the 11th marched bravely down in the Urgundah Valley, and on the 12th took up a position on the right bank of the river in the heart of the Alakhozie country in the village Khalishah Kohak, distant about five miles to the west of Candahar. He brought about three thousand men with him from Dehla and was joined by about some two thousand more from the Alakhozie villages, as he marched down the river. His position was strong, guarded in front by canals, and an ugly marsh, and his flanks rested on strong gardens. As soon, however, as we could get the troops across the river and bring their guns into play, the altogether lost heart. The fire of his matchlockmen from the canal gave severe (for a short time, but did not do extraordinarily little injury, and when our Infantry advanced to the charge, he broke and fled. That the Doozanee made such a very bad fight of it was partly owing to dissensions among themselves. Fyz Talib Khan, a Chief in our interests, deserted them when they took up position. The Jan Baz Sirdar also tried to come to us, and they were suspicious even of the Prince. Under no circumstance, however, could they have stood for half an hour against our overpowering force. The enemy's Cavalry endeavoured to make a stand beyond the village, but Leeson and Hahlane charged, and drove them from the field. The number of bodies which the Doozanee have buried amount to 150, and there may have been between 1 and 200 wounded. Our own loss is very trifling,—three killed and some twenty or thirty wounded. Three officers were wounded. Chamberlain of the Bengal 16th (mentioned afterwards to be doing well), Macdonald of our 19th and Lee of H. M. 40th. In the enemy's tanks, the Alekhozle villagers were the chief sufferers.

Before this, it is said, on the 10th or 11th Jan.—A party of the Doorances attacked the Camels of the 43rd Regiment, which had gone out for Bhason, but were beaten off by the E-for. This was a spirited little affair, the Hindostanee Escort, consisting of about 40 men and the enemy mustering 400 Horse and Foot. The Sepoys formed rallying square, repulsed the Doorances repeatedly, and brought in all the Camels safely.

Of the general condition of the country in this quarter it is mentioned. 'There has been no rising of consequence in any district but those through which M. domed. Atia passed between Keli and Camlahar. The Government grain even in many places still remain untouched. Girahk is strong, the Barukze Chief at the Helmand is staunch to our cause. The Western Frontier is undisturbed. The city is supplied as usual from the neighbouring villages, and many of the town people who had fled in anticipation of a siege, are returning to their homes.'

The Garrison of Kelati-i-Ghizic is described as 'safe and comfortable.'

January Overland Mail.

From the London Overland Mail, 4th Jan.

COURT.

The Queen has been pleased to order letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, for creating his Royal Highness the Prince of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland (Duke of Saxony, Duke of Saxe-Altenburg, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles, and Great Steward of Scotland) Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester. As the descendant of the immortal patriot, King Robert the Bruce, the infant prince is Prince and Steward of Scotland, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Lord of the Isles, and Baron of Renfrew, and, as such, stands at the head of the roll of the peers of Scotland, entitled to exercise all the functions therein belonging. The title of Duke of Rothesay was first conferred by Robert III. on David, Earl of Carrick, Prince and Steward of Scotland, his eldest son, at Scone, on the 28th of April, 1398. This was the first introduction of the ducal dignity into Scotland. When David fell a victim to the ambitious views of his uncle, the Duke of Albany leaving no issue, his honours were conferred upon James King Robert's only surviving son, afterwards James I. of Scotland. From that period till above titles have been vested in the first-born son of the heir apparent of the reigning sovereign, who, from the moment of his birth, or his parent's accession to the throne, becomes a Scottish prince and peer.

The patent creating the Duke of Cornwall Prince of Wales, after setting forth his titles as—'Him, our said most dear son, the Prince of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, as has been ascertained, we do enoble and invest with the said Principality and Earldoms, by giving him with a sword, by putting a coronet on his head, and a gold ring on his finger, and also by delivering a gold rod into his hand, that he may preside there, and may direct and defend those parts.'

The baptism of the Prince of Wales is expected to take place about the 28th of January, at St. George's Chapel Windsor. The sponsors invited to 'swear at the font for the future monarch of this great empire are, the King of Prussia, the Duke of Cambridge, Ferdinand Duke of Saxe-Coburg, uncle to Prince Albert, the Princess Sophia, and the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg. His Majesty the King of Prussia at first declined to accept the invitation to act persona as sponsor for the young Prince of Wales, but a second invitation, conveyed in an autograph letter from the Queen Victoria, induced his Majesty to revoke his first determination. It is now understood that his Majesty will leave Berlin for London on the 17th January, and proceed to Cologne, where he will take the railway, and will pass through Belgium in Alsace. At that port an English steam vessel will be in readiness to convey him to England. His Majesty's suite will occupy ten carriages. Besides General Van Nizner, Neumann, and Rosler, there are mentioned among the individuals who are to accompany the King, Baron Alexander von Humboldt, Count von Stolberg, Bishop Neander.

Another account is, that his Majesty will be conveyed to this country from Ostend in his Majesty's ship Warrigite 50, Capt. Lord John Hay, C. R., conveyed by the Italia, 43, Capt. C. Hope, and the Polage, 26, Capt. Sir W. Dickson. His Majesty has expressed a desire not to be received in England with the honors paid to crowned heads.

Upon the occasion of the royal christening a covered platform will be erected leading from the Castle, along which the procession will pass to the chapel. It is expected that the whole of the Knights of the Garter will be present in their robes, with the military Knights of Windsor, and the several officers of the order. In the evening there will be a grand banquet in St. George's Hall, and covers will be laid for upwards of 150 of her Majesty's distinguished guests. A magnificent carpet, to be used expressly upon the occasion of the christening, has been ordered for St. George's Hall. It will be studded with various appropriate heraldic devices in keeping with the establishment of this splendid apartment, and in accordance with the Order of Garter. In the centre will be a beautiful representation of St. George and the Dragon. Several of the State Apartments at the Castle, which are usually exhibited to the public, have been ordered to be closed for the purpose of enabling the authorities at the Castle to proceed with the necessary arrangements.

Her Majesty has announced to the proper authorities, that it is her intention to open the ensuing session of Parliament in person, with a speech from the Throne; and it is generally expected, from the alterations and embellishments now going forward in the House of Lords, that the Sovereign will be accompanied on that important and interesting occasion by all the royal and distinguished foreigners invited to witness the christening of the infant Prince of Wales.

EAST INDIA INTELLIGENCE.

The overland mail from India reached London on the 6th Dec. with advices to the following dates:—

Calcutta, 21st Oct. Ceylon, 22d Oct.
Madras, 22d Oct. Bombay, 1st Nov.

We believe there is little doubt that Sir R. Jenkins will be the new governor of Madras.

Mr Lawrence Peel has been appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court at Fort William.

Mr Lyall, son to the Chairman of the East India Company, has been nominated by the Court of Directors to succeed Mr Peel as Advocate-General of Bengal.

We are sorry to announce that Messrs Scott, Fairlie & Co., and Messrs Buggs, Taylor, & Co., have suspended payments.

A Parsee gentleman, Manackjee Cursetjee, who is at present on his way to India via France, Italy, and Egypt, has met with a most flattering reception at Paris. He has had a private audience with his Majesty, and passed an evening with the royal family. He has also had the honour of an interview with the Prime Minister, and been present at several musical soirées.

Advices from Erzerum on the 20th of November in the Leipold Gazette state, that Sir H. V. Neill has been received in a splendid manner at Teheran, and that ten thousand persons came out of the town to meet him. At the gate he was complimented by the Prime Minister of the Shah, and afterwards received a valuable horse from his Majesty. It was said that the Shah was going to undertake an expedition again at the predatory tribes of the Turcomans.

A charter has been obtained from the East India Company for the establishment of a joint stock bank at Madras; and, from the number and respectability of the parties who have embarked in the undertaking, its prosperity is ensured. The chief manager will be a gentleman of influence in the place, and the second a practical banker, who will in the first instance organize the company, and then fill the office of accountant or assistant manager. For these purposes the directors have engaged the services of Mr Dinlop, the manager of the Bary St. Edmund's branch of the East of England Bank, a gentleman whose varied banking experience, sound practical knowledge, high intellectual attainments, and urbanity of manner, eminently qualify him to occupy this important post.

The Dutch naval force in India is to consist of two frigates, two corvettes, four brigs, eight schooners, two large steam-boats, two smaller steamers, and two gun-ships; the total amount of the crews not to exceed 2200 European seamen. This resolution is to be carried into effect as soon as possible, and, at all events, not later than the 1st of July, 1842.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times, writing on the 16th, says that since the commencement of the differences between Great Britain and China, the commercial relations between Russia and the Celestial Empire, through Kinkha, have increased considerably. The manner in which this trade is carried on has given increased confidence in the Chinese. It is added, that the religious mission sent from Russia last winter had met with the most favourable reception at Peking.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The reported retirement of Lord Hill from the Horse Guards does not appear to obtain credit.

The Secretary at War directed the issue of one hundred pounds to each of the officers lately embarked on board the Apollon and Sapphire troop ships for China, in aid of the expense they will respectively incur in providing themselves with a proper outfit. The Land and the Treasury have decided that the money having been advanced from the Chinese authorities at Canton, in order to relieve that city from hostile pressure, in aid of the Crown; and as such, after paying what Her Majesty may be pleased to grant to the foreign employed at Canton, it must be carried to the account of the consolidated fund.

The Lord Tenby, with a large force of E. I. Company's troops, is to sail in a few days.

Maj. Gen. Napier, author of the 'History of the Peninsular War,' is placed on the list of general officers rewarded for distinguished services.

Lieutenant Colonel Knowles, commanding the detachment of Royal Artillery at present serving in China, recently transmitted to this country a complete assortment of Chinese war arms, with specimens of shot and the costume of the soldiers of the Celestial Empire. The whole of these articles, and a figure of a Chinese soldier in his tiger dress, have, within the last few days, been arranged in the Royal Repository at Woolwich, where the public have free admission to witness them and the other curiosities contained in it. The appearance of the arms of the soldiers contrast strangely with the other modern arms of the Repository, and harmonize more with the antique fire-arms deposited in the building. Amongst the articles is a dress which belonged to an officer of high rank, and, although it is rather the worse for wear, it still has the remains of a very elegant, being of a drapery and thickly studded with metallic ornaments, and decorated with embossed figures in silk. This incident, however, is a dress stuffed, to exhibit the costume of the Chinese officers; and altogether, the articles transmitted by Lieutenant Colonel Knowles form a great acquisition to the Repository.

Royal Artillery.—The following officers and men are embarked for China:—Bellevue, Capt. W. Greenwood, Lieut. Anderson, Assist. Surg. S. Parr, and 52 Gunners and n. c. Officers. Sapphire, Lieut. J. N. A. Freese, and 28 Gunners and n. c. Officers. The women and children go out in this ship, Apollon, Lieut. A. C. Young, and 24 Gunners and n. c. Officers.

The following officers are on board the Bellevue:—Lieutenant Colonel Campbell, Capt. Hutton, Lovett, Payn, Hunter, Lieutenants Rimmer, & E. Colby, P. Colby, Adj. Ormsby, Ensign Bridgeman, Steele, Peyton, Surg. Barham, Assist. Surg. Blake, Quartermaster Pagan. There are embarked 694 Privates, 27 Corporals the whole number with the Serjeants and Commissioned officers amount to about 800. Captain M. Gavin has joined the depot.

The following vessels have sailed:—The North Star 26, Capt. Sir J. E. Home, on 17th December; the Harlequin, 16, Com. Henry G. E. Hastings on 10th Dec.; and the Bellevue, 72, Capt. Klingome, the Apollon, 35, Com. Frederick, and the Sapphire, 28, Master Com. C. A. on 21st Dec., for China; and the Dido, 20, Captain H. Kepple, and the Hazard, 18, Com. C. Bell, on the 2nd Jan. The Thalia, 42, Capt. C. Hope, is to follow on the 6th. The Thomas Coates 1400 tons, with stores, has left Deptford for China, and the Sir Robert Peel for the same destination is loading.—H. M. S. Minden, 72, (hospital ship), Capt. M. Quin, has a large party of shipwrights working on board. The whole of her lower deck will be fitted up as an Hospital, and every arrangement will be made to enable the Medical officers to separate the different cases, particularly those of a contagious character. The Medical Staff will consist of about 30 persons, and the provision for the comforts of the sick will be on the most liberal scale.—Dr. John Wilson is to be the Inspector of Hospitals and Fleets in China, and will go out in the Minden. There is to be a Surgeon and about four or six Assistants attached to her.

The following ships have been ordered home:—The Conway, 26, Capt. R. D. Bethune, from China, expected daily; President, 50, Capt. W. Broughton, South America; Waap, 18, Com. Hon. H. A. Murray, Mediterranean; Winchester, 29, Capt. T. W. Carter, West Indies; Racer, 16, T. Harvey, same station; Starling, Com. H. Keller, East Indies; Sulphur, n. Capt. E. Belcher, same; Ganges, 34, Capt. B. Reynolds, Mediterranean; Hastings, 76, Captain J. Lawrence, same; and Implacable, 74, Capt. E. H. Harvey, same.

Antwerp, Dec. 1.—The Symmetry, Butler, from Manila, in coming into the docks, ran aground near the pier, but was got off, and has been brought in apparently without damage.

Boulogne, Dec. 7.—The Musan, Le Liberte, from Manila to London, went on shore near this port late night; crew saved.

Dec 12.—Ship gone to pieces—part of her cargo saved.

SPAIN.

In Madrid there are numerous speculations respecting the probable majority in the Cortes, which it was feared, would not be favourable to the present Cabinet or its favorable not so to Espartero. In either case the Legislature will be dissolved.

Serious difficulties, which will necessitate the sending of several couriers to Paris, have arisen between the Spanish Ministry and the French Ambassador, on the subject of the presentation by the latter of his credentials. The Spanish Government to the Cabinet assert the right of exacting that M. de Salvandy, (the French Ambassador) shall present his credentials to the Regent only, and the instructions of M. de Salvandy are positive to present them only to the Queen, but leaving to her Majesty the discretion to communicate them to the Regent (Espartero,) who will be present. It is said, that if the Spanish Government persist in its pretensions, M. de Salvandy has orders to quit Madrid without presenting his letters of credit. This would be a deplorable result, and would impart vast gravity to that difficulty which at first might have only appeared a matter of etiquette.

The Cortes was opened on the 26th Dec. On reaching the Palace of the Senate, the Queen and the regent were received by the deputations of both houses, and Her Majesty having ascended the throne, the young Infant took her station to her left and the Regent to her right, a degree lower than the throne. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, President of the Council, afterwards presented the Speech to the Queen; who having handed it to the Regent, the latter read it to the assembly.

RUSSIA AND CIRCASSIA.

According to some accounts in the Continental papers, intelligence had been received at Constantinople by way of Trebisond, of a victory gained by the Circassians over the Russians—the most signal and decisive, it is said, that has occurred since the beginning of the war. A large expedition, consisting of 30,000 men, had been disembarked on the coast, with a view of destroying the grain which had been collected by the Circassians after the harvest; when a storm which suddenly arose drove the ships from their anchorage. The Circassians, availing themselves of the opportunity, assailed the intruders fiercely on every side; and the Russians, separated from their stores, which had been carried out to sea, were compelled to commence a disastrous retreat through a country consisting entirely of mountains, forest, and desile. With the exception of 2,000 who escaped to Anapa, the whole of the 30,000 were killed or made prisoners.

TURKEY.

An entire change has taken place in the ministry, Mehmet Ismet Pasha had been appointed President of the new Cabinet. We learn by way of Vienna that the Porte was proceeding with her armaments, and had assumed a threatening attitude towards Greece. The Divan had given orders for assembling 40,000 men in Rumelia, and another corps at Varna, and for marching a body of irregular troops from Albania to Larissa. It is said that the Porte has addressed complaints against the Greek Government to France, England and Russia. It was asserted that France was endeavouring, through Greece, to recover the influence she lost by the treaty of July. In Macedonia, Thessaly, and Candia, the seeds of new disturbances have been sown, and were silently producing their fruit, but not without being observed by the Porte, which having collected an immense mass of troops, was now overruling the danger, either through real apprehension or with the intention of giving free scope to its hatred against Greece, and desire of revenge.

AMERICA.

Lord Ashburton is to proceed immediately on a special mission from this country to America.

We have New York papers to the 15th December. The President's message to Congress is as usual a very lengthy document, going fully into all matters, whether of foreign or domestic policy. However, as respects all questions of international importance, the tone is on the whole conciliatory, and if the feeling manifested by Mr. Tyler be faithfully responded to by Congress, the chances of serious misunderstandings between this country and America, which have been of late so imminent, will be long & extremely remote. We principally allude in the following recommendation contained in the message immediately after some very national congratulations as to the termination of the M'Leod case, the fairness which the government manifested, and the integrity of American juries:—"I cannot fail, however, to suggest to Congress the propriety, and, in some degree, the necessity, of making such provisions by law, as far as they may constitutionally do so, for the removal of their commencement, and at the option of the party, all such cases as may hereafter arise, and which may involve the faithful observance and execution of our international obligations, from the state to the federal judiciary. This Government, by our institutions, is charged with the maintenance of peace and the preservation of amicable relations with the nations of the earth, and ought to possess, without question, all the reasonable and proper means of maintaining the one, and preserving the other. Whilst just confidence is felt in the judiciary of the states, yet this Government ought to be competent in itself for the fulfilment of the high duties which have been devolved upon it under the organic law by the states themselves." Till something like this is adopted, America cannot claim to be recognised as a Government. The President having expressed himself satisfied as to the amount of reparation made for the seizure of Grogan, regrets that in the matter of the Caroline "no such atonement as was due for the public wrong done to the U. States by this invasion of her territory, no wholly irreconcilable with her rights as an independent power, has yet been made." He then enters more at length into the general discussion of the case and concludes thus:—"the correspondence between the two Governments on this subject will, at a future day of your session, be submitted to your consideration; and in the meantime I cannot but indulge the hope that the British Government will see the propriety of renouncing, as a rule of future action, the precedent which has been set in the affair at Schreiber."

With respect to the boundary question, it obtains merely a general notice, whilst "the right of search" is dwelt upon with so much serious earnestness that we feel bound to give the following extract. "However desirous the United States may be for the suppression of the slave trade, they cannot consent to interpolations into the maritime code at the mere will and pleasure of other Governments. We deny the right of any such interpolation to any one, or all the nations of the earth, without our consent. We claim to have a voice in all amendments or alterations of that code, and when we are given to understand, as in this instance, by a foreign Government, that its treaties with other nations cannot be executed without the establishment and enforcement of new principles of maritime police, to be applied without our consent, we must employ a language neither or equivocal import nor susceptible of misconstruction. American citizens prosecuting a lawful commerce in the African seas, under the flag of their country, are not responsible for the abuse or unlawful use of that flag by others; nor can they rightfully, on account of any such alleged abuses, be interrupted, molested, or detained, while pursuing honest voyages, in the usual way, and violating no law themselves, they are unquestionably entitled to indemnity. This Government has manifested its repugnance to the slave trade in a manner which cannot be misunderstood. By its fundamental law it prescribed limits in point of time to its continuance, against its own citizens, who might so far forget the rights of humanity as to engage in that wicked traffic, it has long since, by its municipal laws, denounced the most condign punishment. Many of the States composing this Union had made appeals to the civilized world for its suppression long before the moral sense of other nations had become shocked by the iniquities of the traffic. Whether this Government could now enter into treaties containing mutual stipulations upon this subject this a question for its mature deliberation. Certain is, that if the right to detain American ships on the high seas can be justified on the plea of a necessity for such detention, arising out of the existence of treaties between other nations, the same plea may be extended and enlarged by the new stipulations of new treaties to which the United States may not be a party."

"This Government will not cease to urge upon that of Great Britain full and ample remuneration for all losses, whether arising from detention or otherwise, to which American citizens have heretofore been, or may hereafter be, subjected by the exercise of rights which this Government cannot recognize as legitimate and proper. Nor will I indulge a doubt but that the sense of justice of Great Britain will constrain her to make retribution for any wrong or loss which any American citizen, engaged in the prosecution of lawful commerce, may have experienced at the hands of her cruisers or other public authorities. This Government, at the same time, will relax no effort to prevent its citizens, if there be any so disposed, from prosecuting a traffic so revolting to the feelings of humanity. It seeks to do more than to protect the fair and honest trader from molestation and injury; but while the enterprising mariner engaged in the pursuit of an honorable trade is entitled to its protection, it will visit with condign punishment others of an opposite character."

The message says, "The enumeration has been completed, and exhibits a grand total of 17,069,453, making an increase over their census of 1830 of 4,202,664 inhabitants, and showing a gain in a ratio exceeding 38 per cent. for the last ten years;" and adds, "Independently of the loan of 12,000,000 of dollars, there is a deficit of 697,837.90 dollars between the receipt and expenditure of last year to be provided for by the 1st of January."

To the people of the Union the most interesting portion of this message is that which relates to a new scheme, brought forth under Mr. Tyler's special sanction, for establishing a "fiscal agent," in place of the two measures which he successively vetoed last session. This appears to be a compromise between the Sub Treasury scheme of the Democratic party and the project of their opponents for the restoration of a National Bank. Mr. Tyler proposes to establish a sort of National Bank (not Bank) of issue, charged with the control of the public treasure, and paying out treasury-notes or cash at the option of the public creditor; transacting meanwhile small banking operations, to pay the expenses of the establishment.

Lord Morpeth has been splendidly entertained at New York.

The New York papers notice with strong approval the appointment of Mr. John Quincy Adams to be Chairman of the Committee of Congress on Foreign Relations. In the room of Mr. Cushing. The change is one of considerable importance. Mr. Adams's recent lecture on the China war, in a liberty institution at Boston, would alone suffice to show that he has at least no bigoted hostility to England in his view of existing questions.

Mr. Spencer, the Secretary of War for the United States, had issued his report. He recommends a strengthening of the defences on the Northern and Western frontiers.

Professor Davis, of the University of Virginia, was horribly murdered on the night of the 12th November, by a person who wore a mask, and who had not been discovered for some time; he proved to be a student of the college, and was immediately committed to prison, but released on bail. On the 11th December, his trial was to come on, but he fled from Charlottesville, where he had been remaining, and it was expected, would escape a trial.

At the date of our last accounts Congress was busily engaged with the correspondence between Lord Palmerston and Aberdeen, and Mr. Stevenson, relative to the 'right of search,' the publication of which had afforded a good deal of discussion to the New York papers. The tone assumed by the majority towards this country in reference to the affairs is menacing and belligerent in the extreme.

This correspondence is exceedingly lengthy, extending over upwards of seven columns of the New York papers. The first letter complains of the seizure and detention of many American vessels on the coast of Africa. Lord Palmerston justifies the proceedings, on the ground that an agreement to writing (of which his lordship transmitted a copy to Mr. Stevenson, but which does not appear among the documents) was made between the commander of the British squadron on the coast, and commander Paine, of the United States vessel Grampus, to the effect that the British cruisers might visit suspicious vessels under the American flag and American vessels like vessels under the British flag. The principle laid down by Lord Palmerston and Aberdeen is, that while disclaiming emphatically all right to search or detain American vessels, even though with slaves on board, they have a right to ascertain that vessels hoisting the American flag under suspicious circumstances, are bona fide American. To this Mr. Stevenson replies, that however convenient, expedient, and necessary its exercise may be to enable the British Government to carry out the treaties she had made with other powers for the suppression of the slave trade, treaties to which the United States is not a party, it is one which for reasons connected with higher expediency, and indeed with her existence as an independent nation, America can never acknowledge nor submit to.

TO THE HONORABLE COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS

The Grand Jury for the County of Philadelphia respectfully submit to the Court on their solemn oaths or affirmations, the following statement of their proceedings:

On the twelfth day of November, 1841, a paper containing charges of a criminal nature against certain individuals, and which is hereto annexed, (marked B.) was presented to the Grand Inquest now inquiring for the County of Philadelphia, by a respectable citizen, who pledges himself to make good his charges, and be the prosecutor. An accusation coming in such a shape, the Grand Jury felt it to be an imperative duty to investigate, and accordingly subpoenas were issued for all the persons named as witnesses by the persons making the accusation and for such other who in the course of the examination were found to be cognizant of any material facts, having relation to the charges.

A full and searching enquiry has been instituted, and the deliberate opinion of the Grand Jury is, that certain officers connected with the United States Bank, have been guilty of a gross violation of the laws, colluding together to defraud those stockholders who had trusted their all to be preserved by them. And that there is good ground to warrant a prosecution of such persons for serious offences, which the Grand Jury do now present to the Court, and ask that the Attorney General be directed to send for the action of the Grand Jury bills of indictment against—first Nicholas Biddle, Samuel Jaudon, John Andrews, and others, (to the jury unknown) for entering into a conspiracy to defraud the Stockholders of the United States Bank of the sum or sums of four hundred thousand dollars in the year 1836; and endeavoring to conceal the same by a fraudulent and illegal entry in 1840.

To sustain the above, endorsed Austin Montgomery, Captain Henry Mallory, Henry Horn, as accusers; Moses Kempton, Edward Coles, James L. Newbold, Joshua Lippincott, Jonathan Patterson, Thomas Taylor, and William Drayton, as witnesses.

The Grand Jury on their solemn oaths or affirmations, do further ask that a bill of indictment be sent to them against—second, Nicholas Biddle, Joseph Cowperthwait, Thomas Dunlap and others, (to the jury unknown) for entering into a conspiracy to defraud, &c., the stockholders of the Bank of the United States, during the years 1836, 1837, 1838, 1839, and 1840, by which the Stockholders have been defrauded out of a sum or sums of money exceeding three hundred thousand dollars.

To sustain this bill, endorse the same accusers, as in the first case; as witnesses, Moses Kempton, Edward Coles, James L. Newbold, Joshua Lippincott, Jonathan Patterson, Thomas Taylor, Wm. Drayton, Joseph Cabot, Rodney Fisher, Richard Price and George Hamly.

The Grand Jury, on their solemn oaths and affirmations, do further ask for a bill of indictment against Alexander Lardner, Thomas Dunlap, Richard Price, Lawrence Lewis and George Hurdy, and others, (to the jury unknown), for feloniously, &c., conspiring to cheat and defraud the stockholders of the United States Bank of Pennsylvania, of the sum or sums of about one hundred and thirty thousand dollars, in the year 1840. To sustain this charge, the same accusers as are the others; and as witnesses, as Moses Kempton, Edward Coles, James S. Newbold, Joshua Lippincott, Jonathan Patterson and Thomas Taylor.

The Grand Jury, would also inform the Court that they (the jury) have before them another subject of much importance, and which involves a misdemeanor of the grossest character as committed by a Magistrate of Southwark, whose duty it is to protect the citizens and their property, instead of conniving with burglars and thieves, and taking their money, that they had stolen, and then allowing them to escape justice; and to prey again upon the community. With respect, &c. &c.

T. B. TOWN, Foreman.

Grand Jury Room, Philadelphia, Dec. 10, 1840.

I charge Nicholas Biddle, Joseph Cowperthwait, Thomas Dunlap, Samuel Jaudon, and John Andrews with fraud and theft, in taking and using for their own benefit, and accommodating their friends, the money belonging to the stockholders of the United States Bank, which they were liberally paid to guard and not to abuse.

My proof is the report of the Investigating Committee, made to the stockholders in April, 1841; as to the idea of the above being a breach of trust only, it is not so; it is too idle and insulting to be pretended or entertained for one moment. Away with it, then, and for ever! These men, mere servants, and paid for their services: so are your family do mestics, to whom you give in charge your plate and other valuables; but if they appropriate it or them to themselves, they are unhesitatingly charged with and proceeded against as for theft, and why not N. Biddle and the rest.

AUSTIN MONTGOMERY.

LONDON MARKET.

Tea.—The month opened with considerable dullness, which was augmented by the non-arrival of news from China by the Overland Mail, so that the public sales, consisting of 12,000 packages, went off very heavily; a small proportion only was sold, and prices in most cases were 3d to 4d per pound lower than at the last auctions. Company's Congou flat at 1s 9½d per pound, cash. On 23d Dec. of 11,303 packages offered at public auction, only 4000 sold at some decline on previous prices, the remainder being bought in at former rates. At the sale on 29th Dec. 7,810 packages were offered, of which about 6000 sold; the common and good descriptions of Congou with more firmness, and at rather higher rates; fine hyson owing to the large supply, went off at full 3d per pound less; other kinds at previous market prices. There has been little speculation in Company's Congou, but some parcels have been taken by the trade, and the price is firm at 1s 9d to 9½d per pound, cash. The stock of this description of tea is reduced to about 11,000 chests, &c.

Prices have advanced for Cassia Buds, the stock being scanty. Cassia Lignea is dull of sale, and prices are rather lower; sales of mid. and low mid. have been made at 82s to 81s per cwt.

MANILA HEMP has met with less attention; at auction 360 bales were bought in at 2½s per ton.

January 3d.

Tea.—2,621 chests of Congou were offered by public sale this morning, of which about 1400 chests were sold; good common Congou, at 1s. 10d to 1s. 10½d; blackish leaf, 1s. 11d. These prices are full 4d per lb. higher. Company's Congou, on Change is 10d.

The Tea Trade, Jan. 3.—A new year opening upon us, a few remarks upon the stocks, &c., may not be without use. The stock in London on the 1st of January instant was 29,792,762lb., and in January 1840, 38,331,000lb. The total deliveries in London in the year 1840 were 20,019,000lb. for home consumption, besides 4,682,000lb. sent coastwise, and 1,240,000lb. exported. The deliveries in 1841 were 28,072,831lb. for home consumption, and 10,190,100lb. sent coastwise and exported. This shows an increase of about 8,000,000 lbs. in the consumption last year as far as London alone is concerned. We quote Bohea now at 1s. 6d; Congou, ord. to good ord., at 1s. 9½d to 1s. 9½d; Pekoe, flowered, at 2s 6d to 2s 7d; Pouchong, at 1s 6d to 1s 8d; Nouchong, ord. to good ordinary, at 1s 9½d to 1s 10d, and mid. to good mid. 3s to 3s 6d; flowery Pekoe, 3s to 3 8d; Twankay, good ord. to but mid., 1s 9d to 1s 9½d, and mid. to Hyson kind, 2s to 3s; Hyson, good ord. 2s 3d, and mid. to good mid. 3s to 4s 6d; and Gunpowder, 5s to 2s 2d per lb. At the auction this morning, 2,000 chests of Congou sold briskly at 4d per lb. higher; Company's Congou was 1s 9½d to 1s 9½d per lb. cash. The deliveries last week were 352,343 lb. The stock of Company's Congou is rapidly decreasing. It is now only 11,540 chests. Merchants generally are firm.

SILK.—During the past month there has been a fair demand for all descriptions of Silk, at improved rates, though the arrivals have been tolerably large. In Bengalis, good and fine is in much request, as the late arrivals consist mostly of the middling and ordinary qualities. The late arrivals of China Silk are pretty good in quality. In the Italian market, good fine Silk continues scarce, and the demand has been confined to the middling qualities mostly. A considerable portion of the late unloading of Brussa Silk, though not of so good a quality as was wished, has been sold. In Persians there is very little doing. The arrivals since the 1st December have been as follows:—from Bengal, 891; China, 540.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 23d April, 1842.

By the Mor from Bombay the 16th February the January Overland Mail has arrived, and we have received by her the Overland Mail and Singapore papers to the 24th March from which we have made copious extracts. The intelligence from England is, of not much interest; in France the trial and sentence of M. Dupuy to five years imprisonment, for an alleged implication in the attempt of Quenisset on the life of the Duc d'Angoulême, has created great sensation, and a protest against this unjust and oppressive proceeding, signed by most of the Editors of the leading journals, has been presented to the Chamber of Deputies. The boundary question pending between Great Britain and the United States, is for the present thrown into the shade by the more important discussion concerning the right of search of vessels under American flag, suspected to be engaged in the slave trade, on which subject we find a correspondence between the British ministers for foreign affairs and Mr. Stevenson in the American papers, brought by the Ann Mackim. From Calcutta our dates are to the 21st February per Columbine, and in our extracts will be found the latest intelligence as yet received from Cabul, which we are sorry to see is of so disastrous a nature, as to justify the most gloomy forebodings. Of the whole force at Cabul, with the exception of the officers and their wives detained as hostages, Doctor Brydon was by the last advices, still the only one who had escaped alive, from Jellalabad the tidings are more cheering, there being every prospect of the force there being able to hold out against any enemy that could be brought against it. At Candahar, General Nott engaged and discomfited a large party of the enemy.

There is a report, come from Canton, that Hang-chow-foo has been taken by the English with great slaughter to the Chinese; we know not what credit it may deserve. We also hear that some time last week an attempt was made at Hongkong to blow up the Powder Magazine there.

By the Rose from Chusan the 10th April, we learn that no movements of the British Forces had taken place since the destruction of the Chinese encampments near Tackee; but the Chinese had made attempts at burning the shipping at Chinhee, which we are told proved nearly successful in the instance of the Ernaad transport, the fireships having approached her very near, when some of the crew were sent to tow one out of the way, in endeavoring to do which the fireship blew up, destroying two of the Ernaad's masts. H. M. S. Blonde is said also to have suffered some trifling damage from the blowing up of a fireship, but we have not learnt particulars. Letters mention that Ningpo is at present like a City of the dead; the greater part of its inhabitants have left it, and those that remain are of the worst description; thieves and robbers who break into the deserted houses, helping themselves to all that is valuable and breaking up the furniture for firewood. Letters from Ningpo mention that the town will probably soon be evacuated by H. M. forces, which are likely to proceed by river and canal navigation to some spot on the Yang-tse-kiang in the neighbourhood of Nanking, whence the force may be directed either against that ancient city or against Hang-chow-foo; which town, owing to the winds and strong tides at this season of the year, it would be difficult, or perhaps impossible to approach from the seashore.

After writing the above, we have been kindly favored with the following:—

Extract from the Log of the Brigine "Rosa"
J. M. Metcalf, Commander.

Chinhee, April 5th.—One A.M. preserving appearances of large fires on the River above the shipping, weighed and dropped down intending to anchor below the shipping; the tide sweeping very near to the "Blonds" anchored about three or four ships lengths ahead of her, and cleared ship, with everything prepared for weighing or slipping. 2.10 A.M. heard a heavy explosion about the central ship, followed by groans and exclamations as if from some one in the water. Chief officer immediately went with a boatscrew to the spot, but too late to save the sufferers, he then proceeded further to ascertain the cause of the explosion. Found that several boats connected together, had dropped alongside the Ernaud, transport, one apparently containing a trunk two lascars had entered the boats intending to secure them, when the explosion took place and they perished. Whilst receiving this explanation another raft exploded under the quarter, blowing in the quarter gallery ports, lifting the cutter in her tacks under the davits, and covering the Ernaud with liquid fire, but fortunately no more serious damage to the ship. An officer of the "Blonde" with three of the boats crew who were just along side of the vessel at the moment, were most seriously burnt. Boat returned immediately to "Roza," several more rafts passing within half our length of us, one struck the "Blonde's" minnie under the lower boom, and exploded directly afterwards, together with several in her immediate vicinity. Fortunately without doing further damage. At this time light rain falling which soon increased to heavy showers. All the ships with boats ahead ready to tow the rafts away. Several explosions taking place at the stakes in the mouth of the river, the rafts having driven athwart them. At day break found several of the rafts on shore full of combustibles. Some of them were the common river sampans with a box containing about 50 or 60 lbs. of powder with a match inserted in a tube through the centre of the box, at a calculated time the powder falling through a hole in the tube on the watch. At 8 A.M. weighed and proceeded down the river. By intelligence to the 5th no further attack on Ningpo.

Accounts received from the East coast during the week mention that vessels at Namou and Chinchew are under considerable apprehensions of an attack from the Chinese, from its having become known that the Mandarins have engaged the services of a noted pirate, who is to command 38 war junks, the crew of which beyond their regular number are to be strengthened by about 1000 soldiers, wherewith to attack the English vessels. Capt. Smith, H. M. senior naval officer, commanding at Amoy, on this report becoming known to him, despatched H. M. S. Pyrites to Chinchew to reconnoitre, but it is thought that ship, from the smallness of the squadron at Amoy, will not be able to afford permanent protection to the merchant shipping on the coast of Fokien. Up to the last advices from the coast no hostile movements had taken place.

During the week a great number of papers from New York to 28th December have come to hand (ex Ann Mackim) but they contain little intelligence of interest beyond that brought by the London mail. The all engrossing topic of discussion was the new Fiscal Agent submitted to the Legislature by the President. We copy from a New York paper the indictment presented by the Grand Jury of Philadelphia against N. Biddle and others for having as managers of the U. S. Bank defrauded its stockholders. It was however feared that the indictment would be quashed. U. S. Bank stock is quoted at 34 to 44 per cent. The unredeemed notes of that establishment are at a discount of from 30 to 35 per cent.

We copy from the Register translations of two Imperial Edicts, in one of which the Emperor attempts to excite the valour of his troops by threats of punishment and promises of reward, and for the latter purpose remits to his general Yih king a number of honors to be distributed by him to the most deserving. The Emperor declares this to be a deviation from established custom. From this as well as other edicts it appears that the court has no thoughts yet of peace, and although we have not seen it, we learn that an Imperial Edict has lately arrived here, in which the Emperor breathes nothing but death and destruction against the barbarians, expressing a wish even to taste the flesh of H. M. Plenipotentiary, Admiral Parker, and Sir Hugh Gough, whose skins, (as soon as he has got them) he will stuff for pillows.

The squadron which as we stated last week, consisting of H. M. S. Herald and Cruizer and two Steamers, had gone to the Bogue, in consequence of prevailing reports of preparations having been made to rebuild the fortifications, returned to Hongkong about a week since without having found anything to confirm the truth of such reports. The entering of the Bogue by this force has produced little or no excitement in Canton. The U. S. Frigate Combatant is anchored near Whampoa, and letters from Canton state that she is about to proceed higher up, to the neighborhood of Canton, that Commodore Kearney may with more effect demand satisfaction of the Chinese for the detention and ill treatment of the crew of the Morrison's boat and other injuries inflicted by the Chinese. We give this merely as a report.

We regret much to learn that by the Psyche, lately arrived from the coast, reports have been received that the Ann, Capt. Denham, from Chusan for Macao, was during a gale driven on shore on the northern coast of the Island of Formosa, and the crew taken prisoners by the Chinese, who also took possession of the vessel, whose treasure freight is said to amount to considerably more than 100,000 Dollars. We are fearful for the fate of the crew and of Mr. Robert Gully, a passenger; if nothing worse happens to them, they may at least be detained prisoners for an indefinite time, without their friends having any certain information concerning them, or being in any way able to alleviate their misfortune. Of the crew of their Nerbudda, also lost on Formosa, although it is reported that upwards of a hundred got safe on shore nothing has since been heard.

We hear nothing of interest from Canton, except that the late heavy rains have destroyed a great portion of the repairs of the Dutch Fort. The rains have also treated the new road at Hongkong very unceremoniously; part of the hill above the road near the town, came down the other day, and we regret to learn that three Chinese were buried under it and lost their lives.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Captain W. Warren, R. N., Captain H. Eyres, R. N., Captain C. A. Barlow, R. N., and Captain E. Belcher, R. N., Companions of the most honorable military order of the Bath.—London Gazette, 14th Dec.

We are informed that Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary will leave for the north on about the 8th of next month in H. M. S. Stratheim. Many of those interested are anxious to know what will become of the committee of lands and roads at Hongkong, all the members of which will have to leave at the same time.

The following as important from the quarter whence it comes, we take from the Atlas of Dec. 18
OPINION OF THE EX PRESIDENT JOHN QUINCEY ADAMS ON THE JUSTICE OF THE ENGLISH WAR AGAINST CHINA.

NEW YORK HERALD.—The justice of the cause between the two parties. Which has the righteous cause? You have perhaps been surprised to hear me answer, Britain—Britain has the righteous cause. But to prove it I have been obliged to show that the opium question is not the cause of the war; my demonstration is not yet complete. The cause of the war is the Kotou!—the arrogant and insupportable pretensions of China, that she will hold commercial intercourse with the rest of mankind, not upon terms of equal reciprocity, but upon the insulting and degrading forms of relation between lord and vassal. The melancholy catastrophe with which I am obliged to close, the death of the gallant Napier, was the first fruit of the bitter struggle against that insulting and senseless pretension of China. Might I in the flight of time be permitted again to address you, I should pursue the course of the inquiry through the four questions with which I have begun? But the solution of them all is involved in the germinating element of the first, the justice of the cause. This I have sought in the natural right of man. Whether it may ever be my good fortune to address you again in the disposal of a higher power; but with reference to the last of my four questions—what are the duties of the government and the people of the United States resulting from the existing war between Great Britain and China? I leave to your meditations the last event of that war which the winds have brought to our ears—the ransom of Canton. When we remember the scornful refusal from the gates of Canton, in July, 1834, of Mr. Astell bearing the letter of peace, and friendship from Lord Napier to the Governor of the two Provinces, and the contemptuous refusal to receive the letter itself, and compare it with the ransom of that same city in June, 1841, we trace the whole line of connection between cause and effect. May we not draw from it a salutary lesson—written upon a beam of phosphoric light, of preparation for war and preservation of peace?

From the Friend of China, 14th April.

You will be pleased to signify the same to Sir Hugh Gough, and to inform him likewise, that the zeal, talent and energy he displayed, are duly appreciated by Her Majesty who is no less sensible of the conspicuous gallantry of the troops, and of their admirable order under the most trying circumstances.

By order,

A. S. MOUNTAIN,
Lieut. Colonel Deputy Adjutant General Expeditionary Force.

General Orders by His Excellency Lieutenant General Sir Hugh Gough G. C. B. Commanding the Expeditionary Land Force, Dated Head quarters Ningpo City 10th March 1842.

Lieutenant General Sir Hugh Gough congratulates his brave Comrades in arms on the opportunity which was given to them on the heights of Segwan, of proving to the elite of the Chinese Army, the superiority of Britons both as Soldiers and as men.

Sir Hugh Gough will not here particularize, as the frequency of brilliant deeds in this small but formidable force renders it difficult to vary the expression of his approval, and where all did their duty nobly, the Lieut. General requests all to accept his warmest thanks with the assurance that he will not fail in his despatch to do justice to their gallant and exemplary conduct so creditably displayed as well in the field as in their forbearance towards the peasant, who were in many cases intermingled with the fugitive soldiers.

The Lieutenant General's thanks are equally due to the Battalion of Seamen and marines, and he feels assured that every Officer and Soldier will join with him, in admiration of the spirited advance of a small body of the Battalion upon the fortified Encampment on the hill to the right of the Enemy's position, headed by His Excellency Sir Wm. Parker.

By order,
A. S. H. MOUNTAIN,
Lieut. Colonel Deputy Adjutant General, Expeditionary Force.

TRANSLATION

Regulations for the Imperial army.

The following imperial edict has been received
The discipline of the army is of the utmost importance and the ranks should clearly understand it. Rewards and punishments should be conferred and inflicted with sincerity and impartiality in order to keep the ranks in awe; then the regulations will be self evident. Sincerity being observed in rewards and punishments, then favour and sternness will be equally proportioned. Our family have preserved peace for the last two hundred years, and the officers and troops of each province have been nourished by our favours, and instructed (in military exercises); they have been most thoroughly imbued by our abundant kindness. You have long been engaged (with the English) and you must all, with impetuous courage strive to be foremost, in order to deserve well of your country.

Last year, the army that was put in motion, fought six successive days and nights with the English at Tsinche, and killed in battle innumerable barbarian banditti. As to the rest of the troops that are brought from other provinces, the officers must be capable of clearly instructing them and exciting their ardour. But, why, when about to join battle do they run away; the rebellious barbarians are neither strong nor brave; how, then, are they not to be exterminated? But if (the conduct of the soldiers) arises from the self indulgence and ignorance of the great military officers (in not drilling the troops), which is the cause that the officers and troops are unable to obey orders: if these evils are not quickly guarded against and remedied, how will it be possible to recover pure habits and practices, and to stimulate the heart of the army?

I order the awe inspiring general (Yikking) and the assistant great minister (he) to institute a clear enquiry into the loss of the several cities, and of the officers and soldiers, who advanced and who retreated, and submit them to the severest examination, and then let the military law take its course; allow not the slightest indulgence, but put the convicted criminals to death.

As to those who have deserved well, let them receive exuberant rewards, for the purpose of exciting their ardour and strengthening their courage; and confer degrees of nobility to encourage them to labour: all this rests with the said general and his colleagues, to be managed with sincerity and plainness impartial—justice, to excite to fidelity and righteousness, and instruct (the troops) to be courageous and observe rectitude of conduct; for my anger and of all the people is awakened against the enemy and he must be opposed; thus the cup of the iniquities of the avaricious, crafty, murderous barbarians is full: let the hearts of men think on this, and on heavenly principles, and then what difficulty will there be in utterly exterminating them?

Let this be strictly explained to the ranks—that rewards and punishments will be justly awarded; and that conspicuous merit will be immediately reported. For this special purpose I have forwarded fifty large peacocks feathers; fifty blue do. eighty thumb rings; forty feather rods (lingkwang); ninety small knives; seventy five tobacco purses and flints; sixty buttons of the 6th rank; 80 buttons of the 7th rank; and I order Chookikking and his colleagues, to convey them to the camp, and deliver them to the awe-inspiring general, Yikking, to be respectively received. The officers and soldiers who have been recorded for extraordinary courage, and, moreover, to excite the officers, soldiers and people of all the other provinces.—if there be any who have rushed forward and seized an ensign (flag), not shrinking from the points of the spears and arrows, and have killed an officer of the English rebels,—for these let the said general order out all the (above named) badges of distinction, and liberally bestow them as rewards—and make a statement of the whole affair and duly report it,—each case apart,—for I, the emperor, most assuredly must break thro' limited—or established—rules, and show kindness.

The said general and his colleagues should use both kindness and severity—tempering both—in reviewing and exercising the troops; giving heed to my intense anxiety to tranquillize the borders of the sea.—the coast.—(19th moon, 3d day—January 13, 1842.) By J. S. Ed. C. Rr.

The following imperial edict has been received. Formerly, because Yen Pihsoo (late governor of Fukien), in a detailed report, stated the circumstances of the loss of Amoy; but was apprehensive that the report was not true—and as I could not be always admitting him to an audience, I sent Twanhwa to make a secret examination; it is now authenticated that the said Shelang has reported the facts and the reports generally tally with each other; and in the number of the new troops (reinforcements) (at Amoy) and the marines (water braves—i. e. swimmers and divers), (the reports differ but little). But the said governor has been managing the affairs of Amoy for more than half a year; yet the English no sooner appear than straight way Amoy is lost! and he forthwith retreats upon, and to guard, Tunggun and Shingkeun; he is stupid and weak, without ability, and he cannot avoid the consequences of his crime.

* An ornament for the cap, denoting a certain rank

Now, as Amoy has been retaken, our indulgence shall excuse the severe punishment of his crime; but he is to be degraded three steps and lose his button and rank, but yet be retained in office, and shame may, perhaps, stimulate him to efforts to regain his reputation, when his honours shall be restored.

Now looking at another of his reports, I see he announces that the English have not renewed their attacks: this is nothing but empty prattle and glossing talk; and there is not a word of truth in it.—He should now (have reported) in what manner he had formed his plan of attack and extermination of the (English) places; but no scheme has been devised:—heinous heinous are his incoherent fallacies; this (conduct) really proves he is ungrateful for (imperial) favours, and unfit for office. I order that Yen Pihsoo be forthwith dismissed from the public service. Respect this.

EUROPE.

Overland Mail, 4th January.

The public are generally much disappointed at the abrupt termination of M. E. B. Smith's trial. They had long anticipated the day as one on which important facts would transpire which might serve to guide their operations, but now they find the chance of that information they felt they had a right to obtain, suddenly taken from them, and the whole affair as much enveloped in mystery as on the day when Mr. E. B. Smith was first taken into custody. The Times says, "There can be no doubt that the recent disappointment of the public curiosity has operated prejudicially on the character of the Government. That disappointment may have been inevitable; it may have been morally impossible for the affair to have been with propriety worked in any other way; but not the less certain is it, that the sudden fall of the curtain, and disappearance of the chief performers, without the least disclosure or explanation, has furnished an opportunity for calumnious invention and the spread of scandalous reports which has scarcely ever been equaled."—We have very melancholy accounts of the Niger expedition by the Horatio transport, arrived from Ascension, which she left on the 27th of October, with invalids from the African squadron. She brings sad accounts of the disastrous effects of the climate on the crews composing the Niger expedition, no less than one-third of them having perished, of whom about twenty-two have died. The Seydlitz, on quitting the Niger river, with thirty-six invalids on board, fell in with the Dolphin, and transferred them to that ship. Eight of these died on board the Dolphin; and with the remainder she proceeded to Ascension, where they were put on board the Horatio; and have returned home. The havoc made by the climate on the crews had greatly disheartened the expedition, and it was considered doubtful whether it could proceed. It is somewhat singular that the blacks who went from England with the expedition were the first to fall a prey to sickness on entering the river. The former accounts received from the expedition mentioned that the steamers entered the Niger river on the 13th of August. We now learn that this river is two miles wide, and that it is thought to be the chief of the many mouths of the Niger. The vessels, with the Anden tender, did not do more than about a dozen miles, until the 20th, on which day they did about thirty; the 21st, thirty miles more; the 22d, being Sunday, they rested; the 23d was wasted in looking after the Wilberforce, which had gone up (without Captain Trotter's knowledge) by a different channel. The 24th they did twenty miles; the 25th, twenty-five miles; and on the evening of the 26th they all four arrived at the island of Ebor, 130 miles up the river, according to its course. The river here is about 200 yards wide, and of good depth, the banks, to the water's edge, covered with vegetation, with the cotton, umbrella, palm, bamboo, and many other trees of the kind. The depth of water varies from thirteen fathoms down to very shallow indeed, the current against them going up about two miles an hour. Thus far up the river its width varies from 100 yards to a mile and a half. The next thirty or forty miles, they saw but few huts. The next thirty or forty miles, they passed several villages, then (for some miles) fewer inhabitants again, and latterly none. The town of Ebor is very large, not on the main river, but up a creek. The king went on board the Albert, dressed like a mountebank, red coat, &c. The natives are quite peaceful towards them; indeed, they were fearful of them; they had provided them with vegetables and some bullocks on the day the last letter was dated, viz. the 18th of September. They have very large canoes, carrying forty or fifty men each.

The consumption of flour in the five Metropolitan districts is estimated at 30,000 sacks weekly. The population, according to the last census, is 1,370,727.

Dec. 14.—The members of the London Association have memorialised the Postmaster-general, complaining of delay in the delivery of letters from various parts of the kingdom on the arrival of the overland mails, and asking that letters by the latter may be kept back for delivery by the twopenny post; to which Colonel Maclure has replied, that his lordship regrets he cannot comply with this application, as he should not feel justified in subjecting the important correspondence from India and other parts abroad, which is brought by these mails, to the serious detention which must inevitably result from a compliance with the wishes of the memorialists. The Globe makes a revelation, which is important if true, and the Morning Post copies it without direct contradiction:—"The plan of the Ministry for the future regulation of the import of foreign corn has at length been suffered to transpire; and as it is supposed to have received the sanction of the leaders of the agricultural party, we may presume it will be adopted by them when the Parliament assembles. The sliding scale is retained, but under a modified form, the duty fluctuating only to the extent of 14s. the maximum being 18s. per quarter, and the minimum 4s. per quarter, rising or falling 1s. for every fall or rise of 1s. in the average price of wheat; the pivot being 54s. per quarter, or under, for the highest rate of duty, and 68s. or over, for the lowest rate. The plan also embraces some wholesome regulations for taking the weekly averages, with a view to remedy the trickery which is now practised by interested parties in making their returns of sales and prices. This is a very great improvement upon the system, and it will insure a certain amount of revenue from corn, the average duty being 11s. per quarter, the mean between 4s. and 18s. It is very gratifying to know that a treaty, commenced by the late and concluded by the present government, between England, France, Russia, Austria, and Prussia, for the entire abolition of the trade in slaves, has been signed and ratified.—The four Foreign Powers agreed to adopt the English laws against the slave-trade, which declare the actual engagement in the trade to be piracy, and the embarking of capital in it to be felony. All the Powers mutually grant to each other the right of search into vessels bearing their flag.

Mr. Charles Scott, son of the late Sir Walter Scott, whose death recently took place in Turkey, was in his 30th year. He was of a reserved and diffident temper and disposition, but possessed of considerable intelligence and a fund of quiet humour, which he delighted to exercise among his private friends. He was carefully educated at Oxford, but from his unobtrusive manner and retired habits was little known, and made no exertion beyond his official duties.

FRANCE.

The King of the French opened in person the Session of the Chambers on the 27th Dec., in a speech from the throne. His Majesty having noticed the convention concluded between France, England, Austria, Prussia, Russia, and the Porte, which he considers as consecrating the common intention of the powers to maintain the peace of Europe, and to consolidate the repose of the Ottoman empire, proceeds to direct the attention of the Chambers to the establishment of a balance between the expenditure and the revenues of the state, and to the construction of a national system of railroads, as labours which honour peace, and render it stable and fruitful; assuring them that he is himself at the same time endeavouring, "by negotiations prudently conducted, to extend the commercial relations, and to open new markets for the production of the soil and arts of France." But while economy is recommended, it is accompanied with the proviso that the "military organization" of the country is not to be weakened; and that "the execution of those works which are to increase the national prosperity," as the fortifications of Paris, are not to be deferred. He next compliments the "noble labours" of the troops "in Algeria," which is to be considered "henceforth as for ever French;" and then, in language which nothing could dictate but a spirit equal to any and every emergency, proceeds to notice the disaffection of a party to his person and dynasty, remarking, "Whatever may be the burdens of our situation, France would support them without difficulty if faction did not unceasingly obstruct the course of her powerful activity. I will not dwell upon the intrigues and crimes of the factions, but let us not forget, gentlemen, that it is that which debars our country from fully enjoying all the blessings which Providence has conferred upon it, and which retards the development of that legal and pacific liberty which France has at last achieved, and of which I make it my glory to insure her the possession. We shall follow up this task, gentlemen. My Government will do its duty. It will maintain everywhere and constantly the authority of the laws, and cause them to be respected as it will respect them itself. Your loyal support will aid me."

The king proceeded to the Chambers in a close carriage, drawn by four horses, and attended by four other carriage. Precautions had been taken to prevent the approach of any person within musket-shot of the line of march, except the military on duty; even the terraces of the Tuileries gardens were closed.

On the 28th the Chamber of Deputies gave a great triumph to the ministry. It met to elect its Speaker and appoint its committees. At four o'clock the ballot for the election of President commenced; and at five o'clock the result was announced. M. Sauzet, the Ministerial candidate, obtained 193 votes; M. de Lamartine, the Opposition candidate, 43; M. Odilon Barrot, candidate of the Gauche, 45. M. Sauzet was proclaimed President.

CANADA.

A Court martial has been held by direction of Sir R. Jackson, administering the Government in Canada, and Commander of the Forces, on Mr. Johnson, of Colonel Dyer's Militia, for participation in the capture of Col. Grogan, within the territory of the United States. The prisoner pleaded guilty, and after addressing the Court in mitigation, he was sentenced to be discharged from the corps.

MILITARY.

55th Regt.—The dept has moved from Chatham to Canterbury. It musters 200 s. and f. Capt. Horner, Paymaster Daniell. Lieut. Brooke, and Ens. Lloyd, are on leave. In consequence of there being an officer at the depot, Lieut. Edwards is called in, although he has been only half the usual time allowed for the recruiting service.

Captain Elliot, who recently returned from China, had rather a long interview on Saturday morning with the chancellor of the exchequer at his official residence in Downing street.—Courier. F. of India, Feb 7.

Mr. KENNEDY, the editor of the Hull Advertiser, is going out, we understand, in the employment of government, to Texas, and will, most probably, ultimately have the appointment which the Whig Radicals bestowed on Captain Elliot, of consul in that country. Accompanied by Mr. Kennedy, he sailed from Liverpool on Friday, in the Acadia, royal mail steamer, for the U. S. Hull Packet.—The Atlas.

AFFGHANISTAN.

From the India Gazette, 18th February.

It is with much pleasure that we publish the following authentic intelligence:—

"There are letters from Major Pottinger and Captain G. P. Lawrence, in the Fort Badecabad, in the Lughman country, in January 23d, where they describe themselves as being well treated under the care of Mahomed Akbar Khan. The following names are also mentioned, as those of persons present at the same place: General Elphinstone; Brigadier Shelton; Lieutenant Mackenzie; Captain and Mrs. Anderson and child; Capt. Boyd; Lieut. Eyre; Lieut. Waller; Mrs. Trevor; Lady Sale; Lady Macnaghten; Mrs. Sturt; Mr. and Mrs. Ryley; Mrs. Mainwaring; Sergeant and Mrs. Wade; Captains Troup and Johnson.

"The date from Jullahabad is Jan. 25th. There was no alteration at that post."

The last news from Affghanistan seems to give rather a new coloring to the entire history of the rebellion. Disclosures have been made, which point pretty intelligibly to Shah Soojah, as a party somewhat more nearly connected with the insurgents, than we had hitherto been led to believe. No sooner are the Feringhees expelled from the country, than order is restored, and the chief rebels appointed to the highest offices of the State. Even Mahomed Ukhbar Khan "refers" certain chiefs to His Majesty Shah Soojah-ool-Moolk, and his connection with the "existing Government at Cabul" becomes at once tolerably apparent. If this be true, and we have no reason to doubt its truth, Government have been groping about strangely in the dark of late. Shah Soojah, Mahomed Zeinun, and Ukhbar Khan, seem now to be leagued comfortably together, and the rising was merely against the Feringhees—a religious movement stirred up by Barukzaye and Suddozaye in concert. Time, we doubt not, will unfold some further secrets, and we shall learn then who are our enemies. The Government in this conjuncture, must be sadly puzzled to decide upon whom the "retribution" is to descend.

The following extracts, from a Kurnaul letter, of the 6th inst., give some additional personal items relative to the retreat from Cabul, derived from Jullahabad letters, as well as a few particulars of the state of affairs at that post and at Peshawur.

"Sturt and Hamilton fell in this last march. The former was shot in the pass, but not immediately killed. The men took him up and carried him some distance, but, at length wearied, placed him on a pony—shortly after which he expired.—Pooi Percy Hamilton, when wounded, was placed on a camel, but the troops were obliged to abandon this and the men then carried him some distance, but after a time, tired and obliged to seek individual safety, they wrapped him in a blanket and placed him in some sheltered spot near the road, where he must have shortly died. Brydon also saw Blair and Bogle lying wounded on the road, and expecting death. During the retreat, everything, supplies and all, was abandoned, and our people were reduced to horse flesh. At Jullahabad they are pretty well off for grain, three months they say, but they are anxiously looking out for Wild's arrival. Poor people, they will be dreadfully disappointed.—The Khyber Pass, by all accounts, is now nearly impassable, the roads having been destroyed, rocks thrown down, and trenches cut across the Landi Khanah ghaut road. Wild's wound is said to be a severe one. Tulloch commanded in the last affair. Lock was killed, skirmishing, and cut off from the troops. His body was not recovered.—Captain Col. Campbell, Lieut. J. Phillips, Ensigns F. Rattray and Baron Von Meyern are among the wounded. If Pollock, with the brigades, can't force the Pass, I do not think any troops can. In my opinion, four regiments should be able, if properly managed. Pollock was at Hoormuck on the 28th. He tried forced marches, but the gun bullocks were done up immediately—so much for sending bullock guns instead of horse.

Letters from Jullalabad say, that a troop of Nicol's troop of the name of O'Brien, has deserted to the enemy and been having their guns. Stories are afloat of men of 4th knocking down cavalry troopers, and muzzling their horses to escape on.

Wednesday's dawn brought us a letter from Peshawar, and one or two from the provinces but they do not afford much additional intelligence of affairs beyond the Indus. It appears, that one other straggler—a kitnoudgar in the service of Lieutenant Bazer, of the 5th Cavalry, had reached Jullalabad. A Kurnaul letter mentions, that this man reports that at one time, during the retreat the Horse-Artillerymen fought well—cutting their traces and charging furiously. The same letter says:—We have letters here from Jullalabad of the 24th and 27th ultimo. They had a report there that some chief was conducting the remnants of the Cabul division, by another road, direct to Peshawar. There is a road south of the common one, by which Jullalabad can be avoided, and it is just possible that a chief might be induced to guide them by it so as to avoid the enemy; but I fear the news is much too good to be true. Our Peshawar letter gives the same line of officers, who are in safety, as that already given, but adds the name of Lieutenant Mein of the 13th. "At Khatul" says our correspondent, "are Warburton—Webb—Drummond—Evans—Ayr—Conolly—Dra. Berwick and B. L. four." Major Griffiths and Lieutenant Sauter are in a place called Tuttoo with eleven Europeans. It is stated in this letter of the 29th that letters had just been received in Wild's camp from Jullalabad, saying that Sale's Brigade was "on the march;" but this appears to be a mistake. The Jullalabad force, we learn from another letter, had, on the 27th ult., 40 days provisions and forage for three weeks. At that date they might just have heard of Wild's failure; but we do not think that Sale will quit his post.

CHINESE AND SIKHS.

From the Agra Utkhar of the 31st inst. We learn that Zowawar Singh, the Sikh general, who invaded Fajbar, was killed in an action with the Chinese near Talukhah about a month since; his ears and hands were cut off and sent to Lhasa. The command of the Sikh troops, about 900 in number, devolved on the next in rank, who entered into a treaty with the Chinese to give up their arms, and trust to the mercy of the enemy. The consequence was that they were allowed to die by cold and protracted starvation. Buxee Rain, a Sikh chief, effected his escape through the Gynee pass by which he penetrated to Almookh. The attempt is considered to have been a most extraordinary one, and in it he lost several followers. He himself, with 130 men, has been sent on by the British authorities at Almookh to Lood keonah and 40 more are under medical treatment at the Almookh hospital for various injuries caused by the snow and cold.—Delhi Gazette, February 3.

From the Bombay Times, Feb. 10.

THE "PRECURSOR."—The following extract is from a letter dated London, 4th January:—

"The Precursor is now so far complete, that she will be delivered over to us early in February, and we intend dispatching her on 1st March. The other steamer, intended to run between Calcutta, Bombay, and Suva (belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental company) is rapidly progressing; so that ere long, communication will be every fortnight instead of monthly."

ADDITION TO THE INDIAN ARMY.—The following extract from the Calcutta Government Gazette Extra, indicates the intention of government to make a much more substantial addition to the Indian army than that intimated in the proclamation noticed in our last. There are 74 regular regiments in the Bengal army; a company added to each will be a virtual augmentation of nearly 8000 men. The addition in Bombay will amount to 2,600; that of Madras 5,400, the total augmentation to 16,000 men. This is reckoned an economical method of increasing the army as compared with an increase of the number of regiments. It saves European officers; but it makes a regiment of 1200 strong, a most unyielding mass of men. We are already short of European officers. In fifteen royal regiments now in Bengal, there are 350 officers; in ninety one cavalry and infantry, and ten battalions of artillery—equal to 101 regiments of company's troops, there are 1500 officers; nearly 15 to each queen's regiment and 15 for each one of the company's—or in fact the officers in the queen's as compared with those in the company's regiments, are nearly as 3 to 1.

PORT WILLIAM, 5th Feb. 1842.

No. 32 of 1842.—The right honorable the governor general of India in council has pleased to resolve; that a 5th company of the present strength shall be added to each native infantry regiment of the line, of the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay armies.

The necessary communication has been made to the government of Madras and Bombay, and his excellency the commander in chief in India has been requested to issue such orders as may be necessary for giving effect to this presidency to the resolution of government.

CANTON PRESS.

Macao, 30th April, 1842.

H. M. S. Cambrian 36, Capt. H. D. Chada, C. R. arrived at Hongkong the day before yesterday, from Calcutta 6th March. This fine Frigate arrived in the Hanchy, on the 27th February, having sailed from England on the 7th November, stayed a fortnight at the Cape, and one day at Madras. The new Governor General, Lord Ellenborough landed from her at Calcutta on the 24th February, Lord Ellenborough will find enough to do at his first arrival; the accounts from Cabul are hardly more cheering than the former ones; for, with the exception of one Kitnoudgar, Doctor Brydon is still the only one except the prisoners, who escaped alive to tell the dreadful tale. At Jullalabad however, General Sale, it was hoped, would be able to hold out, until reinforcements have been sent; the partition is represented to be in the best spirits, and to have obtained some advantages over the enemy in several sorties made from the town. In a Calcutta Englishman of 6th March we have seen it stated that the prisoners in the hands of the Afghans are well treated, but very late news from Jullalabad had not reached Peshawar lately, from the passes being in possession of the enemy. Letters from India state it to be Lord Ellenborough's intention to order a large army into Afghanistan, to punish that people for their late acts of treachery and cruelty, and that after a full measure of retribution, that country will be evacuated by the British forces. Such line of policy seems to be in accordance with the best authorities, and while on the one hand, for the safety of the Indian possessions, the Afghan revolt cannot escape condign punishment, on the other, the permanent occupation of a poor country and doubtful subjugation of an impatient people, must entail on the Indian Government an expense far beyond their value.

The troops for China from Calcutta and Madras were about embarking, and we learn, that the new Governor General, when at Madras, in person inspected several vessels destined for conveying the troops. H. M. S. Calliope had left Calcutta for China, and was we understand to touch somewhere on the coast of Borneo, to obtain information on some beds of coal known to exist there, and which may probably be worked with advantage, for the supply of the numerous fleet of steamers which must soon be assembled in these seas. H. M. Brig Childers is we understand also ordered to China. The arrival of Lord Ellenborough seems to have inspired the Bengal Government with new vigour for the prosecution of the China war; on the 2d of March tonnage for China was advertised, to be received until the 5th and it is supposed that a sufficient number of ships will be ready to convey to these shores the much increased force for the campaign contemplated this year. In Madras the ships were ready to take the troops on board, and it is said that reinforcements will likewise be sent from Bombay, and that the Steamers Lord Auckland and Semiramis would leave that port soon for China. We hope that the expediency of sending a number of small Iron Steamers will not be lost sight of, they being after all the craft most useful in the operations about to be commenced against the Celestial Empire.

H. M. S. Pythias has we learn, been despatched by Capt. Smith from Amoy to the coast of Formosa to enquire into the fate of the crew of the Ann, the loss of which vessel on that coast we reported in our last. We observe the Hagler mentions a report of these people as well as the survivors of the Arrow being all sent to some inland place on the Island and well treated. We hope this may be the case, and that the Pythias will be successful in rescuing these unfortunate men from the hands of the Chinese.

A great deal of rain has fallen here during the week, and if the same at Hongkong, we fear it will have caused a temporary interruption to the building, which is now we are told, carried on with great spirit, both by Europeans and Chinese. We learn that the fame of the new freestop is fast spreading over the Eastern, and from a gentleman lately returned from thence we hear that several Fokien merchants had told him that they intended visiting Hongkong with cargoes of Tea.

There is a report, brought by a vessel lately arrived from Amoy that accounts had been received there of the destruction of Ningpo previous to its evacuation by the British forces. This report requires however confirmation.

The Chinese seem at length to have achieved a great improvement in naval architecture. Two frigates have lately been launched, and are now at anchor near Hongqua's folly. These vessels are built after European models, and are said to look well enough with the exception of their stern which does not look shipshape to nautical eyes. They have two masts, and are pierced for 9 guns of a side, and carry four 18 and 32 pounder carronades on the main, and brass guns on the upper deck. Below the gun holes are pierced through the sides for 60 sweeps aside, so that each vessel may be propelled by 120 rowers. Accounts vary whether these two frigates are below or above the others; if the former, they may become dangerous to the shipping at Whampoa, and might deserve the attention of Her Majesty's squadron. As prizes they are not likely to prove very valuable, being probably built of fir. They may possibly be intended to protect the rebuilding of the Bogue forts, for which the authorities at Canton are very anxious, they having received the most positive and peremptory orders from Peking; and they, assisted by the Hong merchants, have for some time past been laying their heads together to devise means how to obey the Emperor; hitherto without success. Some of their expedients seem to be ridiculous enough, if it is true that they have made an indirect offer to release from prison a poor Chinese Christian, if Sir Henry Pottinger could be prevailed on to promise not to obstruct the rebuilding of the Forts.

We copy the following from the Friend of China and Hongkong Gazette.

FALKLAND ISLANDS.

These Islands, the nominal possession of which about a century since involved us in a war with Spain, and obtained for the celebrated Dr. Johnson, a pension from the crown, for the pamphlet he wrote urging their retention and the manifold accruing advantages obtainable from their occupation. These Islands then, after a renewal of the dispute with Buenos Ayres, our brave Government have at last determined to make real colonies of Great Britain, and the lands are now being disposed of in London at the rate of 42s. per acre by the Emigration and Land Commission.

It is very unfortunate that any cotemporary's memory on matters of history should be so very incorrect; a defect which we suspect a course of reading alone can remedy. It is only a few weeks since he made Nelson utter nonsense; and the above, quoted from him, is incorrect in fact. England never went to war on account of the Falkland Islands, and Doctor Johnson, instead of having been paid to write in support of the retention of those islands, wrote a pamphlet defending the ministry for having by able negotiation avoided a war into which the opposition, under Lord North's administration, attempted to precipitate the country. Doctor Johnson, moreover, in his pamphlet, attempts to show the utter worthlessness of those islands. In his time, it is true, they did not produce the large numbers of hogs and cattle with which the Islands are at present stocked, and chiefly on account of which, we suppose, they are now frequently visited, and have again been claimed as belonging to the British crown.

We have, but at too late an hour to avail of it to any great extent, been kindly furnished with the Bombay Times of 19th and 23d February, which contain a great deal of very interesting intelligence on the subject of the war in Afghanistan, for which, in part at least, we hope to be able to make room next week. We now content ourselves with an extract from that paper, taken from the Delhi

Gazette, giving an account differing materially from those formerly received, in the particulars how Sir Wm. Macnaghten and the other officers accompanying him to the interview met with their death. The U. S. Gazette affirms that they know on the very best authority that the Lord Auckland and Semiramis steamers are ordered to be in readiness to proceed to China.

"The following Extract of a letter from the best authority we can possibly have, will be found very interesting, as it contains the real account of the Envoy's murder, and other particulars relating to the state of affairs at Lughman: we have stopped the Press, and displaced matter in our dawn edition for it."

"On the 23d Dec. Sir William, accompanied by Trevor, Lawrence and Mackenzie, went to meet Akbar; they met, and had hardly been seated five minutes, when, at a signal, they were all seized, Lawrence, Mackenzie and Trevor bound to horses and mounted behind Afghanees. Trevor, we afterwards heard, fell off, and was cut to pieces by the Gazees, as was also the poor Envoy who, it seems, resisted mounting a horse. Mackenzie and Lawrence were wonderfully preserved, though the whole host of Gazees cut at them as they passed; being on the same horses as two Chiefs, they were afraid to fire on us."

"More of our army was destroyed in their retreat by the cold, than by the fire of the enemy. The troops had endeavoured to make a stand in an old ruined fort, after doing so till only 30 rounds ammunition remained for each man, they tried to negotiate with the Ghilziees, Mahomed Akbar assisted and asked for Gen. Elphinstone, Shelton and Johnson, to be sent to him; this was done. Towards the evening of next day, the troops from want of water and the loss of their two Chiefs, got impatient, and at night made a rush on the road to Jellalabad."

"The only accounts we have since learnt are, that only one Officer lived to reach Jellalabad: Captain and Mrs. Anderson and Children, Captains Boyd, Eyre, Waller, Mrs. Trevor and Children, Ladies Sale and MacNaghten, Mrs. Sturt, Mr. and Mrs. Byley, Mrs. Mainwaring, Sergeant and Mrs. Wade are with Mahomed Ukbar Khan; they were received with every kindness and attention, and he did every thing to make them comfortable. When at Kabul, Mackenzie who was in a fort which was a Commissariat Depot, most gallantly defended it for 3 days with a handful of men till all the ammunition was expended when he brought off his party into cantonments at night. On the insurrection commencing, Trevor remained with his wife and children for two days protected by the Hazarbash who escorted them all safely to us."

"Skinner and Drummond were concealed by friends in the City. All our misfortunes commenced on the death of the Envoy."

"As several meetings had taken place between the Envoy and the Chiefs, no treachery was suspected when the last meeting was proposed and took place."

Lughman, 23d of January, 1842."

TRANSLATION.

A supplementary report from the office of examiners (or censors).

In the 8th moon of this year (Oct. 15 to Nov. 12, 1841.) we respectfully read the (following) imperial edict.

"Those who possess uncommon talent and extraordinary abilities, and are fit for service against the enemy, are permitted to repair to the cantonments and enter as volunteers; the short and the long—i. e. the cleverest and the less clever—will be indulgently received."

Looking up we note the extreme—or special—purpose of the emperor not to reject either those who excel or are deficient in capacity. In consequence, sometimes ago a native of the province Shantung named Changning came to our office, and presented military plans (map), which we have already respectfully sent up for the emperor's inspection.

Again, Linkwangchen, a native of the province of Ganhung, who has purchased rank, has presented a draft of several stratagems for tranquillizing and causing the barbarians to submit; these, also, we could not conceal from your imperial majesty. But we are apprehensive that when these orders are known to the officers and people, and not clearly examined—or understood—they will think that all their representations must be received, and being received that they must necessarily be reported (to the emperor); and mutually assisting (and borrowing from) each other, they will imitate and exceed (grossly) in their stratagems, and confuse by the multiplicity of their representations; and if there is no discrimination, great annoyance will arise from the numerous statements; these proceedings will be highly indecorous. Your ministers have consulted together and decided, that if any of these statements are again presented at their office,—if they are really of importance to military affairs, they will duly report them, and respectfully await the imperial decision; or if there are any projects for guarding the sea (coast), founded on fidelity and sincerity, brought to our notice, we will order the projectors to report them themselves at the cantonments: thus a liberal encouragement will be given to talented men, and the gradual increase of idle, absurd, and false statements thinking to obtain notice by mere chance, will be prevented. These are our stupid, obscure views, which, whether reasonable or not, we respectfully report. The imperial will has been received. It is recorded.—11th moon, 18th day Dec. 25, 1841.—By J. S., Ed. C.
